Wheeler Reported Opposing Changes in Supreme Court; Senator Clark Fights Plan

New Threats Of Walkouts Now Becloud Labor Front

Miners, Steel Workers May Revive Strife in Wage Fights.

Coal Operators Ask Longer Week

The Labor Situation.

Threats of two more labor disputes developed following settlement of the automobile and West Coast shipping strikes.

The International Policy Committee of the United Mine Workers met here to prepare demands to be presented to the bituminous coal operators in New York next week.

A message to President Roosevelt from three unions on the West Coast carried a threat of another shipping tie-up.

Moving swiftly to resume production, the General Motors Corporation called more than 100,000 employes back to work.

New Strife Threats.

By William V. Nessly.

Threats of two more labor disputes developed yesterday, giving Government officials little surcease from labor trouble worries following settlement of the automobile and West Coast shipping strikes. A third new conflict, further in the future, also was projected.

The international policy committee of the United Mine Workers opened sessions here yesterday for the purpose of determining demands to be presented to the bituminous coal operators in New York next week. The meeting will continue over the week-end.

A message to President Roosevelt from three ship unions on the West Coast carried a threat of another shipping tie-up on the Pacific in the unions' fight on issuance of continuous discharge books under the Copeland safety-at-sea act.

At the same time Philip Murray, who has been in charge of the campaign to organize steel workers for John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, announced a meeting in Pittsburgh next month at which demands on the steel companies will be formulated.

Lewis Ill at Detroit.

The mine union meeting yesterday was presided over by Murray in the absence of Lewis, who is slightly ill in a hotel at Detroit, where he participated in peace negotiations in the auto strike.

Discussion of the proposals for a new contract to replace the one expiring March 31, was left yesterday to the district presidents of the union, who will consider wage and hour resolutions from hundreds of local unions. The district presidents are expected to appoint James Marks, of Pennsylvania, and Frank Wilson, of Iowa, to draft the demands. These two will report to the presidents tomorrow and the presidents will report to the full policy committee on Monday.

The general expectation is that the union's demands will center on reduction of the work week from 35 to 30 hours with a 15 per cent pay boost, which would bring the miners approximately the same pay as at present for five hours less of work weekly. The present agreement calls for a basic daily wage of $5.50 in the North and $5.10 in the Southern fields.

The operators some weeks ago notified the union they would insist on increasing the work week to 40 hours with no change in pay.

Assessment Levies.

To prepare against any extensive lay-off in case of a deadlock, the union has recently levied a special $1,000,000 assessment on the members, taken from their January and February pay.

Receipt of the ship unions' message to the President was followed by a conference at the White House between Secretary of Labor Perkins and Secretary of Commerce Roper. The conference, held in the Senate Defied by Pinkerton; Contempt Action Considered

Copyright by the Associated Press.

Robert Pinkerton, president of the private detective agency that bears his name, seemed perplexed when Civil Liberties Committee yesterday demanded that he turn over to the inquiry confidential reports on investigative work done for General Motors. Bruce Bromley, Pinkerton attorney (insert), said disclosure of agency's undercover men in the reports might lead to "violence and even murder."

Head of Agency Refuses to Reveal Names of Agents Working in General Motors Strike-Bound Factories.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee considered last night advisability of starting contempt proceedings against Robert Pinkerton, chief of the Pinkerton National Detective Agency.

Pinkerton refused to reveal names of "secret operatives" in General Motors Corporation plants during the recent sit-down strike.

The smartly-dressed young executive bluntly defied an order of Chairman La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, on grounds disclosure of his operatives' identity "might lead to violence or even murder."

La Follette, in demanding the names, had charged testimony of Pinkerton officials in the two-week hearing had been "reluctant and evasive."

The agency has "made it a practice to destroy its records at frequent intervals," the Senator asserted, and documents turned over to the Senate have been "wholly misleading" and "scanty in the extreme."

Pinkerton, who only recently left Harvard University to head his family's detective firm, acted on the advice of his attorney, Bruce Brom-

Missing Cashier Is in Chicago, Police Believe

Search Pressed; Maryland Bank President Reveals 'Apparent Shortage.'

Police last night said they had a definite clew to the whereabouts of William E. Seipp, missing cashier of the County Trust Co., of Upper Marlboro, Md.

Their search for the official was pressed after discovery of an "apparent shortage" in the trust fund accounts.

It was revealed by reputable sources, however, that the apparent discrepancies in the bank's accounts amounted to a shortage of $15,000 to $20,000.

Mrs. Seipp has left her home in Upper Marlboro, and is staying, with her three children, in Baltimore with her brother, who is a priest.

The Department of Justice, Washington and Baltimore police have been requested by Prince Georges County authorities to assist them in locating the missing cashier.

All employes of the bank are bonded and deposits are insured under the Federal deposit insurance act.

Seipp, 42, cashier at the bank for 15 years, disappeared Monday afternoon, a few minutes after examiners had arrived to make their periodic check-up of the accounts.

Mgr. Corrigan Is Received; Coronation Anniversary Celebrated Here.

As the fifteenth anniversary of his coronation was being celebrated here, Pope Pius XI yesterday received Mgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, and gave his blessing to the establishment of two new schools at the university.

Pope Pius, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Rome, was almost free of the pain that marked his long illness, and granted Mgr. Corrigan a 15-minute interview. Mgr. Corrigan, who also has been ill in Rome, outlined Catholic University's plans for the two new schools, one to be devoted to a study of social securit and the other to exposition of the Catholic position in learning and culture.

Blesses University.

Pope Pius heartily approved the program and, through Mgr. Corrigan, sent his apostolic blessing to the university, the faculty and students.

Mgr. Corrigan said he found the 80-year-old pontiff looking as well as when he saw him several years ago. His voice, he said, was strong. Leaving the Vatican, the Catholic University rector said he planned to go to Milan University to study problems of social security in Italy.

Fifteen years ago yesterday, Achille Ratti, Cardinal Archbishop of Milan, formally assumed the spiritual leadership of 331,000,000 Catholics throughout the world.

Lack of Steel Halts Navy's Shipbuilding

40-Hour Week Regulation Blamed; Jobs of 45,347 Periled.

By Sidney Olson.

The United States Navy, unable to get steel for its vast shipbuilding program, was forced to halt work yesterday on at least six submarines and three destroyers, endangering the jobs of 45,347 workers in nine Navy yards.

An Associated Press dispatch from Norfolk, Va. reported also that work had stopped in the Norfolk Navy Yard on two other destroyers, the Rowan and the Stack, but the Navy Department here last night refused to confirm the report.

Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady continued efforts to solve the impasse between the great steel companies, adamant in their united refusal to bid under the Walsh-Healey act, and labor leaders, equally firm in their insistence no exemption from the act be granted the steel industry.

McGrady Calls Parley.

McGrady has arranged a conference for 10 o'clock Monday morning among labor representatives from the Committee for Industrial Organization, and the American Federation of Labor; Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, and representatives of the steel companies.

The Navy, faced with stoppage of half its gigantic warship program, which contemplates keel-laying of two $50,000,000 battleships during the year, has been unable to get valid bids on 25,000,000 pounds of steel that are needed now.

While the steel industry has not made a public statement of its position, Government officials, particularly in the Navy Department, say the Walsh-Healey act, requiring minimum wage and maximum hour compliances, is the basis of the unwillingness of the steel manufacturers to bid. They are understood to balk at the required 40-hour week, as the industry is geared to a 48-hour minimum.

Profits Are Limited.

While steel companies are reluctant to bid on Government work for other reasons, particularly the Trammell-Vinson act which limits profits to 10 per cent, and the fact that capacity private business is now being enjoyed by the industry, the Navy is in a "nearly desperate situation," official sources indicated.

The Secretary of Labor, Frances Perkins, is empowered under the Walsh-Healey act to grant "exemptions" to compliance with its labor conditions in cases of "emergency," needs in the Departments. Secretary Perkins thus far has indicated reluctance to grant such exemptions, and Department officials point out that since the law has been in effect only two such exemptions have been granted, both temporary.

Labor Fights Move.

Labor leaders hold that since the law has been strictly enforced on small industries such as pants-makers and shoemakers, it would be distinctly unfair to relax its provisions in the case of a giant industry such as steel.

High Labor Department officials said last night only two solutions to Sea Burial Closes Story of Stowaway Seeking U.S.Career

Hoboken, N. J., Feb. 12 (AP).—Far away in Czechoslovakia, America beckoned to David Berger, young, 6 foot 2, and 280 pounds of bone and muscle.

He worked and saved, but never could get enough for steam passage.

Somehow he got to Antwerp, arriving with $15 in American money. He paid some one on a dock to turn his back while he slipped into a coal bunker of a ship bound for the land of promise.

Stowaway crushed by shifting coal in bunker—tapped S. O. S. with coin on chute—dug out unconscious, coin still in his hand—buried at sea.

Spoons Free Captives.

Sao Paulo, Brazil, Feb. 12 (AP).—Soup spoons spelled escape for 16 political prisoners from jail today—they dug a 30-foot tunnel with them.

Method of Passing On Cases Revealed

Reviews Granted When Favored by 4 of 9 on Bench.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Copyright, 1937, by The Washington Post.

Contrary to apparent public misconception, even among some members of the bar, all justices of the Supreme Court pass on each petition for the court to take jurisdiction of appeals and such petitions are granted whenever four members of the court—one less than a majority—so desire.

This was learned yesterday by The Washington Post in a survey into the manner in which the Supreme Court functions. In the current controversy over President Roosevelt's plan for revamping the Supreme Court and Federal Judiciary, it is a significant and important fact.

It means that unless the practice followed in the Supreme Court from days prior to the Civil War is abandoned, or unless the nature of this court is substantially changed, an increase in the membership of the court to 15 members, which is possible under the President's plan, would not in any way accelerate its handling of cases or obtain greater consideration for matters coming before it.

No Saving in Time.

It would take 15 members of the court as long, if not longer, to examine individually each of the petitions for jurisdiction as it now takes the nine members. Passing on these petitions is one of the major tasks of the court. This aspect of the controversy has received little attention, perhaps chiefly because even many members of the bar, including some Government lawyers, are unaware of the way in which the court functions.

The court's method of handling petitions to the court to assume jurisdiction of appeals was described in some detail in the spring of 1934 by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes in an address to the American Law Institute. It is understood the procedure which he described on that occasion remains unchanged.

Docket not Congested.

Revelation of this fact in the present controversy is important, not only because it demonstrates 15 justices could not handle the court's work faster than 9 justices, but also because it has a direct bearing on the question whether the Supreme Court docket is congested and whether that tribunal is serving the ends of justice.

For instance, Administration spokesmen yesterday conceded that on the face of the record it is not true to say that the Supreme Court docket is now congested. But they contended that the only reason why it is not congested, as it was prior

Mayor of Orange Found Seriously Wounded in Home

Orange, Va., Feb. 12 (AP).—Dr. Frank B. Perry, 83-year-old mayor of Orange, was found seriously wounded here tonight in the bedroom of his home.

He was unconscious, his left eye pierced by a bullet, when discovered by his family. He was taken to the University Hospital at Charlottesville.

Perry had been active and in good health. He had served as mayor since 1922 and recently retired from active practice of dentistry. He is a director in the National Bank of Orange, a life-long resident of this community and a leader in its civic affairs.

248-Ton Vessel, Struck by Whale, Reported Sinking

London, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—A Norwegian whaling ship tonight was reported sinking after being attacked by a whale. Lloyds reported the whale attacked the 248-ton vessel, belonging to the Kosmos Whaling Co., tore off a propellor and ripped a hole in the hull. The crew escaped to a factory ship accompanying the whaler.

Widow of 'Casey Jones' Insists Her Mate Lived

New York, Feb. 12 (AP).—Mrs. Janie Brady Jones, widowed 40 years ago by the railroad accident which inspired the ballad "Casey Jones," came East today from Jackson, Tenn., to convince a doubting world that her husband was no legend, but a real man.

"People say there just wasn't ever such a man," she complained. "They sing 'Casey Jones,' but when I tell them there really was such a man, and that I am his widow, they don't believe a word of it."

Federal Judge Otis Disputes Need for Increasing Jurists

Cummings' Report, Showing Sharp Decrease in Number of Judiciary Cases in Recent Years, Is Cited Against Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Feb. 12.—Federal Judge Merrill E. Otis drew today from Attorney General Cummings' annual report to dispute the necessity for additional Supreme Court and lower court judges, recommended by President Roosevelt.

(The discrepancy between Attorney General Cummings' letter and his and Solicitor General Reed's reports which Judge Otis cites in his speech, entitled, "Camouflage," was noted by Franklyn Waltman in a special story in The Post last Sunday.—Editor's note.)

Otis, appointee of the late President Coolidge, told the Kansas City Real Estate Board that February 5, the day Roosevelt submitted his recommendations to Congress, "hereafter may be celebrated as the anniversary of the beginning of the end."

He quoted from the President's message to Congress:

"'A letter from the Attorney General * * * justifies by statistics the common impression * * * and proves the need for additional judges. * * * The Supreme Court is laboring under a heavy burden. * * *'"

Judge Otis asked:

"Did you notice that sentence: 'A letter from the Attorney General * * * proves the need for

Federal Wage Study Planned By Roosevelt

Budget Head Asks Delay on Pay Revision Bills Pending Survey.

A disclosure that the President plans shortly to propose changes in the classification, pay scales and retirement system of Government employes was made yesterday by the Budget Bureau in a letter to the Senate Civil Service Committee.

Reporting on the McCarran bill to raise the salaries of Government workers earning less than $3,000, Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director, advised delay until the Administration study is completed.

"A study of the general subject of classification, compensation, and retirement of Government employes now is being made," Bell said, "with a view to making a report to the present Congress, embodying recommendations for enactment of legislation in the interest of improving personnel conditions.

Delay Urged.

"In these circumstances, I feel that action on this bill, and any other bill of like character and import, should be deferred while this study is under way and until the President makes a report to Congress on the subject."

Senator Bulow, chairman of the committee, indicated that the recommendation will be followed.

Bell's letter was the first official intimation that such a broad study of governmental personnel was being made.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, following a recent visit to the White House in behalf of his pay bill, stated that a general revision of the civil services laws to make for greater efficiency among employes was needed.

It now appears likely that the Administration will make recommendations along this line while at the same time proposing higher pay for certain classes of workers.

The McCarran bill consequently will be absorbed by the general legislative recommendations to be made by the President, and even these may become a part of the general government reorganization plan now before Congress.

Guard Is Doubled For Quintuplets

Toronto, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—Ontario police were reported tonight to have doubled the guard around the home of the Dionne quintuplets at Callander.

They acted, it was said, after a bus traveler told officers at Long Branch, Ontario, that he had heard two foreign-looking men discussing kidnaping two of the five girls.

Neither government officials nor provincial police at Toronto would confirm the report they were investigating the story. Premier Mitchell Hepburn admitted he had heard the rumor, adding that "police are fully aware of the situation."

Landon Scores Partisanship In Grave Issues

National Crisis Is Cited, Supreme Court Shunned in Brief Talk.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 12.—Former Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas said tonight national issues in which "the whole future of our country is involved" had been raised of late, and added they should be treated without partisanship.

He did not specifically say, in a speech prepared for delivery before the National Republican Club here, to what he referred, but his remarks generally were interpreted as directed at President Roosevelt's proposal to change the Supreme Court.

Yesterday, discussing the speech then in preparation, Landon had said that it "certainly would" touch on the future of the Supreme Court and that the original draft was being revised for that purpose.

It was an address of scarcely more than 500 words, perhaps the shortest ever delivered by the 1936 Republican Presidential candidate since he became a national figure.

"When I accepted the invitation to come to this meeting (a Lincoln Day dinner)," he said, "I planned to make a few informal remarks to you as a Republican talking to fellow Republicans."

"Since then events have occurred in our national life which make it out of place for me to talk on a party basis. The issues raised are greater than any party. They concern the whole of us.

Need Lincoln's Faith.

"They are worthy of unhurried deliberation by Congress. They will not wisely yield to partisan discussion either within or without the Congress. The whole future of our country is involved."

"Upon these issues I have strong convictions, but I shall not avail myself of this occasion to discuss them further."

Landon's omission in his prepared text of any direct reference to President Roosevelt's judiciary plans occasioned some surprise among observers, as did the unexpected brevity of the speech. His tribute to Lincoln was, in part, as follows:

"It is always well to remember those simple and fundamental qualities which made Lincoln a moral force—which enabled him to lead the Nation through some of its darkest days. He possessed humility. He believed in the combined wisdom of the people. He had abiding spiritual faith.

"Lincoln knew toil with scant return. He knew cold and hardship. He knew want and hunger. * * *

"Those experiences gave him a true humility—for no man can strive with, and know, the great forces of Nature without being humble.

"Those experiences gave him an honesty which was a part of his very bone and muscle. He well and fully earned that name of highest tribute—Honest Abe.

"Lincoln was great in character, in the integrity of his civic virtue, in righteous conviction, in his strength to live his beliefs. But underlying all these traits was a deep spiritual faith. Men today need such faith. Without it there can be no enduring security for this or any nation."

Colored Midshipman, Failing In Studies, Is Asked to Resign

The first colored student to be admitted to the Naval Academy since 1874, James Lee Johnson, jr., of 1737 S street northwest, yesterday was asked to resign from Annapolis after having failed in two midyear examinations.

His name, along with those of 135 other midshipmen who had likewise been found deficient in studies, was submitted to President Roosevelt for dismissal from the service. Late last night the President had not acted upon the recommendations of the Annapolis faculty.

Johnson, appointed to the Academy last summer by Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, colored, of Chicago, was reported in good scholastic standing at Christmas time. He was given full Christmas vacation, although the Academy usually shortens the leave of deficient students. Johnson also took full part in the Inaugural Parade here January 20.

Representative Mitchell last night refused to comment on the dismissal, waiting reports from the White

Missouri Senator Says 'Sack of High Bench Is Involved.'

Frazier Registers Vigorous Protest

Montanan Cancels Plan to Issue Statement on Views.

Read the "inside story" of the formulation of President Roosevelt's court plan in "Politics and People" by Franklyn Waltman—Page 2.

By Robert C. Albright.

A new liberal break from the President's court program yesterday strengthened the Senate's opposition alignment, as the Administration's formulation of the sweeping change was candidly traced back to Supreme Court invalidation of NRA.

Reported hostility of Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Montana Democrat, and liberal supporter of previous New Deal legislation, coincided yesterday with a statement by Senator Bennett Champ Clark, Missouri Democrat, that "the sack of the Supreme Court" is involved.

Wheeler, who told colleagues he is irrevocably opposed, canceled at the last minute plans for a public statement, but was understood to be holding to his views. But another Senate liberal, Senator Lynn J. Frazier, North Dakota independent Republican, registered stout opposition.

Previously, condemnation by Senator William E. Borah, Idaho Progressive, and Senator Hiram Johnson, California's Roosevelt Republican, had pointed a sharp liberal trend against the plan, strengthened Thursday when Senator George W. Norris, Nebraska independent, saw "danger" in the President's proposals.

Nye May Oppose Plan.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, another independent said to be leaning toward Borah's viewpoint, said he will have a public statement Monday. Norris, and Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr., (Progressive), Wisconsin, might ultimately be expected to vote for the plan, it was indicated.

In reliable quarters it was reported emissaries from the White House have been active at the Capitol, and some Senators, hitherto noncommittal but ready at last to air their views, have been asked to "wait."

Wheeler's opposition, when and if it is formally announced, would be one of the most damaging reverses the Administration's court plan has suffered, as the Montanan, with the aid of Thomas Corcoran and Ben Cohen, Government attorneys, was instrumental in formulating and obtaining congressional approval of the New Deal's public utility holding company act, now tied up in the courts.

Senator Clark's statement yesterday marked another break in the diminishing "non-committal" list of Senators who have been steadily swelling the ranks of the Senate opposition, to a point where organized opponents claim 43 votes "certain." Veteran parliamentarians said even less than that number, if they held out, would be sufficient to block action.

Attacked by Clark.

Senator Clark, son of the famous late Speaker, Champ Clark, and author of the Democratic convention resolution abolishing the two-thirds convention rule, said the plan "amounts essentially to abolishing the Supreme Court of the United States as it has existed since the foundation of the Republic."

The Missourian said it would set up "a new tribunal in its stead, with reference to a particular situation and with reference to particular litigation which has recently been or may in the near future be pending before the court."

Clark said he would "have an entirely open mind on the subject, with the inclination to agree," if the proposal to increase the court were one of permanent public policy to be decided upon its merits and to be put into effect gradually or at some date in the future.

"But the conclusion is inescapable," Clark said, "that to increase the court at one time by the increase of an additional two-thirds of its present membership is to 'pack' the court with reference to a particular situation and particular litigation now pending or to be immediately pending before it.

"Setting a Precedent."

"It is not only changing the rules while the game is in progress. It is setting a precedent for the changing of our system of co-ordi-

Guests Wear Gas Masks at Wimbledon Tea, Hear Experts Explain Their Use in Wartime

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, Feb. 12. Housewife guests at a "gas mask" reception given by Mayor J. S. Holland Abbott and his daughter, Mrs. G. Farquharson, were supplied with a household hint today by Wing Commander A. E. Steele-Perkins.

Set aside a room of each home to be hermetically sealed for protection from war-time gas attacks, he counseled.

The commander, principal speaker at the townhall tea, complimented the women of Wimbledon on being first in anti-gas precautions as they are in tennis.

Ambulance men and Red Cross nurses served respirators with the tea and cakes and explained at each table how the masks function. The goggle-eyed implements were a jarring note in the setting of soft lights and sweet music.

"Oh, they smell! I think I would rather have gas."

Commander Steele-Perkins, to reinforce his advice on having an hermetically sealed room in each home, said gas masks for children have not yet been perfected. They find difficulty breathing through masks of the present type, he explained.

Mrs. Farquharson arranged the party to further government efforts to popularize anti-gas precautions.

Wimbledon's famous tennis courts were included in the borough's plans for gas defense. They will be an emergency ambulance depot and club rooms will be convertible into a clearing station for gas victims.

Bedford, Eng., Feb. 12 (AP).—Bombers roared through the night while special traffic picked its way along darkened streets in the hours before dawn today in a secret test of British air raid precautions.

Age Pensions Test Is Heard By U. S. Court

Levy Is 'Regulation of Terms of Employment,' Plaintiff Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Feb. 12.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals had under considerattion tonight the first test case to come before it of the old-age pension section of the Social Security Act.

The three justices heard Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, plead that only by taking the "cruelty and inhumanity" out of an industrial age could the present "system" be preserved.

They heard white-haired Edward F. McClennen, counsel for a stockholder in a public utility, argue that the tax for an old-age pension was unconstitutional. He contended that if the tax was intended for general revenue it was "arbitrary, capricious and nonuniform," and if it was intended for a pension, it was "not a tax at all," but a "regulation of the terms of employment."

McClennen represented George P. Davis, stockholder in the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston, who recently lost a petition in the District Court for an injunction to prevent the company from paying the old-age insurance levy.

Jackson challenged Davis' standing in court, asserting McClennen's client was not appearing as a taxpayer.

"He is here as a stockholder," said Jackson. "The tax is not against him."

In his argument McClennen said the tax was a cause of unrest among employes. Jackson declared there was no evidence of objection by workers.

Mrs. Meyer Speaks At Meeting Today

In support of the President's program for civil service reform, an address on "A New American Career" will be made by Mrs. Eugene Meyer before a national convention of the Pan-Hellenic Society at the Mayflower Hotel ballroom today. The address will be broadcast over the Red Network of N. B. C. from 2:30 to 3 o'clock (Eastern standard time).

The various Greek letter societies which belong to this group have notified their local branches throughout the country to take part in the meeting by listening to the address.

Mrs. Meyer will make a plea to Congress to pass the civil service reform measure proposed by the President, because of the stimulating influence it would have upon the young people of the country if at this moment of difficult adjustment they should suddenly see a new and honorable career open up before them.

Mrs. Meyer also will outline a number of important educational implications which the legislators must consider if a maximum benefit to the country is to be derived from the new civil service organization.

War Danger Over, Says Dr. Goebbels

Berlin, Feb. 12 (AP).—There will be no war in Europe, Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Minister of Propaganda, declared before a mass meeting of 20,000 persons tonight.

Until recently there was danger of war, he continued, but it has passed since Germany successfully rearmed.

"We will attack no one," the Propaganda Minister asserted, "and believe me, I do not think that anyone any longer plays with the idea of attacking us. There would be too much risk involved in such an attack."

Nazis Jail N. Y. Man As Narcotic Smuggler

Hamburg, Germany, Feb. 12 (AP).—August del Gracio, of New York, was convicted today of being a member of an international ring of narcotic smugglers, fined $4,000 and sentenced to two months in a Nazi jail.

Del Gracio denied the charge, but a German court found him guilty of being a partner in what was described as "one of the biggest narcotic smuggling rings in German police history."

Baltimore Musicians Call Symphony Strike

Baltimore, Feb. 12 (AP).—The Baltimore Music Union protested today the dropping of four members from the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra by calling a strike against the orchestra.

The union's board of directors notified its members to "refrain from offering to perform and refuse to accept employment in the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra" until Frederick R. Huber, municipal director of music, reinstated the four musicians.

Baltimore Child Bride And Husband Reunited

Baltimore, Feb. 12 (AP).—The grand jury reunited Baltimore's child bride and her husband today after dismissing perjury charges against Joseph I. Falice for his statement of the 13-year-old girl's age.

Police court testimony showed that Falice had given the age of Miss Eleanor Hands as 18 in obtaining a marriage license Tuesday. Falice is 22.

Hostile Public Reaction to Court Plan Causes Administration to Shift Strategy.

By Franklyn Waltman

So hostile has been the public reaction to President Roosevelt's scheme for naming six new judges to the Supreme Court that the Administration has decided on a sharp shift in strategy. In the first place, the Administration is discouraging any immediate action on that program, hoping that the current clamor against it will die down and lessen the pressure on members of Congress.

WALTMAN.

More important, however, was the indication from a high quarter that the subterfuge about congestion of court dockets—propounded by the President at great length in his message to Congress as the justification for giving him power to name additional judges for each Federal judge beyond 70 years of age—would be abandoned and that instead the battle would be pitched on the fundamental issue of whether the membership of the Supreme Court should be changed to make it amenable to the President's will.

This was indicated clearly by the revelation that the Supreme Court's unanimous NRA decision and its divided adverse opinions on other New Deal legislation gave rise to the present plan. The contention that the plan was inspired as a remedy for court congestion has been fairly well riddled by an exposition of the facts regarding the conditions of court dockets—especially that of the Supreme Court—and the relationship of aged jurists to such congestion as exists.

Apparently unable to persuade the country to swallow the President's plan with the court-congestion sugar-coating on it, the Administration has decided to argue the matter on the question whether the Supreme Court should be permitted to get away with declaring unconstitutional New Deal enactments.

There have been all kinds of erroneous stories and reports as to the origin of the President's program and why he sent it to Congress at the time he did. In view of certain revelations in a high quarter yesterday, along with a number of related and previously known facts, what might be called the "inside story" of this legislation can be pieced together.

It did not originate with Prof. Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard Law School. It is doubtful whether he knew anything about it until he read the President's message to Congress in the newspapers. In view of his writings in the Harvard Law Review it is even more doubtful that he would approve the plan as it relates to the Supreme Court.

Nor did the plan originate with Thomas G. Corcoran, the youthful RFC lawyer. It did not originate with Benjamin V. Cohen, the PWA lawyer. It did not originate with any of the so-called New Deal brain trust. If they were consulted it was long after the President had determined to lay his plan before Congress.

The plan was conceived by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings. He was designated by the President immediately after the election to canvass proposals for dealing with the impasse between the Supreme Court and the New Deal. The Attorney General and Solicitor General Stanley F. Reed worked at this task for almost two months, finally centering on the program now before Congress.

The President gave his final approval in the latter part of December. Thus he had this proposal definitely in mind when he told Congress on January 6 that "there is little fault to be found with the Constitution of the United States as it stands today" and that "the vital need is not an alteration of our fundamental law, but an increasingly enlightened view with reference to it."

He had this proposal specifically and definitely in mind when on that occasion he said that "it is not to be assumed that there will be prolonged failure to bring legislative and judicial action into closer harmony," and that "means must be found to adapt our legal forms and our judicial interpretation to the actual present national needs of the largest progressive democrary in the modern world."

Even as the President was speaking to Congress, trusted attaches of the Justice Department were engaged in drafting the bill which Mr. Roosevelt a month later sent to Capitol Hill. Many drafts and revisions of this bill were made before the final form was adopted. Other attaches were engaged in extensive historical research work searching out precedents for the proposal.

The Attorney General's letter was ready quite some time before it was sent to Congress. Incidentally, many persons have remarked on the similarity of style in the Cummings letter and the Roosevelt message and it is possible that rough drafts of the latter may have come from the Justice Department.

The reason why the President's purpose did not leak out in advance of his message to Congress was because so few knew anything about it. Attorney General Cummings was the only member of the Cabinet who had any knowledge of the plan before the morning of the day it was sent to Congress. Senate Democratic Leader Joe T. Robinson was the only person on Capitol Hill who had advance knowledge and he was not told until the previous night, when the Attorney General absented himself from the Congressional reception at the White House.

About a week before the plan was transmitted to Congress—but more than a month after it was decided on—Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator, and Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, of the New York State Supreme Court and legal adviser to the President when the latter was Governor of New York, were let in on the secret. They assisted in putting some of the finishing touches on the program. The President just before the plan was sent to Congress sought the reaction of several others on the scheme, but in some cases he did not intimate that he had determined on such a course of action.

Why did Mr. Roosevelt wait so long in sending his plan to Congress and why did he do it on Friday, February 5? The answer is that the President wished to complete social amenities with the Supreme Court before opening fire on that body. On the night of January 12 the President received the members of the Supreme Court at the judicial reception at the White House. On Tuesday, February 2, he entertained at dinner in honor of the members of the Supreme Court.

Thus, until these social obligations were satisfied, the President wished to withhold his plan. But he did not wish to hold it until the court commenced hearings on constitutionality of the Wagner labor act, which commenced Monday, February 8. Submission of the message on that day or later might be interpreted as a threat to the Supreme Court. So the President was limited between February 3 and February 6, unless he wished to delay the proposal for more than a month and this he did not want to do.

The Senate on February 3 recessed until February 5, so it was impossible to send the message up on February 4. Thus the President acted on Friday, February 5, dropping a bombshell which startled the country. Since that time the debate has been on.

The reaction has not been to the liking of the White House and subtle efforts have been made to laugh it off, by pointing out that the best break Mr. Roosevelt has received in a week was when the Union League of New York and Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, president emeritus of Harvard, denounced the plan. Opposition from Wall Street, Union leagues and Harvard assured the President's re-election, laughed White House attaches.

But there is uneasiness there. This is clearly indicated by the President's action in assigning Attorney General Cummings to defend his plan in a Nation-wide broadcast tomorrow night. The line of defense he takes will indicate the next maneuver of the White House strategists.

Basic Groups Split on Trade Pact Program

Both Agriculture, Industry Give Varying Views at Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

Testimony before the Senate Finance Committee showed differences of opinion yesterday in both agriculture and industry over the Administration's reciprocal trade program.

Representatives of some agricultural groups urged drastic modification of the program if it is to be extended for three years, as the President wishes. Other farm interests favored continuation of present policies.

Representatives of industry divided similarly.

Frank R. Wheeler, of Mystic, Conn., representing the National Association of Manufacturers, said industry favored the principle of reciprocal tariffs, but not when tied in with a "most-favored nation" policy.

Under that policy, tariff concessions granted one country are extended to other countries with which the United States has "most-favored nation" treaties.

Robert C. Graham, of Detroit, representing automobile manufacturers, said they believe the generalization of concessions under the most-favored-nation clause helps promote trade.

Charles W. Holman, secretary of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, urged an amendment to bar imports at a cost lower than the domestic cost of production.

Support for the law in its present form was expressed by John C. White, of the American Cotton Shippers' Association.

Francis P. Garvan, of the Chemical Foundation, New York, contended the tariff policy had resulted in control of the American press by English interests. He said American newspapers were dependent on Canadian wood pulp supplies.

Italy Celebrates As Heir Is Born To Crown Prince

Naples, Feb. 12 (AP).—A blue and white ribbon dangling from the royal palace door announced to rejoicing Italy today the birth of a new heir-apparent to the Italian throne—a son born to Crown Princess Marie Jose.

Throughout the kingdom today there was joyous celebration, for Italians long have voiced their hope for a royal heir who some day may be king-emperor and perpetuate the House of Savoy.

Mexican Town Relaxes Laws Against Church

Widespread Revolt Grows; Thousands Parade Streets; Pilgrims Pour In.

By the Associated Press.

Orizaba, Vera Cruz State, Mexico, Feb. 12.—Stringent church restrictions were relaxed in Orizaba today as result of a peaceful rebellion against the 10-year-old ban closing places of worship.

"Some churches" will be allowed to reopen in the city, Gov. Miguel Aleman declared in a proclamation issued as the revolt spread throughout the state.

The governor asserted, however, that demonstrations, such as brought thousands of Catholics thronging through Orizaba streets Tuesday to open 14 churches amidst the defiant pealing of bells, would not be permitted.

The religious revolt, protesting laws more or less disregarded elsewhere in Mexico, spread to other cities, including Cordoba, where 14,000 paraded through the streets, opened long-closed churches and set the belfries ringing.

Aroused Catholics had telegraphed President Lazaro Cardenas urging that religious edifices be turned over to "laymen's committees" to facilitate their reopening and to "calm the excitement of the people."

The protesting population of Orizaba was swelled by pilgrims, many of them Indians, who poured in from surrounding towns to join the fight for religious freedom.

Dr. Dafoe's Pay Cut.

Callander, Ontario, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—The salary of Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe as health officer for North Himsworth township has been reduced from $70 a year to $40, it was disclosed today. The township council made the cut retroactive to January 1, but gave no reason. Dr. Dafoe, famous as physician to the Dionne quintuplets was away from Callander today.

Loyalists Take Post on Vital Road to Madrid

Continuous Fighting Reported as Defenders Attack Ring of Fascists.

Madrid, Feb. 12.—Government militiamen, driving to relax the Fascist grip on the vital highway to Valencia, captured an important hill in the Vaciamadrid sector south of the capital late today.

From that strategic position Socialist commanders hoped to be able to force insurgent troops from posts dominating the Madrid-Valencia artery, clearing the way for transportation of supplies.

At El Pardo, small town on the northeast end of the Fascist semi-circle about Madrid, continuous fighting was in progress, but Socialists maintained possession of the town. The historic palace of Fernando VII there has been spared bombardment.

Flee From Fighting.

The civil population of El Pardo was almost entirely evacuated before the severe fighting commenced.

While Socialist efforts concentrated on regaining command of the Valencia road, defense forces admitted a retreat in the northwest sector of the capital's defense lines. A bitter battle on the outskirts of Madrid brought down five Fascist planes.

An appeal for internal unity among the forces defending Madrid was issued, meanwhile, by the powerful UGI (Communist and Socialist labor unions), throwing its weight "unconditionally with the government."

(A new ten-mile front was established on the Jarama River, insurgent reports declared, as Moorish legionnaries swept out of the hills and drove an international column from their river positions.)

Insurgent warships shelled Alboraya, reports from Valencia stated, causing scant damage in the village only two and a half miles from the present seat of the government.

Italy "Proud," Paper Says.

Rome, Feb. 12 (AP).—Italy can be "satisfied and proud" if Gen. Francisco Franco's victory at Malaga was due largely to Italian soldiers, as charged by the Spanish Socialist government, the newspaper Regime Fascista declared today.

"We ought to be grateful to the gentlemen of the French People's Front and to Moscow for having induced our youths to fight a new struggle for our idea, and because a Fascist victory in Spain will be a good lesson for France and Russia showing them once and for all they can't dupe Italian Fascism," the newspaper said.

Nine Malaga Leftists Shot.

Malaga, Spain, Feb. 12 (AP).—Nine members of the civil guard who served on the Malaga "control committee" during the Socialist occupation were executed by a firing squad today. A few hours earlier the Fascist military tribunal sentenced them to death.

Poland Plans 1-Party Authoritarian State

Warsaw, Feb. 12 (AP).—Members of the Pilsudski Party in Parliament met today to plot a proposed course for Poland as a one-party authoritarian state.

About 100 followers of the late Marshal Joseph Pilsudski and hence proponents of Marshal Edward Rydz-Smigly, gathered under the leadership of Boguslaw Miedzinski. He indicated after the secret session that the group would incorporate radical and nationalist ideas.

Browder's Police Foe Reduced to the Ranks

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 12 (U.P.).—Police Chief James C. Yates, who threw Communist Presidential Candidate Earl Browder into jail last fall to prevent him delivering a campaign speech, was reduced to rank of patrolman in a police department shakeup today.

The demotion was made "to maintain harmony in the department," Mayor Samuel Beecher said.

ABOUT GLASSES . . .

AUTHENTIC PORTRAITS . . .
Old masterpieces give us an important clue in studying the development of spectacles. Many of these paintings during the year of 1350 show their subjects using a very crude arrangement of what we would call today the Lorgnette. Later during 1410 we find paintings showing spectacles being joined by a bridge at the nose. Most famous of these is a portrait by Van Eyck, painted during that year. These old portraits offer us conclusive evidence of the increasing demand for glasses as an aid to living. Everyone of us should take advantage of the scientific advancement in correcting improper eyesight.

Thousands See Roosevelt Pay Lincoln Honor

President Visits Memorial to Place 6-Foot Palm Wreath.

President Roosevelt yesterday led the national observance of the 128th birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln, motoring to the Memorial to place a 6-foot palm wreath.

The high noon exercises at the monument, in which the President participated, and the patriotic ceremonies held last night at the First Congregational Church were local highlights of the anniversary.

In the House, Representative Robsion, Kentucky Republican, appealed for preservation of the fundamental principles of freedom expounded by Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln.

Divided World Seen.

"We see the world divided into two great camps, Communism on the one hand and Fascism on the other," he said. "They are both the enemies of free government. Our country is the great hope of democracy in the world."

Several thousand persons lined the approaches to Lincoln Memorial as the President drove up. He was accompanied by his son, James; Col. Edwin W. Watson, military aide; Capt. Paul Bastedo, naval aide, and Bodyguard Thomas Qualters.

Mr. Roosevelt, facing the statue of the Great Emancipator, stood in front of his car while the Marine Band played "Hail to the Chief" and "Stars and Stripe Forever." After Dr. Harry Green of the Red Cross gave the invocation, Capt. Bastedo and Col. Watson walked up to the portico with the wreath and placed it against one of the columns.

When the President and his party had departed, other floral tributes were presented by representatives of patriotic organizations. The exercises were sponsored by the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, Col. Lawrence A. Crawford being chairman of the committee on arrangements.

The observance last night in First Congregational Church was arranged by the Department of the Potomac, G. A. R. Department Commander John M. Kline paid tribute to the memory of his former Commander-in-chief.

Survivor Speaks.

Mr. Kline, one of the last survivors of the men who fought for the Union, said:

"It is fitting that we should meet here today to honor his memory, to keep burning brightly in the hearts of all, those things for which he lived and died. His devotion to the cause of humanity, his love for justice, his tolerant spirit and his great loyalty and self-sacrifice should ever inspire us to follow in his footsteps and to preserve and maintain the Constitution and the flag."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, scheduled to speak at the G. A. R. observance, was prevented by illness from attending. The patriotic ceremonies included presentation of the department colors, a salute and pledge of allegiance to the flag. Music was furnished by the Marine Band orchestra.

President Honors Memory of Emancipator

Girl, 16, Feared Slain, Hidden By Sex Maniac

Police Search for Autoist; Hat, Shoes, Broken Glass Found on Highway.

By the Associated Press.

Coatesville, Pa., Feb. 12.—More than 200 policemen, WPA workers and Boy Scouts searched the countryside today for Helen Moyer, 16-year-old high school student believed to have been killed by a motorist who sped away with her body and hid it.

The girl disappeared yesterday afternoon while walking from school to her home at Modena, three miles south of Coatesville.

Her shoes, torn school books and hat were found near pieces of an automobile headlight lens along Modena road, about a mile from her home.

Ralph Williams, captain of Coatesville police, said he believed a motorist deliberately ran the girl down and then took her body away to conceal it.

Last week a 15-year-old Modena girl was attacked on the same road by a motorist who gave her a ride. She finally fought off the attacker and escaped.

"There is a possibilty that the same man who attacked this girl killed Helen," Capt. Williams said.

"The girls resemble each other and their hair is of the same color. Both wore hats and coats of the same color.

"The man probably was afraid that the 15-year-old girl got a good description of him and would cause his arrest. So he came back and lay in wait.. Thinking Helen was the same girl, he ran over her deliberately and then took her body away."

The shoes found on the road were ripped apart. On one of the pieces of glass were several long chestnut-colored hairs believed to have been torn from the girl's head when she was hit. Several strands of hair were found on a fence nearby.

Girl Found Strangled.

Sparta, N. C., Feb. 12 (AP).—Searchers today found the body of Elva Brannock, 16-year-old school girl, in a field 15 miles northeast of here, and Sheriff Walter M. Irvin expressed the opinion she had been strangled.

"We have some information which we hope will lead to an early arrest," said the Sheriff.

The girl, daughter of Jess Brannock, a farmer, was last seen Monday morning when she left home for school. Her schoolbooks were found beside the body on an ivy bank today. A party of about 50 Alleghany officers and citizens had engaged in the search the last 48 hours.

Boy Scout Work In Flood Zone Brings Praise

Grayson Expresses Appreciation of Red Cross; Fund Hits $20,375,000.

The appreciation of the American Red Cross for the work done by Boy Scouts in the flood areas during the recent emergency was expressed in behalf of Admiral Cary T. Grayson yesterday by Ernest J. Swift, vice chairman of the Red Cross, on a National Broadcasting Company hookup.

Appearing on the program with Capt. Fred C. Mills, national director of health and safety, Swift lauded the courage, stamina and helpfulness of the Scouts in the stricken Ohio and Mississippi valleys.

The drive of the American Red Cross for funds for the flood sufferers in the stricken Ohio and Mississippi valleys reached $20,375,000 yesterday.

The American Women's Club of Toronto, Canada, sent $115. Individuals in Belgium, France, England, Bermuda, West Indies and Costa Rica have responded to the distress among the flood sufferers.

Meat packers of Poland yesterday contributed 50 cases of 4,000 pounds of canned ham. The shipment is due in New York this week.

J. L. Biggar, national commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society, has written that voluntary contributions to his society, sent by Canadians to their American neighbors in distress, amount to $15,000.

Maryland Senate Approves State Police System Inquiry

Gov. Nice and Maj. Garey Expected to Be Called; Tangier Island Relief Trip Will Come Under Scrutiny.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 12.—Rumors of strife, dissension and politics led the Senate today to launch an inquiry into the affairs of the State Police Department.

A resolution calling for a "thorough investigation" of the department dropped like a bombshell into a quiet Senate session.

Without a single dissenting vote, the Senate adopted the resolution empowering it to sit as a committee of the whole and summon witnesses to testify about conditions within the department.

Indications were the date for the inquiry would be set early next week and that any facts behind the fast-flying rumors would begin to come to light soon thereafter.

The resolution introduced by Senator John D. C. Duncan (Democrat), Baltimore County, asserted that the talk of strife and dissension had broken down the morale of the State police and destroyed the confidence of the public in the department.

It specifically named three witnesses the Senate would summon. They are Gov. Harry W. Nice, Maj. Enoch Barton Garey, whom the Governor appointed in 1935 and ousted last week and Mrs Marie Bauernschmidt, outspoken Baltimore civic leader who commented on the department's affairs in a broadcast address last night.

Senate spokesman regarded it as certain a major portion of the inquiry would deal with last year's Tangier Island relief expedition on which Sergt. Wilbert V. Hunter died.

The question to be decided, they said, was: Did Maj. Garey undertake the trek across the frozen sound on his own authority or under orders from the Governor?

After the fatal expedition a board of inquiry recommended Garey be dismissed as temperamentally unfitted for his job. The Governor declined to remove him then, but last week ousted him for the same reason.

The Governor declined to comment on Mrs. Bauernschmidt's charge he injected politics into the department. He left Annapolis for Hagerstown to make a speech.

Meanwhile, the Secretary of State issued the commission of Garey's successor, Lieut. Col. Elmer F. Munshower, of Frederick. The Senate approved his appointment yesterday.

Police Arrest 13 Baltimore Taxi Strikers

Thousands Watch Riot as Pickets Try to Keep Cabs Off Streets.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 12.—Baltimore police arrested striking taxicab drivers today in quieting a riot at the garage of a taxicab company affected by the strike.

Police battled pickets gathered to prevent the company from sending its cabs into the streets. More than a thousand non-combatants watched the melee.

The cabs came out of the garage in twos and threes, but hardly any of them dashed through the barrage of bricks and bottles unscarred. Police rescued one driver as pickets tried to tip his machine over.

The 13 men arrested said they were chauffeurs. All were charged with disorderly conduct. Police said charges of malicious destruction of property would be placed later against some of them.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson sought to arrange a conference of representatives of the company and strikers to settle the strike.

The Baltimore Federation of Labor meanwhile warned Gov. Nice and Police Commissioner Charles D. Gaither that it would not be responsible for any disorders that might occur if the company persisted in putting its cabs on the streets.

The strike issue was brought up in the State Legislature at Annapolis today when Senator Robert B. Kimble (Republican), Allegany, declared that "one of Baltimore's greatest rackets, the taxicab racket, is operated under supervision of the State Public Service Commission.

Kimble charged that Baltimore police were being used as strike breakers in the taxi strike.

Flood Region's Deaths Mount; River Falling

Pneumonia Continues to Take Heavy Toll in Devastated Areas.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 12.—Pneumonia and kindred illnesses caused by the disastrous Ohio-Mississippi Valley flood continued to take a heavy toll today among refugees made homeless by the record overflow.

Five deaths were reported in relief centers populated temporarily by families routed from flood besieged homes. Today's victims increased to 465 the number of dead. Scores of other refugees are suffering from flood-induced diseases.

River observers brought cheer to the legion of flood fighters with an announcement of a steady fall in the Mississippi River from Cairo, Ill., to Helena, Ark.

"There are no critical points at this time," said Lieut. Col. Eugene Reybold, district U. S. engineer.

While this encouraging news came, Federal agencies and the Red Cross were making progress in plans for rehabilitating the estimated 1,000,000 persons affected by the flood. Estimates of property losses inflicted by the rampant waters remained near the half-billion dollar mark.

Woodring Suggests Flood Control Session

A flood-control conference of representatives of the War Department, the Army Corps of Engineers and governors of Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut has been suggested by Secretary of War Woodring, it was announced yesterday. The conference would discuss Connecticut River Valley and Merimack Valley flood-control programs.

The conference would consider construction of dams and reservoirs, authorized by Congress last June with an appropriation of $10,028,900.

Feather Tosser Tossed Out of Wichita Hotel

Wichita, Kans., Feb. 12 (AP).—Woody Hockaday, feather spilling peace advocate, was ejected today from a hotel in his home town shortly before Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, addressed a meeting of business leaders.

Clutching a chicken wearing a jacket on which a large "P" was inscribed, Hockaday was hustled from the lobby when police said they were informed he planned to toss feathers during the banquet.

Conspiracy in Honduras Quelled by Government

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Feb. 12 (AP). Discovery of a widespread conspiracy to overthrow the government of President Tiburcio Carias Andino was reported officially today.

An official announcement said that civil and military leaders of the alleged plot had been jailed and that the government was in complete control of the situation. The plotters, the statement said, planned to destroy airports and military buildings in Tegucigalpa and other cities as part of their uprising.

Civil Service Extension Bill Wins Support

Indorsed by Groups of Federal Workers at Hearing.

Further support of the Ramspeck bill to extend the civil service to New Deal agencies was voiced yesterday at a hearing before the House Civil Service Committee.

The indorsements came from Charles I. Stengle, president, and other officials of the American Federation of Government Employes, and from H. Elliott Kaplin, of New York, executive secretary of the National Civil Service Reform League.

The hearing will be resumed at 10:30 o'clock, Tuesday, at which time officials of Government departments involved are scheduled to testify.

Stengle, in indorsing the Ramspeck bill, added that it might be less expensive and difficult to hold noncompetitive, instead of competitive, examinations.

Representative O'Neal (Democrat), of Kentucky, a member of the committee, submitted statistics to show that during the last six years there have been an average of 14½ applicants for every position filled.

He predicted that if the civil service extension is effected on a competitive basis 4,350,000 persons will take the examinations and the vast majority will be disappointed. The procedure, he said, will be expensive and likely to raise false hopes among the job seekers.

Representative Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, said it would be unfair for those with civil service status to "blanket" New Deal employes into civil service with non-competitive examinations.

Paper-Owned Radio Stations Ban Is Sought

Wheeler Acts to Avert 'Monopoly' on Channels of Information.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, announced yesterday he would introduce legislation to make it unlawful for newspapers to own radio broadcasting stations.

He said the purpose was to prevent monopoly of the channels of public information. The Senator also made public data, furnished by the Communications Commission, showing 150 stations now are owned or controlled by newspaper interests.

The data showed 52 of the stations had been acquired by the new interests during the last year, and more than 100 applications were pending for licenses from parties affiliated with newspapers.

Wheeler also made public an opinion written by Hampson Gary, general counsel of the Communications Commission, that legislation of the kind proposed by the Senator "should meet the constitutional requirements."

The Senator had asked the commission for an opinion on the constitutionality of legislation "denying the right of newspapers to obtain broadcasting licenses in the future and requiring them to divest themselves of existing rights in broadcast stations within a reasonable time."

Roosevelt Hints Envoy Transfers

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt said yesterday he was considering a number of transfers and changes in the Diplomatic Corps, but declined to indicate the envoys involved.

Replying to questions at his press conference, the Chief Executive said he intended to confer on the matter with Secretary Hull soon. Definite decisions, he said, possibly would be made at that time.

It is obvious, the President said, that with the beginning of a new Administration certain transfers and changes may be expected.

Among those mentioned in unofficial speculation for transfers to new posts are Hugh Gibson, ambassador to Brazil, and Jefferson Caffrey, ambassador to Cuba. Both are known to desire a change.

It also has been predicted in some authoritative quarters Joseph E. Davies, only recently appointed ambassador to Soviet Russia, shortly would be given another post.

Vagrant Gets 6 Months For Annoying Women

Chester A. Merryman, 33, 622 Sixth street northwest, was sentenced to six months in the Maryland House of Correction yesterday by Judge H. C. Heffner at the Takoma Park Police Court, where he was found guilty of vagrancy.

Merryman was arrested by Sergt. Frank Lane, following complaints of several Takoma Park women about Merryman begging. He is said to have annoyed persons with phone calls when they refused to give him money. Merryman admitted he has been arrested eight times by the D. C. and Maryland police.

Chrysler Is Paid $1,000 Per Hour

By the Associated Press.

Securities Commission counsel contended yesterday that Walter P. Chrysler, the automobile magnate, had received $1,000 for each hour he attended meetings of the directors of the United States and Foreign Securities Corporation.

He was present at only one of 28 meetings, it was explained.

Clarence Dillon, New York banker who sponsored and is a director of the Securities Corporation, laughingly commented:

"That's fair compensation—even for Chrysler."

Arizona Snow Traps 33 on Canyon Rim

Jacobs Lake, Ariz., Feb. 12 (U.P.).—Rescue crews with tractors plowed through 11-foot snowdrifts tonight in an effort to reach 30 men and 3 women—one an expectant mother—snowbound on the north rim of the Grand Canyon since December 27.

Two men on home-made snowshoes broke through the snow-coated Kaibab forest to reach here and bring word of the plight of the marooned group.

The men are construction workers for the Utah Parks Co., and the woman, whose child is expected about March 1, is at a ranch 18 miles away with her husband. No physician is available.

Richman, Farley Aide Robbed, Arrest Reveals

Miami, Fla., Feb. 12 (AP).—Arrest of a 22-year-old former boxer revealed tonight Ambrose O'Connell, assistant to Postmaster General Farley, and Harry Richman, entertainer, were robbed February 8.

Detective Lieut. E. W. Melchen said that a man booked as William Zahari, also known as William Vance, of Detroit, had been taken into custody and that jewelry taken from Richman's Miami Beach home at which O'Connell was a guest, had been recovered. Melchen said a watch belonging to O'Connell had not been recovered. Richman valued the articles taken at $500.

Paris, Feb. 12 (AP).—American and French dignitaries joined today in the unveiling of a memorial to Myron T. Herrick, United States wartime ambassador to France.

Tennessee Child Bride Refuses Stage Offers

Morristown, Tenn., Feb. 12 (AP).—A. T. Drinnon, Morristown attorney, said today 22-year-old Charlie Johns and his 9-year-old bride, Eunice, "have declined all offers to go on the stage."

Drinnon, who represents them, said the couple had "had offers to go on the stage at $100 per performance." The attorney added that the young mountaineer and his wife "lost $2,500" through failure to accept newsreel offers.

Review Charge Against Court Found Baseless

Four of Nine Justices Can Insure Hearing to Petitioners.

to ten years ago, is that the court exercises its discretion to shut out appeals which come to it and which, in some cases, should be heard, or at least given greater consideration before being denied.

In this connection they cited that paragraph in the President's message to Congress in which he commented on this aspect of the Supreme Court's work and in which he questioned whether "full justice is achieved when a court is forced by sheer necessity of keeping up with its business to decline, without even an explanation, to hear 87 per cent of the cases presented to it by private litigants."

Startling Statement.

This intimation on the part of the President that the Supreme Court in an effort to keep abreast of its docket was denying litigants "full justice" was one of the most startling statements in his message, but because of the technical nature of the question, it has not attracted widespread attention.

This charge in an even more sensational form was reiterated in yesterday's New York Times in a signed article by Samuel Untermeyer, well-known New York lawyer and famed as the counsel in the Pujo investigation of the "money trust" in 1912. Untermeyer declared that the President has disclosed in part "a long-standing abuse and evidence of the urgent need for revolutionary reform affecting jurisdiction and procedure of the Supreme Court."

He interpreted the President's statement on this aspect of the problem as a proposal "to restore the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court to where it was before it was emasculated and curtailed by the (judiciary) act of 1925." He contended that "a great and growing evil is attendant upon the manner of the exercise of discretion now vested in the Supreme Court by the writ of certiorari (a decree calling up the records of a case from a lower court—thus taking jurisdiction of it)."

"One-Judge Decisions."

The New York lawyer contended that decisions of whether to grant or refuse such writs "at best are in effect, in most instances, 'one-judge' decisions, contrary to the intendment of the law," and he added that "in the very nature of the case the general impression is that the Chief Justice assigns each of these applications to one of the associate justices in the order of their filing with the clerk of the court."

"No opinion is expected from, and rarely if ever is any received from, the judge to whom the application is assigned. There is a well-defined rumor, which may or may not be true, that most of these applications are in effect decided by the secretaries of the justice to whom the case has been assigned, subject at most to the superficial review that is possible by the justice in charge of the application."

In view of the President's implied criticism of the exercise of discretion by the Supreme Court in handling these cases and in view of Untermyer's more serious contentions, the Washington Post made an inquiry into the method which the Supreme Court follows in handling petitions for certiorari and other facts bearing on that aspect of the current controversy. The most reliable and authoritative sources available were consulted in this task.

Charges Groundless.

It was found that the Untermyer contentions that decisions in these cases are "at best in effect 'one judge' decisions" and that in many instances actually the decision is that of the secretary of that "one judge," are without foundation or basis.

This inquiry developed that not only do all nine Supreme Court justices pass on each petition for a writ of certiorari, but that a writ is granted when four of the nine justices—fewer than a majority—believe it should be.

Even throughout the summer months when the Supreme Court is in recess, copies of such petitions are currently sent to all members of the court, whether they are in this country or abroad, in order that they may study them and be prepared to decide whether they should be granted when the court convenes in October.

This inquiry also revealed that the court frequently agrees to hear cases, which when they are argued, are found not to come within the jurisdictional rules of the tribunal. More than one-half—sometimes a larger proportion—of petitions for writs of certiorari are found clearly on their face to lack merit. Of the remainder which require some study, more than one-half are found to be without merit. Thus in the last term the court issued writs of certiorari in 16.3 per cent of the cases which came under its discretionary jurisdiction.

Reed Discusses Cases.

More striking, however, than these findings of fact are the opinions of persons in close touch with the work of the Supreme Court regarding its exercise of discretion. Solicitor-General Stanley F. Reed, the Federal Government's representative in the Supreme Court, in his report to Congress on January 6 stated that "the figures again disclose that a very large majority of the cases on the appellate docket do not possess sufficient merit to warrant consideration on merits."

He noted that "in 16 of the 63 appeals in which the court had previously noted jurisdiction or had postponed consideration of that question to the merits, the cases were disposed of per curiam (without a full opinion), indicating that argument might possibly have been avoided if the jurisdictional papers had more clearly revealed the exact nature of the case."

"It is quite erroneous," the Solicitor-General said in that report, "to regard the Court as constituted for the correction of error in every case. In the exercise of its discretionary jurisdiction under the Judiciary Act of 1925, it has become a court for decision of important question of general application and for the settlement of conflicts in the decisions of other courts.

"The limitations of the court's statutory jurisdiction and its rules for the exercise of its discretionary jurisdiction should be more carefully observed. Many petitions for writs of certiorari are filed which in the light of settled practice must be regarded as entirely without merit."

Frankfurter's Views.

Prof. Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard Law School, who has made an annual analysis of the "Business of the Supreme Court" has echoed the Solicitor-General's complaint that lawyers do not pay sufficient attention to the Supreme Court's jurisdictional rules. He also has reported that the Supreme Court's handling of its cases "does not appear to involve other desiderata for the sound administration of justice."

Indeed, the Harvard professor on occasion has held that the Supreme Court had shown "wisdom" in keeping its jurisdiction restricted by self-restraint.

Perhaps more interesting, in view of what appears to be the ignorance of even members of the bar as to how the Supreme Court handles petitions for certiorari and jurisdiction, is an address delivered by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes before the American Law Institute on May 10, 1934. An annual address to this body is the only public expression from the Chief Justice outside of the Supreme Court.

Appeal to Bar.

In that address he was in effect making an appeal to the bar to become acquainted with the rules and practice of the Supreme Court and to conform more closely to them.

"The increase in the number of applications for certiorari gives rise to some concern," the Chief Justice asserted. "You cannot fail to observe how essential is the control of the Court over its calendar, a control made possible by the jurisdictional act of 1925. Equally essential is the maintenance of that control through the impartial enforcement of the rules of the Court. You can readily see that if in one-third of the cases, in which leave must now be sought for review, there was an absolute right of appeal, the Court would be swamped with appeals and would be unable properly to perform its distinctive function."

"Of course, the burden of passing upon the vast number of applications is very heavy. I fear that the extent of that burden is but little understood. Some current notions, which have been expressed to me in casual conversations with members of the bar, reveal extraordinary misconceptions.

Would End Mystery.

"If there is mystery about this part of our work it should be dispelled. I find that some think that applications for certiorari are distributed among the justices ratably, that is, one-ninth to each justice. Others think that the justice assigned to a circuit deals with the applications from that circuit.

"Now the fact is that all matters calling for action by the court in the disposition of cases are dealt with by all the members of the court,—unless for some reason a justice is disqualified or unable to act in a particular case. Thus all the justices pass upon all the applications for certiorari. During vacation the papers on these applications follow us wherever we are, at home or abroad.

"Having approximately 300 of them to deal with during the summer, you can see that during the period when the court is not in session there is a large amount of judicial work to be done. When we meet in the fall, the accumulation of applications is presented to the conference of the court and then, as throughout the term, every application is acted upon by the entire court."

"As litigation increases, we cannot hope to discharge this duty, and keep the court abreast of its proper work, without the co-operation of the bar. And the co-operation we need must be found in the self-imposed restraint which will prevent lawyers from presenting applications which are devoid of merit.

"I recognize that in many cases the question whether certiorari should be granted is a matter permitting of debate and the application is properly presented for the determination of the court. But we find that a very large proportion of the applications are without substantial grounds. Yet the papers submitted must be examined, although on examination the futility of the application is disclosed.

"For example, we have many applications where the questions raised are those relating to particular contracts or transactions and turn upon the facts of the particular case, and there is no controversy of importance with respect to legal principles. Applications are numerous in which there appears to be no conflict of decision between the Circuit Courts of Appeals, or between Federal and State courts in cases where the latter should be controlling, and no real conflict with the decisions of the Supreme Court, and there is an utter absence of any good reason for asking our review.

"That review, we must emphasize, is in the interest of the law, not in the interest of particular parties. It is not the importance of the parties or the amount involved that is controlling, but the need of securing harmony of decision and the appropriate settlement of questions of general importance so that the system of Federal justice may be appropriately administered. I commend to the bar the provisions of Rule 38 of the Rules of the Supreme Court which deal comprehensively with this subject."

More Jurists' Need Disputed By Federal Judge in Kansas

Cummings' Report, Showing That Work of Judiciary Has Decreased Sharply in Recent Years, Cited by Otis.

additional judges?' And did you read the letter? I read it and I have it here. The heart of it is in these words:

"'My Dear Mr. President—Delay in the administration of justice is the outstanding defect in our Federal judicial system. * * * It has exasperated the bench, the bar and the public. * * * The evil is a growing one. The business of the courts is continually increasing. * * * The time has come when further legislation is essential. * * *'"

Illustrates Point.

Illustrating from a chart he said he prepared from Attorney General Cummings' report Judge Otis said:

"You observe then that the business of the Federal courts not only has not increased during the last four years, but that it has most strikingly decreased. * * * When the business of the Federal courts was at its peak in 1932 it was transacted by 149 district judges. When as now, the business is at its lowest ebb, there are 158 judges to transact it, with four additional judges already authorized by law. * * *

"The report of the Solicitor General of the United States, who handles the business of the United States in our highest court, says:

"'During its October term, 1935 we are now in the October, 1936, term), the Supreme Court disposed of 986 cases on the appellate docket, a larger number of appellate dispositions than at any of the ten preceding terms, except the 1933 term, when 1,025 cases were disposed of. Every case argued or submitted at the term was disposed of before adjournment. * * *'"

Maryland U. Professor Retired in 1934 After 42 Years on Job.

Thomas Humphrey Spence, dean emeritus of the college of arts and sciences of the University of Maryland, died last night at his home in College Park after a long illness. He was 70.

Dean Spence, who retired in 1934 after 42 years of service at the university, was born at Snow Hill, Md., in 1867. He attended grammar school and high school at Snow Hill and then took an academic and a law course at Johns Hopkins University.

He taught school at Stockton, Md., from 1888 to 1889, after which he became principal of the Snow Hill High School. He held this post until 1892,, when he became a professor of languages at the Maryland Agricultural College, as the University of Maryland was then called.

He was made a vice president of the school in 1902. From 1912 to 1913 he was acting president, and from 1919 to 1921 he was acting dean of the college of arts and sciences. He was named dean emeritus in 1924, but continued teaching languages and philosophy until he retired in 1934.

A tall, scholarly looking man with a goatee, Dean Spence was both picturesque and popular. About six years ago, he was crippled in an automobile accident, and thereafter had to use crutches. Students had to carry him up the steps to his classroom.

He married Charlotte Calvert, descended from the famous family that founded Maryland. She survives him, as do three daughters—Mrs. Virginia Irving Lescure, of Harrisburg, Pa.; Mrs. Charlotte Calvert Wilton, of Charlotte, N. C., and Mrs. Mary Spence Montgomery, of College Park.

Two sisters also survive Dean Spence. They are Mrs. William R. Bullock, of Charlotte, and Mrs. P. M. Price, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 8:45 a. m. in St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, at College Park, and will be conducted by the Rev. Ronalds Taylor, the pastor. Burial will be at Snow Hill at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Car Jumps Tracks On 'Protested Line'

A street car of the Cabin John line jumped the tracks in the Potomac Heights section last night. Nobody was hurt. Nevertheless, members of the Conduit Road Citizens Association seized on the accident as proof of charges they have been making against the line.

Said James T. Cochran, 5426 Cathedral avenue, a leader in the fight for an improvement in the car line:

"We have repeatedly complained about the road bed of this line, the condition of the tracks and the excessive speed of the cars. It seems to me that this accident shows there was ground for complaint. Nobody was hurt, but that was luck. Somebody would have been hurt if that car had gone over one of the banks on either side of the tracks."

6 Maine 'Envoys' Get Cold Welcome

Six "ambassadors" from Maine arrived in the Capital yesterday and, carrying out the orders of the Maine Legislature, delivered memorials to Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead, and each of the Members of Congress from the Pine Tree State praying that Congress decline to increase the membership of the Supreme Court.

They appeared to be lonely and neglected—this committee of ambassadors, all Republicans, made up of the president of the Maine Senate, J. Fred Burns; the speaker of the House, George Hill; Senators Roy Fernald and John Willis, and Representatives Reed Ellis and James H. Thorne.

Senator Wallace H. White (Republican) and Representative James C. Oliver (Republican) were the only Maine members able to receive the delegation and take their memorials.

nate powers between the three branches of government," he continued.

Senator Frazier, veteran member of the Senate's Progressive bloc, and supporter of the independent Presidential candidacy of William Lemke in the last campaign, came out yesterday for the first time with an explanation of his stand, declaring:

"I don't like the idea of what might be termed 'packing' the Supreme Court. It might work now, but I don't think it would continue to work. If the court were 'set' now, it might be 'set' again by a President with probably different views."

Frazier favors Congress restricting the rights of the lower courts to pass on certain Constitutional issues, believing this might keep some legislative matters from ever reaching the Supreme Court.

"Certainly Congress has the right to say what the powers of the Supreme Court should be in regard to dealing with the Constitutionality of acts of Congress," the North Dakota liberal said. "Instead of increasing the court, I would define the court's powers and see that it lived up to the limitation. There must be some way we can do that."

Meanwhile, the President was represented by a White House attache as not being discouraged by the opposition, feeling rather that criticism of his plan might prove as good a barometer as the campaign booing he received in Wall Street. He was said to be particularly heartened by the opposition of the Union League Club of New York.

Cabinet Conference.

Mr. Roosevelt went over his plans yesterday at his regular Cabinet meeting. On leaving, Postmaster General Farley asked a reporter what he thought of the program's chances. When the newsman said he was "betting a five spot" it would pass, Farley advised him:

"Double your bet."

Heavy opposition continued to be manifest in a landslide of mail received at the Capitol. Senator Royal S. Copeland, (Democrat), of New York, who has withheld any statement, said he had received 6,000 letters on the issue, and only seven were for the President's plan. Copeland announced he will break his own silence on Monday.

It was authoritatively indicated yesterday the program was the result of a study of almost 18 months. It was also revealed that, stripped of lower court procedural reform proposals, the frank design was to make it possible for Congress to deal with social and economic reform problems.

Immediately after the NRA decision, the President became convinced certain of these issues had to be met. It was his view Congress had made a perfectly sincere attempt, national in scope, and within the bounds of the Constitution, to meet the issues.

As early as May, 1935, suggested solutions began to pour in, and literally thousands were submitted and sorted over a period of a year. These studies took a definite trend last spring and continued throughout the summer and fall.

Then, immediately after the election and just before the President's departure for South America, Mr. Roosevelt asked two people to put down in black and white a list of suggestions. The two selected were Attorney General Cummings and Solicitor General Reed.

Suggestions Studied.

On the President's return from South America, these listed suggestions were studied and a gradual weeding out process applied.

As the time element was considered important, all proposals for Constitutional amendments were eliminated. The conferees agreed it would be extremely difficult for persons with the same objective in mind to agree on the language of an amendment, in the first place. Also it was felt that it might not be very difficult to block ratification by legislatures in 13 States, if thoroughly skilled opposition was directed at points of least resistance.

Next legislative proposals were considered. Most of these were eliminated because of doubtful constitutionality. It was believed that legislation requiring 8 to 1, or 7 to 2, or 6 to 3 Supreme majorities on Constitutional issues were questionable, because they went back to fundamentals of common law.

In the entire background of several hundred years of English common law, the only known body of precedents, the rule had been that a majority of the court could determine the will of the court. Thus, it was said, the President came down to the solution he recently proposed in his judiciary message to Congress, and concluded also to attack the question of the Federal judiciary as a whole.

A cautious approach to actual consideration of the legislation was apparent yesterday in Capitol leadership circles. It was obvious a policy of watchful waiting has been adopted.

Colored Youth Asked to Quit As Midshipman

House that Johnson's suspension was among those signed by the President.

Johnson is the first colored boy to enter Annapolis since Henry E. Baker entered in 1874 only to resign a few months after joining the service. Two other colored men, Emile Holley and Edward Weir, were recommended a few years ago by Representative Oscar DePriest, colored, also of Chicago, but failed to pass entrance requirements.

Weir, whose eyesight was imperfect, is an instructor at Howard University; Holley is a teacher at Miner Teachers College, also in Washington.

Although Johnson was the first colored boy at the Naval Academy in 62 years, several West Point graduates have been colored. The most recent is Second Lieut. Benjamin O. Davis, graduated last year, stationed at Fort Benning, Ga.

He is the son of Col. Benjamin O. Davis, who was not a West Point man but rose through the ranks. Col. Davis is professor of military tactics and strategy at the colored school at Tuskeegee, Ala.

Other Military Academy graduates include Henry O. Flipper, graduated in 1887, who has since resigned from the service, recognized as an outstanding mining engineer. Col. Charles Young, who received his commission as a full colonel at retirement, was one of the earliest graduates, receiving his commission in 1889. He died several years ago.

ley, of New York. Bromley declared the committee's demands constituted "unreasonable search and seizure."

He agreed, however, to give the committee three large suitcases and a newspaper-wrapped bundle packed with records—most of them dealing with General Motors, the agency's largest industrial client.

50 Reports Withheld.

Among the documents withheld were about 50 or 60 long-hand reports from undercover agents working in General Motors plants. Pinkerton contended the handwriting might disclose the informants' identity.

Edward S. Clark, agency division manager from Cleveland, testified as the hearing closed that "not more than ten" operatives had been working for General Motors during December and January, while the strike was in progress.

"One of our men sat down with the other strikers in the Fisher Body Plant No. 2 at Flint, Mich.," added Robert Peterson, Pinkerton's assistant superintendent at Detroit.

"Another operative went into Fisher No. 1 with food, but stayed only about two hours."

Earlier testimony by agency officials showed the auto firm paid Pinkerton nearly $500,000 since 1934 for investigation of "shop irregularities, public opinion, and labor union activities."

Mgr. Corrigan Is Received; Coronation Anniversary Celebrated Here.

Six days before this, he had been elected Pope—the 260th successor of St. Peter.

The fifteenth anniversary of his coronation was celebrated here yesterday at a solemn high mass in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University. In attendance were the diplomatic representatives of 37 countries, high-ranking officials of the American Government and a host of dignitaries of the Catholic church.

Right Rev. McNamara Preaches.

The Right Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, who preached the sermon, offered what he termed "an expression of gratitude" for the accomplishments of Pope Pius.

"Pope Pius," he said, "fears no path because it is new nor hesitates to try an old path by new ways."

Pointing to the achievements of the Holy Father, Bishop McNamara continued:

"Never has the press, especially that of the United States, devoted more space to the deeds of a reigning pontiff."

The mass was celebrated by Mgr. Edioio Vagnozzi, auditor of the apostolic delegation, who was assisted by the Rev. Edward Reilly as deacon and by the Rev. John Kilgariff as sub-deacon.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, seated on a throne, an ermine cape over his shoulders, was assisted by the Rev. Donald McLean, the Rev. Francis Mullen and the Rev. Martin Higgins.

Two Choirs Sing.

Classical music was sung by the Catholic University Choir and the Seminary Choir.

Among the diplomats at the mass were Ambassador Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, of Peru; Senor Don Hector Diaz Leguizamon, charge d'affaires of the Argentina Embassy; M. Charles Saint, third secretary of the French Embassy, representing the Ambassador; Dr. Hans Thomsen, counselor of the German Embassy, representing the Ambassador; A. B. Bueno de Prado, charge d'affaires of the Brazilian Embassy, and Mme. Bueno de Prado; Prince Eugene de Ligne, counselor of the Belgian Embassy, representing the Ambassador; Ernest Schletter, of the Swiss Legation, and Mrs. Schlatter; the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik; the Albanian Minister, Faik Konitza; the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. MacWhite; the Portuguese Minister and Mme. de Bianchi; the Hungarian Minister, John Pelenyi; the Minister of the Union of South Africa, Ralph William Close.

The Minister of Uruguay, J. Richling; the Minister of El Salvador and Mrs. Castro and Miss Concha Gonzales; the Minister of Lithunia and Mrs. Zadeikis, the Minister of Egypt, Mohamed A. Youssef; the Secretary of the Yugoslav Legation, Vastko Petrovitch; the Minister of Latvia, Dr. Alfred Bilmanis; the Minister of the Dominican Republic, Don Andres Pastoriza; the Minister of Bulgaria, Dimitri Naoumoff; the Minister of Paraguay and Senora de Busk Codas; the Counselor of the Venezuelan Legation, Dr. Jacimto Fombona-Pachano; the Canadian Minister and Lady Marler.

Others Present.

The Czechoslovakian Minister, Dr. Ferdinand Veverka; the Counselor of the French Embassy, Jules Henry; the First Secretary of the German Embassy, E. W. Meyer; the First Secretary of the German Embassy, Herbert Scholz, and Mrs. Scholz; the Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy, Commander Oscar F. Coutinho, and Mrs. Coutinho; the Attache of the Brazilian Embassy, Fernando Lobo, and Mrs. Lobo; the First Secretary of the Cuban Embassy, M. Carlos Blanco; the Second Secretary of the Cuban Embassy, Dr. Alberto Muxo, and Mrs. Muxo; the Counselor of the Chinese Embassy, Zaung Teh Ing, and Mrs. Ing; the Counselor of the Polish Embassy, Witold Wankowiez, and Mrs. Wankowiez.

The Attache of the Polish Embassy, Michael Budny; the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, Capt. Don Umberto Cugia; Marquis of Sant'Orsola and Marchesa Cugia of Sant-Orsola, the Counselor for Emigration of the Italian Embassy, Signor Eugenio Bonardelli, and Signora Bonardelli; the Secretary of the Italian Embassy, Count Guerino Roberti, and Countess Roberti; the Assistant Counselor for Emigration, Dr. Vittorio Bifuleo; the Secretary of the Irish Free State Legation, Robert Brennan, Mrs. Brennan and Miss Emer Brennan; the Financial Counselor of the Roumanian Legation, George Boncesco; the Secretary of the Hungarian Legation, Baron Paul Schell; the First Secretary of the Canadian Legation, Merchant Mahoney, and Mrs. Mahoney; the Attache of the Legation of Panama, Don Miguel J. Moreno, jr.; the Counselor of the Czechoslovakian Legation, Dr. Joseph Nemecek; the First Secretary of the Czechoslovakian Legation, Otakar Kabelac.

Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director of the Pan American Union, attended, as did the assistant director, Dr. Pedro de Alba.

Senate, House Represented.

The Senate was represented by Senators Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona; Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts. The wives of Senator F. Ryan Duffy, of Wisconsin, and Sherman Minton, of Indiana, also attended.

The House was represented by Representative Sol Bloom, of New York; Mrs. Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom; Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, and Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey.

Others at the mass were James A. Farley, Postmaster General of the United States; Joseph B. Keenan, assistant to the Attorney General, and Mrs. Keenna; J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of Currency; Associate Justice Harold M. Stevens, and Mrs. Stevens; Ambrose O'Connell, executive assistant to the Postmaster General; Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and District Commissioner Dan I. Sultan, and Mrs. Sultan.

Among the distinguished clergy were the Right Rev. Edward L. Buckey, the Right Rev. Eugene J. Connelly, the Right Rev. Charles Dubois Wood, the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, president of Georgetown University, and the Very Rev. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare conference.

Nazi Economists Insist Reich Now Better Fed Than Ever

Institute Claims Maximum Price-Fixing Enables All to Obtain Nourishing Food; Some of Delicacies Are Lacking.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 12.—Nazi economists insisted today the German people are better nourished than ever, although they may not get as many eggs in their cakes.

The German Institute for Business Research, in its weekly survey, assailed as "almost grotesque exaggeration" reports abroad of German food scarcities.

"There is no attempt to realize," said the published survey, "that this scarcity is due mainly to the desire of the German government to fix maximum prices for the benefit of the lower classes."

It went on to explain that in most countries, the scarcity of a commodity causes an automatic rise in the price of that commodity, "and this rise automatically and effectively shuts out the demand of the lower classes."

"In Germany," the institute continued, "this cruel and antisocial rule has been eliminated by the fixing of maximum prices. The result is that in certain seasons there is a disparity between a smaller supply and an unchanging demand."

Acknowledging a decrease since 1928 in the consumption of eggs, certain meats and certain other "high grade agricultural products," the institute said the most important aim of the German nutrition policy was "to attain for every German the greatest possible degree of nourishment. This means the raising of the standard of the lower classes, even if the requirements for unessential use of foodstuffs (such as eggs for cake baking and whipped cream for desserts) have to suffer."

Navy's Shipbuilding Program Is Halted by Shortage of Steel

the impasse are at present possible. These are that the steel men will agree among themselves to supply the steel and comply with the provisions during that time, and that Secretary Perkins grant the Navy an exemption in the case of steel.

It was noted, however, that the steel needs of the Navy will be imperative for the next two years, and granting of a two-year exemption for the industry is beyond the sphere of possibilities, it was observed.

Action has been demanded repeatedly by the Navy Department.

Officials of the Labor Department, acting as mediators in the situation, thus far have expressed no opinion as to relative merits of various points of view among the Navy Department, the steel men and the labor chiefs. Their position, it was said yesterday, is that of the fact-finder at this point. The conference Monday is expected to result in speeding up action.

The possibility faded yesterday that steel companies might evade the act and yet supply the Navy with steel, through the loop-hole in the present law which allows companies to sell to the Government stocks-on-hand, whether or not the stocks were produced in compliance with the provisions. It was through this loop-hole that the Navy was finally able to purchase 800,000 pounds of copper the other day, as copper is produced in advance of sale.

Ordered in Advance.

Steel, however, which must be ordered in advance, is very definitely under the law. It had been rumored steel companies might prepare the requisite amount of steel and then bid for the Navy contracts, as a special practice for the emergency. Both steel companies and the Labor Department have figuratively frowned at this proposal, it was learned last night.

The local Navy Yard, which received 350,000 pounds of copper, diverted from its New York destination for the emergency here, will not be affected by the steel shortage. Copper on hand for use in the local gun foundry will last considerably after May 1, it was said.

Assistant Navy Secretary Edison left Washington last Tuesday on a five-day leave of absence to spend at his home in Orange, N. J., but will return in time for the Monday conference. The report of the Navy in the matter has been made to President Roosevelt, officials said, but that of the Labor Department is not yet in.

Delays Inevitable.

Even if steel were obtainable tomorrow, construction delays in half the building program could not be avoided at this late date, according to Construction Bureau officials of the Navy.

But 4,500 men's jobs are immediately affected by the cessation of construction on the nine ships yesterday.

The lack of steel stopped building on the following ships: Three submarines, the Sculpin and Squalus at Portsmouth, N. H., and the Swordfish at Mare Island; and six destroyers, 1,500 tons each, the O'Brien and Walke at Boston; the Morris and Wainwright at Norfolk; the Roe at Charleston, and the Buck at Philadelphia.

Cites Other Factors.

Representative Arthur D. Healey (Democrat), Massachusetts, co-author of the act, said last night he is "pretty well satisfied that there are a number of other factors present, besides the Walsh-Healey act, which contribute to the present situation." These, he indicated, include "spectacular rising prices of steel; capacity orders from private industry; unattractiveness of Navy orders in their exacting specifications, frequent inspections and examinations; the Vinson-Trammell act, and the 48-hour steel industry work week."

He said the bill was aimed primarily at "sweat shops and exploiters of child labor," and that he felt the steel industry could meet "the very reasonable requirements of the act" without particular difficulty.

Law to End Lynching Demanded by Wagner

New York, Feb. 12 (AP).—Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, in a Lincoln anniversary radio address tonight, demanded Federal anti-lynching legislation to "vindicate the principles for which Abraham Lincoln gave his life."

"The crime of lynching," the Senator said, "is one of the most threatening evils * * * which must be eradicated. * * * In 11 cases out of 12 it is directed against that very race which Lincoln released from physical bondage."

Butler Says Invasion Of U. S. Is Impossible

Frederick, Md., Feb. 12 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, U. S. M. C., retired, asserted tonight that the invasion of the United States by a foreign power was "impossible."

He spoke to an audience which filled the 2,000 seats of the Armory here. The address was arranged by the Frederick County unit of the emergency peace campaign. Gen. Butler said that any successful invasion of this country would take a million men, and that the available ships would carry only 750,000. A small-scale invasion, he said, could be handled by the police force.

General Motors Calls 100,000 Back to Work

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Feb. 12.—More than 100,000 employes of General Motors were summoned back to their jobs tonight as the giant automotive firm pushed toward resumption of capacity production in the wake of a costly, paralyzing six-weeks strike.

The corporation, hastily surveying the situation in scores of plants in a dozen States, announced that nearly all of the wage earners who had been thrown out of work by the dispute with the United Automobile Workers would be on the job by Tuesday.

Resumption of assembly lines will depend upon receipts of supplies from body plants.

A development in another division of the industry today was announcement of a wage increase by Packard, which will add $2,000,000 to its annual pay roll and bring a 5-cent-an-hour raise to approximately 12,500 workers. The increase follows similar action in the last few days by Chrysler and General Motors.

Gov. Frank Murphy, whose second intensive effort to conciliate the bitter labor differences separating General Motors and its striking employes was concluded successfully, planned to leave for New York tonight to receive a gold medal for "eminent public service" from the American-Irish Historical Society.

A. N. Benson, general manager of the National Automobile Dealers Association, said dealers who have conditioned and disposed of much of their used-car stock, normally heavy at this season, are in "stronger position financially" for quick distribution of new cars.

Theater "Stay-in" Ended.

Other developments in the wake of the strikes:

At Anderson, Ind., members of the United Automobile Workers of America ended their "stay-in" demonstration in an Anderson theater which they described as a protest against city officials whom they accused of failing to give "civil protection for union assemblages."

At St. Louis, U. A. W. A. members continued to picket the strike-closed Fisher-Chevrolet plant protesting a temporary circuit court restraining order.

At Flint, National Guard officers commanding troops on duty in the "strike capital" where two riots occurred, said demobilization of 1,000 soldiers tomorrow would start the exodus of the Guardsmen. Another 2,300 will follow the first troops when General Motors operations are resumed.

Maryland Bill Berates Women Bar Drinkers

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 12 (AP).—A woman lawmaker put in a legislative bill today to deny any member of her sex the privilege of planking their feet alongside those of the menfolk at rails of Maryland bars.

Delegate E. Blanche Phillips, of Baltimore, is author of the bill, which would prohibit serving alcoholic drinks over the bar to women customers. Shouts of approval greeted the measure.

Labor Situation Now Beclouded By New Threats

cabinet room and in which the President did not participate, considered the maritime situation, but no conclusions were reached, it was announced.

Later in the day the unions composed of seamen, marine firemen and cooks and stewards, went into Federal court at San Francisco and obtained a temporary injunction against issuance of the continuous discharge books, which seamen are required by the law to carry with them showing their record of service and ability. Supporters of the act say the cards protect efficient workers and assure them jobs, but the union men counted the cards give employers information on which they can blacklist men for union activity. The union men were reported discussing a "sit-down" strike to tie up West Coast shipping again just as it was beginning to move after the protracted strike brought to an end last week.

Date Is Indefinite.

John Rylander, United States shipping commissioner at San Francisco, was reported to have refused to sign ship's articles when the crew has refused to produce the discharge books. The court order enjoins him from refusing.

The Pittsburgh meeting of steel workers, announced by Murray, who also is vice president of the mine workers' union, of which Lewis is president, is designed as the formal opening of the C. I. O. drive to organize the steel men into one big industrial union, as opposed to the American Federation of Labor's craft union plan. The C. I. O. unions now stand suspended from the federation for following Lewis in what the federation calls "dual unionism."

The date for actual presentation of demands on the steel companies is indefinite and is expected to be influenced by developments in the coal negotiations.

W. E. Sands, 76, Dies; 40 Years With Circuses

William E. Sands, 76, for 40 years an advance man for American circuses, died of a heart attack yesterday at his home in Hagerstown, Md.

A native of Hagerstown, Mr. Sands was one of four brothers who spent most of their lives in the circus business. One of these, Robert Sands, of Leechburg, Pa., survives. The two others, W. B. Sands and Edwin Sands, died several years ago.

Mr. Sands was a lieutenant in company B of the Maryland National Guard during the Spanish-American War. He afterward worked for the old Barnum & Bailey Circus, for Hagenback-Wallace and for Ringling Brothers. After his retirement about ten years ago he toured the country with a tent motion picture show.

Surviving, besides his brother, are a sister, Mrs. Mollie Turner, of Washington, and two half-sisters, Mrs. Lida Brooks, of Washington, and Mrs. A. J. Hoover, of Silver Spring, Md.

Funeral services will be held in Hagerstown tomorrow afternoon. Burial will be in Rose Hill Cemetery.

Judgment Upheld In Fatal Bus Crash

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 12 (AP).—The Maryland Court of Appeals held today the "proximate cause" of the train-bus crash that killed 14 school children at Rockville, Md., April 11, 1935, was negligence of the bus driver.

The high court upheld a $4,800 lower court judgment given the mother of one of the children against the owner of the bus. The opinion said:

"If the driver had looked he would have seen the train in time to have avoided the collision, so the death of the child (1 of the 14) was directly due to the negligence of the driver, either in failing to look and so in time see what was physically impossible for him not to have seen if he had looked, or in failing to stop after he had looked and seen in time to stop in a place of safety."

Reduced To Fundamentals.

Paradoxical as it may seem, the confused statement of Representative Jenckes is helping to clarify the case against the "red rider" or any substitute therefor. She appealed to Congress to prevent what she regards as "this attempt on the part of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia to legalize the advocacy of communism in the public schools of Washington." Her remarks betray a complete lack of confidence in the ability of the board properly to manage the local school system.

From the tenor of Mrs. Jenckes' remarks it might be supposed that she is trying to divert attention from the real issue. But, wittingly or unwittingly, she has reduced the controversy to this basic question: Does Congress have confidence in the District Board of Education?

Our school system was made independent of the local government to keep it divorced from politics. Realizing also its own incompetence to manage an educational system, Congress assigned that task to a board appointed by members of the United States District Court for Washington. The board so chosen should be fully responsible for the local educational system. Should Congress lose faith in the board, the sensible course would be a Congressional investigation looking toward the establishment of a completely new agency.

So long as the board remains in control, however, it is patently absurd for Congress to be meddling with the curriculum. There is not the slightest reason to believe that Congress as a whole has lost faith in the present Board of Education. Certainly the citizens of Washington have not. From the viewpoint of sound administrative policy, therefore, no justification whatever can be found for legislative acts telling the board how to manage its specialized business.

The entire District government works under a terrific handicap because of its extremely limited authority over local affairs. Congress will be asked at the present session to extend the powers of the Board of Commissioners to deal with community problems. The issue is creation of a responsible government in the Capital City. And part of that issue is the desirability of maintaining a responsible Board of Education that will not be badgered by Congressional interference at every turn.

Congress has a clear-cut responsibility to decide the "red rider" controversy from this fundamental viewpoint of orderly government. The only possible answer is complete repeal.

Embargoes Seem Applicable.

The temptation to boast of a military success has been sufficient to sweep aside Mussolini's erstwhile reserve regarding Italy's interventionist activities in Spain.

With the news of the fall of Malaga, the Italian press, which only prints what the government permits it to print, has let the cat out of the bag. Hitherto it has been repeatedly denied that Italy is directly engaged in the Spanish struggle. But on this occasion no attempt was made to disguise the fact that Italian troops were largely instrumental in capturing Malaga from the Spanish government forces. A story from the Manchester Guardian to that effect was prominently displayed in several Roman newspapers.

No wonder, then, that in the face of this cynical evasion of the nonintervention agreement the French Popular Front is becoming restive. Has France restrained itself from aiding the Leftist regime in Spain, it is being asked, in order to give Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany a free hand to wage war on a friendly government? For the first time in weeks there is now talk of direct French aid to the Madrid-Valencia regime unless there is an absolute cessation of Italian aid to the Spanish insurgents and Italian military activity in the Iberian Peninsula.

Hitherto the fiction has been preserved that the Italian and German contingents are "volunteers" taking orders from Gen. Franco and the other insurgent generals. In the attack on Malaga the Italians were apparently sufficiently numerous to fight under their own leaders and to achieve what is hailed in Rome as an Italian victory.

Is such activity war? By any reasonable definition it would seem to be nothing less. And if it is war, can the United States ignore the fact, at least insofar as our neutrality policy is concerned? This policy has been applied to both the government forces and the insurgents in Spain. Should it not now be further extended to cover those foreign powers who are definitely engaged in warlike activities on Spanish soil?

Borrowing For Guns.

Neville Chamberlain, as chancellor of the exchequer, has told the House of Commons that the British Government will need to raise "capital" for defense purposes by borrowing up to a possible $2,000,000,000 during the next five years. The huge outlay for which authorization is asked would be in addition to current expenditures for the army, navy and air services, already costing the British taxpayers close to a billion a year.

When the present budget was introduced, last April, it became evident that the rearmament program constituted a major threat to the balance of income and expenditure which the British government had achieved and maintained after a gallant and successful fight to economize. Now all this progress is threatened by the decision to enter into the competitive armament race that has already piled up huge budgetary deficits in other European nations.

In view of the cost of the defense program, the chancellor is undoubtedly right in contending that the present generation of taxpayers cannot be expected to carry the burden of new emergency outlays. Some financial authorities argue to the contrary, maintaining that the present generation should shoulder the cost of supplying the labor and materials that go into construction of battleships and warlike equipment, whether the funds are obtained through taxation, by borrowing or by outright inflation. But it is politically impossible to levy heavy additional taxes upon a nation already groaning under existing levies.

Income taxes now take nearly one-fourth of the income of British taxpayers, including the earnings of millions who would be far down in the exempt scale if they lived in the United States. Indirect taxes and import duties, together with a higher level of prices, have raised living costs and increased opposition to new forms of indirect taxation. Consequently the government turns to the capital market to obtain defense funds that are really for current use, although Mr. Chamberlain finds it convenient to call them "capital" expenditures.

Great Britain, with a population less than one-third that of the United States, has a public debt larger than our Federal Government and can ill afford to add to the burdens of the debt service by which the nation's future is already mortgaged. The British public debt is, fortunately, better distributed than ours, since most of it is held by investors, with a relatively small proportion lodged in the banks. British financial authorities are none the less properly fearful of the consequences of a return to deficit financing.

The most serious aspect of the situation, however, lies in the fact that the budgetary balance is being upset in time of peace, with business steadily improving and economic prospects generally bright. If the British decide to embark upon an armament program that cannot be financed by current revenue under these favorable conditions, it means that they have left themselves with little if any taxable resources in reserve to meet emergencies of the future—whether wars or depressions.

The capacity of a nation to borrow its way out of danger or adversity without destroying its credit depends upon its success in living within its income in years of peace and plenty. It is a serious symptom when a people as conservative as the British turn to spendthrift methods. That the move is in part designed to bring pressure for disarmament on Germany is clear. But whatever the disease which inspires this remedy, peace-time deficit financing of armaments is a desperate device.

When A Feller Needs A Friend.

The weather is not the only thing that's cool in Hollywood these days. Executives of Twentieth Century-Fox and M. G. M. are busy trying to "square" one of those eternal triangles. Paradoxically, the more heated the arguments, the colder the atmosphere around those two studios. And it's the old, old story—a male and two females—one brunette, the other blonde. It all came about because Junior prefers blondes.

Freddie Bartholomew, it seems, was asked by Twentieth Century-Fox recently if he would escort one of their baby stars, Jane Withers, to a premiere. Instead of saying that he would be chawmed, the erstwhile Little Lord Fauntleroy is quoted as making reply that he'd "rather not go at all than go with that dame." Furthermore, he is said to have cast aspersions on her box-office rating and to have declared that if he couldn't take Shirley Temple, he'd go alone.

If this had happened in Keokuk or Sneed Center, Freddie would have been thrashed; Shirley would have had her name linked with his in chalk-drawn hearts; and Jane would have contented herself with pouting. But in the land of stars, even the Little Dippers shine brightly. The result is that representatives of Twentieth Century-Fox are pointing to Jane's national box-office standing; M. G. M. heads are confronted with the effect of this sort of publicity on Freddie's popularity; and the mother of the young lady scorned is reported as "deeply chagrined."

Why Distrust The People?

As proponents of the President's plan to enlarge the Supreme Court are forced more and more to take the defensive, they tend to fall back upon a single argument. The Court must be packed, it is said, so that various New Deal measures will not be held unconstitutional. Subordination of the Court to the Executive is justified on the theory that the end justifies the means.

The argument that amendment of the Constitution would be too slow a process is said to have originated in the White House. Mr. Roosevelt is represented as fearing that any amendment he might propose would encounter the same forces that have so far frustrated the proposed child labor amendment. Rather than risk such delay, it is said, he would prefer the appointment of new justices who can be expected to rubber-stamp future legislation.

Since this argument seems to have influenced a considerable number of legislators who must pass judgment upon the President's proposal, it should be carefully analyzed. The proposed amendment giving Congress authority to regulate the labor of children was submitted to the States in 1924. Its ratification by the Legislature of New Mexico on Thursday brings the total number of States which have approved to 27. After nearly 13 years this modification still requires indorsement by nine States before it can become effective.

The disinclination of the States to yield their authority in the field of child labor is certainly discouraging. Yet the reasons for this hesitancy ought to be clearly understood. The amendment would give Congress very broad powers in this field. Many of the States are convinced that the problem can be solved more satisfactorily by their own legislatures. It is not a case in which the overwhelming will of the people is being frustrated by a small majority. Rather, local bodies directly responsible to the people are shown to be dubious as to a change that would further centralize governmental powers in Washington.

Whenever there is an overwhelming demand for a constitutional change it is not difficult to secure. The amendment repealing prohibition was ratified in nine months. Only when grave controversial questions that may modify our governmental system are at stake is serious delay encountered. And in such instances there can be no reasonable argument for snap decisions. Still less defensible are schemes, such as that proposed by the President, which would deny the people any opportunity to pass judgment upon fundamental changes.

With the party which the President heads in full control of Congress and most of the State governments, the Administration is in a most advantageous position to secure favorable consideration for any amendment it might sponsor. The President is said to fear the reaction of State legislatures. But any amendment proposed by Congress could call for ratification by special conventions, chosen by the same electorate which recently returned Mr. Roosevelt to power by overwhelming majorities.

Congress can not ignore this method of dealing with vital issues without itself implying district of the popular verdict. Reduced to its fundamentals, therefore, the President's plan appears as an indirect method of effecting changes which, it is feared, the people might not approve. Such a course is dangerously close to that personal government which defies the popular will.

Something To Hide.

The refusal of Robert A. Pinkerton, head of the the Pinkerton Detective Agency, to turn over to the Senate Civil Liberties Committee labor espionage reports recently made by his operatives leaves a distinctly bad impression. The argument advanced for holding back the documents—that being handwritten, they might reveal the identity of the operatives—is scarcely convincing. It arouses the suspicion that the Pinkerton Agency is seeking to hide facts regarding its activities for which the public interest demands full publicity.

The agency's record, as already revealed at hearings of the Civil Liberties Committee, is not one which augurs well for better industrial relations. It is not only the committee's right, but its duty as part of the task of getting to the bottom of labor espionage practices, to examine all available records—including those which Mr. Pinkerton apparently hopes to keep secret.

Where "Angels" Fear To Tread.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Federal Theater's revival of Marlowe's "Faustus" has gone into its second week of Broadway success. This is no isolated hit. It is significant because it constitutes just one more triumph for that redoubtable woman of the theater, Hallie Flanagan, under whom WPA plays have scored repeatedly—not only in New York, but in countless remote villages that had never seen a play before. It is the Federal Theater's fifth hit in less than a year so far as Broadway is concerned. The others were T. S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral," a Negro "Macbeth," "Chalk Dust" and one edition of "Living Newspaper."

The importance of these titles is that they connote themes no "angel" or commercial producer would dare touch. All were experiments, all vindications of Hallie Flanagan's credo: "If this weren't the beginning of something new, it wouldn't be worth starting." She has pushed that notion to success over truly epic harassments—the brutal skepticism of critics and producers, the early intolerance of Equity (the union) and the inadequacy of her budget. Her own magnetism, courage and kindliness have enabled this former director of Vassar's Experimental Theater to weld 12,000 bedraggled theatrical castoffs into an army of working artists striving to realize a principle of hers: that American theaters must express the previously inarticulate cultural desires of the whole Nation.

I Raise You Two Billions!

More On The Supreme Court Issue

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A large portion of the American people have allowed some utterly unfounded baseless aura of sentiment to cloud their views of the Supreme Court. The court is but one branch of the Government and is as subject to human fallibilities and resultant criticism as the legislative and the executive. Aside from sentiment, may I observe a few cold facts.

1. The Supreme Court has been changed in number six times before (since the Constitution was effected in 1789).

2. The court in any form is merely a creature of the legislature. The Constitution merely stipulates that a Federal court system be instituted.

3. The President's policies in general have been very recently wholeheartedly approved as have Congressional policies. The court is more than a decade from the electorate, some members having been approved by the electorate (through the indirect Senate approval of Presidential appointments) as long as a quarter century ago.

4. In order to effect the general policies recently approved by the electorate in their indorsement of President Roosevelt and the Congress, it seems very obvious, and did so prior to the election, that the court must change policy or suffer alteration.

However, by far the most important points are that:

1. The Constitution does not specifically provide for the Supreme Court and thus, of course, does not give the court the power of adjudging legislative or executive acts "unconstitutional." If critics seek an example of assumption of dictatorial power here it is in an extreme, "unconstitutional" form.

2. The American system of government provides for a system of checks and balances made possible by three coordinates, counterbalanced divisions, the judicial, legislative and executive. Since the Supreme Court, which should be the last to so act, has assumed a dominant position not checked by either of the other division, the President's plan would be but a restoration of the constitutional balance.

WARD McCABE.
Washington, Feb. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The article written by Mr. George W. Galloway and published in your paper of February 10 is a fitting answer to your very critical editorial of February 6 in regard to the message of the President advocating a reconstruction of our judicial system. This article should be read by every fair-minded citizen in the United States.

It is a significant fact that all those who oppose the proposition of the President, be they Republicans, so-called Democrats, Liberty Leaguers or what not, are clamoring for an amendment to the Constitution. This seems fair on the face of it, but to analyze it, is nothing but a disengenuous scheme to forestall and defeat all liberal legislation that is offered by the Congress for the benefit of the people.

They know, and you know, that there are 13 to 15 industrial States, upon whose Legislatures would be centered the most powerful lobbies in the history of the country and highly paid lawyers and crafty politicians would see that they would defeat any such amendment.

Aside from this, granting that the amendment might eventually carry, judging by the fate of the child labor amendment, it would take years to accomplish. Meanwhile our Republican friends hope to get back in power and an amendment would be futile, as we would return to the old reactionary days and meanwhile the country would suffer, as it has in the past. The Supreme Court would still rule the country.

If the weak-kneed Democrats and liberals of other parties are fooled by this subtle subterfuge, after having for three times been given an unqualified indorsement by the people I hope they will be repudiated by the people themselves at the next election, as they deserve to be. W. SMITH.
Washington, Feb. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hitler and Mussolini have not as much power as is asked in the message to Congress by our President. I believe that 80 per cent of the Democrats will resent such an unreasonable request.

CHARLES BAKER.
Mason City, Iowa, Feb 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Soon after the election a letter was published in The Post from one who accused the majority voters of being "dumb." He was right. They were just plain dumb and the Negroes were the dumbest of all.

The bulk of my race forms two-thirds of the relief army (just two jumps from slavery in some sections of the country). How could it permit the glamour of an infectious grin and the hazy promise of great things to be done for it in the future to lure it from the party of Abraham Lincoln?

If their new idol seeks to enslave the Supreme Court, how long will it be before the Constitution is stabbed in the back? And what of the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments?

Yes, they are dumb! dumb!! dumb!!! TOPSY.
Washington, Feb. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What evidence is there that the forced retirement of Louis D. Brandeis would aid the Supreme Court in coming to wiser decision? Or that giving him a younger colleague would raise the average mentality of the court?

What evidence is there that submerging Chief Justice Charles Hughes under 14 colleagues would restore him to the intellectual vigor that he displayed when in the court in his first term? Was he abler then than now?

What evidence is there that 15 men would come to wiser conclusions than nine?

Or do the powers in the executive branch of this tripartite government wish to put an end to any thinking by the justices and reduce them to rubber stamps? Is this tripartite government to be abandoned?

What would a referendum of the entire subject to a popular vote bring forth? Certainly the last election was no mandate to enlarge the court, or to limit the age of justices to 70 years. The Democrats disavowed any such intention. The Republican Party charged that this was the secret Democratic intent; the Democrats called this "slander."

The next move, if this wins, may be a call from the people for the popular election of the Supreme Court, and for a definite term of not more than 12 years. Such a move would mean that the people would be asked whether or not to regard the Supreme Court as a third house of legislation. But is constitutional interpretation properly mere legislation? Is it not rather the endeavor of America to find and to maintain long policies, permanent principles?

WILLIAM E. CHANCELLOR.
Norwood, Ohio, Feb. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I express appreciation of your editorial of February 12? You have shown quite clearly the inconsiderate willfulness of the present Administration, and the determination that all the opposing forces shall meet their master. Your many conservative, commonsense friends do thank you, and ask you to continue your criticism of the erratic tendencies toward dictatorship of the Administration and its unbalanced supporters. E. T. STEEL.
Washington, Feb. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recent events in the way of Presidential speeches, evidence the very acute need of the Court powers he is seeking to subordinate to his will.

Such power may, in the future, curb executives who misinterpret mandates and develop a tendency to become Napoleonic. Be careful, my Congressman, be careful!

FORGOTTEN MAN.
Washington, Feb. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Roosevelt proposed packing the Courts; but first he should unpack it. I am opposed to packing the Court by Mr. Roosevelt, but I am just as opposed to the Northeast continuing its packing of the Supreme Court, the Tariff Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, etc., so that all, particularly the Negro, must continue economic slaves to the Mayflower gang.

William Lowndes Yancey, at the Charleston Convention, 1859, told the North that it would rule by numbers, not by impartial Supreme Court or the Constitution. And apparently the Constitution has been used by Mr. Lincoln and his successors only to pauperize agriculture and to intimidate the Saxon-Scotch South.

Mr. Lincoln was not only responsible for the War Between the States, but for the economic war ending, temporarily, with Hoover, while Mr. Roosevelt's ideas are no better for America than was Mr. Hoover's or Mr. Lincoln's. And Mr. Lincoln will be partly responsible for a much greater war if the future judges on the Supreme Court continue to license the Mayflower racketeers to maintain their monopolies while applying the letter of the law to agriculture and the Saxon-Scotch South.

G. G. MOORE.
Washington, Feb. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When considering Roosevelt's speech to nullify Court objection to future unconstitutional measures, you have to delve down deep for motives. Go back to the NRA and the fabulous Gen. Johnson. The NRA was to manufacture recovery by the sheer genius of its conceptions by a process heretofore unpatented. The forgotten man was to erupt prayers of gratitude into the clear night air.

The Court threw the NRA out the window. A mistake. Articles tossed out of windows may bounce back—off the tough domes of some Congress members.

Because of the Court, the New Deal had to go out and seek political alibis (to convince the majority) for the recovery that went through despite the deal, the President and his horse-and-buggy defeatisms. "We planned it that way," fooled a few.

It now appears that the President is trying to tack on the fatuous and discarded NRA in proof that it caused the recovery which we have witnessed taking place in spite of labor leaders, the New Deal and two political campaigns. But with some real help from industrial royalists and princes of privileges—especially those who neither asked nor received favors from Government deficits. E. G. BARR.
Washington, Feb. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President should expect aid in his proposals for the judiciary from the Jeffersonian—Democrats, who claimed to be exponents of Jefferson's political philosophy. These gentlemen among whom are some of the most outstanding lawyers in the land no doubt feel as Jefferson felt regarding the judiciary, and all being honorable men their influence is expected to carry much weight.

I trust the wisdom expounded by Jefferson will not be wasted on a tempestuous sea of futile arguments, but to the contrary may form the corner stone of the Federal judiciary. If such be the case we all may then have confidence in and find reason for reverence of and pride in our Federal court's.

KEMPER W. YANCEY.
Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the roll is called in the Senate of the United States on the Supreme Court legislation we will know who are the statesmen and who are the demagogues. The House, with few exceptions, has no statesmen. Impeachment proceedings of the Chief Executive ought be possible, but the House, where it must originate, is controlled by the White House. There is plenty of evidence, legal authorities know that. The public is blind.

Virginia Knight Errant.

EDMUND GRAY, a Virginia Quaker, once held in his hands the destiny of nations. Sometime prior to 1750, he led a band of Quakers to Georgia and settled there near Augusta. His community was called Brandon, later Wrightsborough. After a few dramatic years in which he saved the land grants to the people and caused the royal governor to return to England, this knight errant again led his Quaker followers to a new home.

Georgia Province had once been a part of South Carolina. The latter's southern boundary was held to be the Altamaha river; however, in the middle of the eighteenth century, the boundary of this English colony and that of the Spanish colony of Florida had not been clearly defined. Between them lay a no-man's land which each watched closely but neither ventured to claim.

The nearest Spanish settlement was beyond the St. John's river. The stretch of unclaimed territory between these rivers was uninhabited save by Indians. It was here, at William's Bluff on the Satilla river in what is now Florida, that Gray's colony settled.

• • • •

February 3, 1758, Gray set up a temporary government designed to function until the settlement should become a part of either Georgia or South Carolina. He then wrote to both provinces asking that his colony be accepted under the dominion of the King of England whose subjects they desired to remain.

Hearing of Gray's settlement, the Spanish governor at St. Augustine invited Gray to come under Spain's jurisdiction by moving south of the St. John's river. Gray declined and related the affair to Gov. Ellis, of Georgia. Both English governors now found themselves in a difficult position. Neither wished jurisdiction over the new colony for fear that Spain would counter-claim the territory. Yet to disclaim it might be to surrender England's right to it should the king wish to claim it at a later date.

They were not certain of Gray's loyalty. Located within the disputed territory, might he not cause war with Spain? Yet, on the other hand, should war come, would not the new colony be an outpost and serve as a buffer for their present frontier? Yet, if Gray were disloyal, might he not spy upon the colonies and perhaps even incite the Indians against them?

• • • •

So both governors emphatically disclaimed jurisdiction and each "passed the buck" to the other and both passed it, jointly, to the London Company and to the king. However, because Gray refused the Spanish governor's invitation, Gov. Ellis granted Gray a license to trade with the Indians. London promptly censured Ellis for "violating the neutrality of debatable territory."

About this time, the Spanish governor sent a company of 50 men to New Hanover to order Gray out. Gray staunchly replied that his colony would conduct themselves "according to the orders they should receive from their superiors"

The English authorities were now all agreed that Gray should be made to leave the disputed territory. Each governor suggested that the other governor do it. Later, Gov. Ellis claimed that Georgia, alone, had the right to grant land south of the boundary river. Meanwhile, Gray asked South Carolina for a grant of land where their colony was located. The governor ordered him to move and offered him land for his colony in South Carolina. He ordered him further not to get into trouble with the Indians. Gray promised to keep peace but refused to move. He held that to do so would acknowledge Spain's right to the territory

• • • •

So the governor told the London authorities that "something must be done." The Board of Trade agreed. Finally they ordered the disruption of the colony. Informed of this descision, South Carolina voted that these orders be "strictly pursued," but the governor of Georgia counselled delay because he feared that to destroy the settlement would arouse the Creek Indians against the English. By this time, he had decided that the St. John's river and not the Altamaha was the boundary of his province. This was precisely the position which the Spanish governor had taken when he invited Gray's colony to move south of the St. John's. Everybody except Gray seems to have overlooked the point.

The King of England now took a hand and commanded his governors, each, to appoint a commissioner to go to New Hanover and order the settlers out. Accordingly they went, and Gray received them courteously. The settlers were reluctant to leave, but Gray prevailed upon them to obey their king.

On the first of March, just 28 days after the King's messengers arrived in New Hanover, this loyal Virginian for the third time, lead his followers to the promised land. So the deserted village became once more no man's land, ultimately to become Spanish territory, lost to the English king through stupidity.

A young subaltern joined a guards depot, his upper lip as yet unadorned with even the suspicion of down. The adjutant sent for him.

"And not one of those Chaplin affairs—a proper mustache."

"Yes, sir."

The interview was finished, but the subaltern did not move, so the adjutant asked: "Well, what more do you want?"

"Any particular color, sir?"

Iron Men

By M. T. G.

Deep-Water Sailors.

The following is reprinted from a recent issue of the Christian Science Monitor.

YOU HAVE HEARD a good deal about the Australian "grain race," the brave ships that yearly engage in it—those few survivors of the grand epoch of sail—and their lusty Viking crews. You have read a hundred tales of these mighty 3,000-tonners and their long sea trek of 12,000 miles around the Horn to "Falmouth for orders." Stirring it is to the most lethargic fancy and you feel that this last great saga of deep water merits all the attention it gets.

But the North Atlantic, the "Western Ocean" of all sailors, has its Vikings, too, though no thrilling tales are written of it, no photographs published of sea-washed decks and torn sails, no credit at all vouchsafed these preservers of an even greater tradition than that of the Cape Horn windjammers. For who has ever heard of the Newfoundland "salt race," the traversing of the most dangerous sea of all in season and out, summer and winter, through calm and storm, or of the crews of these 90-tonners, the Viking breed indeed?

And yet just the other day, wandering along the water front in Lisbon during the tarry of a big liner on which I was bound eastward, I caught sight, among the Portuguese fishing boats, the coal barges and the battered old tramps, of a little three-masted schooner. She bore the unromantic name of Dazzle, which, even had you not noted her hailing port under it, would at once have informed you that she was a stranger in the Tagus. That hailing port was St. John's, Newfoundland.

* * * * *

SHE WAS unloading salt fish. They were flat and hard as thick pasteboard, for they had been packed down into the schooner's hold for many days. Baskets of them came up at the end of a hand-tackle, were loaded upon wheelbarrows and trundled off down the wharf, by and by to lend a trifle of variety to the scanty fare of the Portuguese worker and peasant.

She was a curious-appearing craft, the Dazzle, not especially trim in build and possessed of nothing like the grace of those other small but defiant deep-sea vessels, the Banks fishermen. Her bow was blunt and her stern was square and her model suggested something of days long past. She had three stumpy masts and she carried no less than four jibs, useful bits of sail on the frequent occasions in mid-Atlantic when boisterous weather compels heaving to.

I saw a man whom I knew at once to be a Newfoundlander standing upon the little quarterdeck beside the wooden steering wheel. Said I, from some way above on the edge of the wharf, "Well, my friend, you've come a long distance." He removed a straw from his mouth and squinted up at me.

He was long-limbed and a little gaunt of face, slow-moving and leisurely of speech, a typical Newfoundlander. I asked him how long the passage had been. To my astonishment he replied, "Seventeen days."

Marvelous. I glanced sidewise at the blunt bows, observing that there must have been a following half gale from the northwest.

"So'west, mostly," he corrected laconically. "But," he added, growing astonishingly loquacious as he marked my interest, not unmixed with admiration, "we wun't do that goin' home, no sir!"

* * * * *

NO, THEY WOULD be bucking head winds most of the way across those 2,500 miles of the Western Ocean in winter which often give pause even to the men of the big liners. And yet, taking in a cargo of salt to replace the salt fish, the little Dazzle would presently start back home to Newfoundland, only to fill up once more with the Portuguese peasant's greatest delicacy, dried codfish. By no possible good fortune could she expect to encounter even relatively calm weather much of the time between October and May. Flying water, probably snow, certainly ice, would mark her passages, and yet to this man it clearly was nothing worth talking about.

And so, for myself, I take off my hat, not to the men of the grain fleet, though they are seamen, too, but the soft-spoken, unostentatious, resourceful Vikings of Newfoundland, the men of the salt schooners, sailors of the sort that accompanied Magellan and Columbus and Drake and Bligh and who, on this roaring Western Ocean run, season in and season out, maintain the finest traditions of the sea.

Jersey Politics

Democratic House Coupled With Gov. Hoffman's Coolness Toward G. O. P. Senate Majority Brings Trenton Deadlock.

By Eugene Pharo.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Trenton.

NEW JERSEY at present reminds the observer of nothing so strongly as the flustered horseman who mounted his steed and rode off furiously in all directions. It is, perhaps, a result of the hodge-podge character of the State itself; at any rate, the conflict among parties, sections and political leaders has resulted in a tangle of interests that has produced virtual paralysis of governmental action. With any number of bright ideas and even more brilliant prejudices, the State is going nowhere at a breakneck speed.

Some of the contrasts which are basic to this situation grew out of the November 3 election. Some of them seem to be a permanent characteristic of the State. To understand the general background against which existing conflicts have occurred the following statistics from the recent election are useful. They showed presidential votes of 1,083,549 for the Democrats; 719,421 for the Republicans, and for the Communists, 1,590. The reason the Communists' almost overpowering total is reported will appear further on.

There is in the gubernatorial chair at present a Republican Governor, who, on more than one occasion, has admitted publicly his lack of confidence in the leadership of his own party, and his sense of frustration at the opposition of the Democrats who have control of the House of Assembly, and who may turn out in the end to have control of the Senate. He has claimed that most of his intentions are opposed alike by frank enemies and false friends.

Patronage Questions Create Senate Deadlock.

IN THE SENATE, which at present seems to have a membership of 11 Republicans and 10 Democrats, the tendency of Governor Hoffman to conflict with members of his own party, has resulted in a deadlock over patronage. Sabotage of administration measures has been promised by one of the Republican senators under the Governor comes to see eye to eye with him on appointments in his home county. With a Democratic Assembly to hurdle in the first instance, this creates a nice area of static. The additional fact that the apparent majority of senators of a generally Republican persuasion may be upset as a result of court proceedings over the alleged fraudulent election of one of them, introduces another note of uncertainty.

The bloc of Democratic senators is able, and seems to be willing, to combine; whereas divisions momentarily threaten to arise among the Republicans, because of the disharmony indicated by the Governor's own statement. Yet the Democratic bloc is precariously held together, for one of the senators was elected to the United States Senate in November. So far he has failed to go to Washington to assume office, because of the fact that his party still needs him in the State Senate. This is William H. Smathers, of Atlantic County, whose bailiwick is just above that of State Senator William C. Hunt, representative of Cape May County, whom the Republicans claim was elected by a 437 majority over his Democratic opponent, Jesse D. Ludlam.

As to Senator Hunt's election, the Democrats are seeking to prove in court that if illegal voters had not been rung in, Ludlam would have been seated by a majority of at least 500 votes. Court proceedings have been dragging on for weeks, with the most highly skilled lawyers of each party contributing their services to the opposing politicians, because of the disproportionate effect the 437 votes have had on the complexion of the Senate. In the meantime Senator Hunt has occupied the seat but has taken no active part in Senate affairs.

Gubernatorial Race In Fall Also Complicates.

THE FACT that New Jersey will elect a new Governor in November—if for no other reason than because under the law no Governor can succeed himself—complicates matters still further. This is illustrated in the matter of a law that makes full payment of municipal salaries mandatory. During recent years this law has been suspended annually by action of the Legislature, because of the inability of municipalities to live up to it. This year, while both parties admit that it must be suspended again, and while municipal budgets have been held up throughout the State until it is suspended, neither party is willing to sponsor the necessary bill.

Taxation, for relief purposes, for schools, and for ordinary State purposes, is in a similar deadlock. It is generally admitted by all parties that the basis of taxation must be broadened, in order to remove from real estate some of the insufferable burdens that under the existing system it has to bear. This involves, according to Gov. Hoffman and some of the Republican Senators, the imposition of a sales tax, as well as income and business franchise taxes. But the sales tax was imposed about a year ago and produced such a howl throughout the State that it was repealed. No one wants to sponsor it now, for fear it will automatically insure the election of the opposing party's candidate for Governor in November. In the meantime relief funds are being transferred from funds built up for road maintenance. And other services are on the verge of starvation.

Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, the quiet-speaking but apparently irresistible boss of the Democratic Party, has already announced that the next Governor of the State will be A. Harry Moore, who has held the office twice and is now serving as United States Senator from New Jersey. No one among the Democrats has thought seriously to question this statement; first, because Hague has said that it is so, and secondly, because Senator Moore is very popular, and probably would be elected.

Republicans Show Same Lack Of Unity.

THERE IS no similar unity of purpose among the Republicans, although it is generally assumed that a strong contender for their party nomination will be Senator Lester H. Clee, of Essex County. Senator Clee is head of the New Jersey Good Government League, and is far from being a slavishly regular member of his own party.

This is partly due to the fact that he is as much, or more, a reformer, as a politician; being a member of the ministry, regularly filling a Newark pulpit. He has also become well known throughout the State as a speaker before civic organizations, women's clubs and similar bodies.

It is conceivable that sufficient sentiment might be built up behind the candidacy of Senator Clee to lead to his election over Moore; not because of any weakness in Moore's appeal, but as a rebuke to the suzerainty of Mayor Hague. For it would be too much to say that the power of the Democratic boss is not deeply resented in various parts of the State, some of it because of the character of ideas for which his leadership stands.

Communist Drive Promoted By Hague.

THE VOTE of the Communist Party at the recent election was quoted above, because of its obvious unimportance; yet of recent months Mayor Hague has sponsored a drive on Communists and all who might be associated with them, that recently led to a rebuke from the courts. The possible relationship between this drive and the anti-Communist campaign of the Vatican, and the direct connection between the Jersey City czar and the Roman church, has been pointed out by more than one of the Republican legislators. While their opinions have been expressed to a large degree privately, for fear of raising the perennial bogey of religious intolerance, they suggest—in that privacy—a gradual penetration of the State civil service by members of the Catholic church, apparently carried out in accordance with a policy congenial to Mr. Hague.

The legal ruling on Communist activities referred to was reported from Jersey City on the day of Roosevelt's second inauguration, and was made by Vice Chancellor James F. Fielder, former Democratic Governor of the State. It was a restraint on Jersey City police against interfering with Communist attempts to hire halls and to hold "any meeting which is conducted lawfully." Attempts at such interference had been made, the Communists charged, as part of a campaign by the mayor, which included a ban on picketing in the maritime strike, because, Hague charged, the strike was organized by Communist agitators.

Vice Chancellor Fielder, in his ruling, asserted that the right of "citizens to assemble together to promulgate their views peacefully is absolute, no matter how radical or shocking others may believe those views to be."

Off the Record.

The Lion Stirs

By Barnet Nover

DURING THE LAST five years, Great Britain, by pursuing the path of financial orthodoxy, has regularly managed to balance the budget. In this respect the London government has been almost alone among the major governments of the world.

The secret of the British success in matching governmental outgo with income is to be found, in part, in the rapid recovery of industry which has kept the flow of receipts into the exchequer at an encouraging rate, in part in the maintenance of taxes at a very high level and, in part, in the reduction of governmental expenditures to the lowest possible figure. British efforts to avoid such mounting deficits as those that are plaguing France, the United States and other nations have, indeed, been exemplary. But in the face of the present world situation it is now problematical whether they can be continued much longer.

THE GOVERNMENT is fully determined that Great Britain must not lag behind the other powers in rearmament efforts. But it is admitted by the chancellor of the exchequer that the added costs involved in such a program cannot come out of current receipts.

They will have to come out of borrowing. In the near future, therefore, and at intervals thereafter, rearmament loans may be floated up to an authorized total of £400,000,000 ($2,000,000,000). Not all of this sum may actually be used. But insofar as that money is spent it will be in addition to the $1,000,000,000, which Great Britain is already spending annually for armament purposes.

Sooner or later, it is clear, this borrowing will have to be made good by taxation. The British income taxpayer is already turning over nearly a quarter of his income, above $800, to the government. He now has to face the grim possibility of being compelled to dig deeper into his pockets to pay for additional battleships, naval bases, airplanes and artillery.

NO DOUBT there will be, as there already has been, considerable grumbling by individuals over this outlook. Yet the British nation, as a whole, is utterly convinced that there is no alternative for Great Britain but to rearm, cost what it may. All parties, including the Laborites, are committed to such a program.

The British efforts in this particular are obviously not unique. They are part of a world-wide process whose potentially evil consequences everybody recognizes. But the tide of armaments is sweeping even the most peaceful nations along with it. Indeed, as Premier Blum has pointed out, rearmament is now so strongly linked with every phase of economic activity in the various nations that, even if it were possible to do so, it might be disastrous to put an immediate stop to it. This is not the least tragic aspect of the situation.

From the British point of view, rapid rearmament is for Great Britain a double necessity. An enlarged system of defense is necessary, the British believe, in order to safeguard the nation and the empire against outside attack. But rearmament is also essential, they feel, if Great Britain is to continue to play in world affairs the role to which it is entitled by its size, its wealth and its historic position.

CERTAINLY, nothing has been more striking during recent years than the defeatism manifested by successive British governments in the field of foreign affairs.

Repeatedly, although not always adequately, have British statesmen given their support to proposals intended to bring about a general appeasement in the European situation. Great Britain gave its approval to the Barthou plan of 1934 for a general system of regional agreements. It supported the Stresa plan. It threw in its weight behind the League efforts to solve the Saar question. It took the leadership in the League's sanctionist efforts against Italy at the time of the Ethiopian war. Recently, it has persistently sought to get the Third Reich to collaborate with other European powers in a program of international co-operation.

THESE EFFORTS have met with little ultimate success. In addition to such major snubs as Italy's defiant refusal to abandon its Ethiopian campaign, there have been a succession of mihor ones such as Germany's cavalier disregard of the Eden questionnaire and the unwillingness of the Fascist nations to follow the British lead on the Spanish nonintervention problem. If such snubs have been swallowed that has been to no small extent because Great Britain has not been sure enough of the state of its defenses to take any stand that might lead to a real showdown.

Now the rearmament program is in full swing. At the end of another two or three years, the British navy will have been overhauled and expanded, while the air force may then be in a position to stand comparison with the most powerful on the continent. At the same time the industrial structure of the kingdom will be more definitely a part of the defense system than it now is. With its defenses thus strengthened, Great Britain will, it is confidently expected, be able to speak in strong terms to those nations now successfully twisting the lion's tail.

NOT THE LEAST significant aspect of British rearmament, therefore, is its potential diplomatic consequences. Together with parallel French efforts the democratic powers of western Europe may be in a position, in the course of time, to take a really strong line on European affairs. It is the defeatism of the democracies, far more than their supposed weakness, which has enabled the Fascist dictatorships to take the lead, with such lamentable consequences to the fabric of European peace.

With each passing day the present German and Italian military advantage becomes relatively less. The intensity with which the Third Reich is pushing the colonial issue at this time, when Great Britain is still in a mood to make concessions (though perhaps not that kind of concessions) and Italy is pursuing its interventionist program in Spain shows that Duce and Fuehrer are determined to make hay while the sun shines.

Now Great Britain is beginning to catch up. The prospect is distinctly unpleasant from the point of view of the British taxpayer. But the fact that the British government is taking a strong line on this subject gives hope, that before long, it will take an equally strong and forthright line in the matter of the organization of European peace. The hitherto tame British lion is sharpening a new set of claws.

Ernest J. Simmons

By William Lyon Phelps

A few weeks ago I wrote an article for this page on the new one-volume edition of the Works of Pushkin, the centenary of whose death the world celebrates this year. This volume is mainly the work of Mr. and Mrs. Avrahm Yarmolinsky (Babette Deutsch.) He made and edited the 800 pages of Pushkin's verse and prose, and Babette Deutsch translated into English most of the poems. And she did it in the most admirable fashion, with accuracy, scholarship, skill and taste. That volume is published by Random House, New York.

And now, also in this centenary year, comes from the Harvard University Press, a book that I have hoped to see and have been waiting for, for 40 years. This is the first complete and authentic biography of Pushkin, written in the English language.

The title of the work is "Pushkin." The author is Ernest J. Simmons. The volume contains nearly 500 pages, has an introduction, bibliography, voluminous notes and an index. It is definite and authoritative and is essential for all those who wish to know the facts in Pushkin's turbulent career and the reasons why he is still not only the most popular but the greatest poet who ever wrote in Russian. The translations in the next are made by the biographer.

Pushkin has often been called the Russian Byron, and indeed while wholly original, he is like Byron in his life and in his mental attitude and in his poems. Both possessed in an astonishing measure passionate romantic feeling with cynical humor and wit, qualities that in most minds could not live together. Both men, in their relations with women, were promiscuous and thoroughly dissipated; both men made the most serious error of their lives when they chose a wife; both died in the thirties, Byron at the age of 36, Pushkin when 37. Byron's masterpiece Don Juan (pronounced Jewan), had romance and satire and wit and humor and flippancy and grace; the same qualities are all resplendent in Pushkin's long poem, "Eugene Onegin."

This biography is written in an interesting, vivacious narrative style, impartial without being dry. There is no attempt to be clever or epigrammatical, or to call the reader's attention away from the hero to the biographer; the author stays in the background and keeps the light steadily on the protagonist. It is a thoroughly good book.

Canadian Defense

Debate At Ottawa Puts Premier On Record As Denying That British War Will Necessarily Involve Dominion.

By William Marchington.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Ottawa.

WHEN the Minister of Finance laid the estimates of Federal expenditures for the fiscal year 1937-38 before the Canadian Parliament last month he revealed that the King ministry has elected to choose a middle path in the question of defence. It steers a course between the desires of the ardent imperialists, who hold that the British Commonwealth is an indivisible political entity, requiring a common cooperative plan of defence, and the views of the extreme nationalists and isolationists, who, believing that Canada is entitled to take full advantage of the comparative security conferred upon her by her geographical position and the friendliness of her nearest neighbor, should spend as little money as possible on armaments and avoid all commitments which might necessitate their use.

The estimates showed that there had been allotted to the department of national defense, which has charge of the army, the navy and the air force, roughly $35,000,000, which represents an increase of about $11,500,000 over the sum voted a year ago. This follows an increase of $5,000,000 in the fiscal year 1936-37. Thus Canada's defense appropriation has been almost doubled in two years.

PREMIER M'KENZIE KING.

The ministry has based its defence policy upon a declaration of the Imperial Conference of 1923, which was reaffirmed in 1928, to the effect that while it was for the governments of the different parts of the British Commonwealth to decide the nature and extent of defence, "the primary responsibility of each portion of the Commonwealth "is for its own defence." So most of the additional money made available is to be spent on armaments for the defence of Canadian territory.

The Royal Canadian Air Force is to acquire 102 new planes and have its personnel increased by 48 officers and 565 men. Its reserve corps is also to be augmented and the shore defences are to be strengthened by a series of new coastal batteries at strategic points, the construction of four new minesweepers and the provision of a variety of other defensive equipment.

King Had Rejected More Elaborate Plans.

The King cabinet, which is understood to have rejected a much more ambitious program formulated by the officials of the department of national defence, knew that the increase provided for would be too small to please the imperialists, but it was relieved to find as the result of a Liberal Party caucus that most of its French-Canadian supporters were prepared, although with some reluctance, to indorse it.

However, Mr. J. S. Woodsworth, leader of the C. C. F. Party, which advocates a Socialist program, foreboded some secret commitments for Canada's participation in a European war. Late in January he initiated a full-dress debate on this issue by moving a resolution which invited the House of Commons to indorse three principles for Canadian foreign policy. He first urged that under existing international conditions in the event of war, Canada should remain strictly neutral regardless of who the belligerents might be; secondly, that at no time should Canadian citizens be permitted to make profits out of supplying war munitions or materials; and, thirdly, that the Canadian government should make every effort to discover and remove the causes of international friction and social injuctice.

Arguing his case with great force and ability he accused the government of failing to evolve any policy of its own but of being content to tag along following the lead of Britain or of, what was worse in his eyes, of trying to escape responsibility for any very active policy.

Premier Mackenzie King intervened early in the debate, declaring that he was in cordial agreement with the third of Mr. Woodsworth's principles and in partial agreement with the second, but that he could not possibly subscribe to the first because if it was adopted by the House, which must retain the right to decide about Canada's participation in any war, its hands would be tied beforehand. He also was careful to explain that the defense estimates had been framed solely to meet needs which the government deemed imperative for Canada in the present troubled state of the world and that not a single item had been included as the result of consulation with the British government beyond some recourse to expert opinion, which was felt desirable in the common interest.

Explicit Statement Demanded By Socialist.

MR. WOODSWORTH then interrupted to ask for an explicit statement as to whether the Dominion might actually be committed to war by the government without the authority of Parliament, although not to the extent of sending troops out of the country. To this Mr. King replied:

Most certainly not. Our policy is that Parliament alone can commit Canada. I cannot make that too clear. At the present time there are no commiments as far as Canada is concerned, to participated in any war. Equally there are no commitments of which I am aware or of wich any one eles is aware whereby we agree to remain neutral under all circumstances. The policy of the government with respect to participation and neutrality is that Parliament will decide what is to be done.

Here was a frank repudiation of the hitherto accepted doctrine that when Britain is at war Canada is at war. Mr. King went on to explain that when any crisis relating to foreign policy arose the government would follow the line which he believed was favored by the great majority of the Canadian people. It would, he said, take into account the interests of all those with whom Canada might be associated but it would approach any problem presented primarily from the interests of Canada and make its decision in the light of them. Under these circumstances he opposed any pronouncement for neutrality at a time when the paramount need was for a united front among the British and other peoples who cherished certain ideals of liberty and democracy.

There was no attack upon his statement of policy from the Conservative benches and Mr. King has definitely served notice on the British government that she must not count upon Canada's help in any kind of European war.

Rich India Ruler To Ride 1910 Auto In Jubilee Parade

Hyderabad, India, Feb. 12 (AP).—The world's richest but pennywise ruler, Nizam of Hyderabad, was so happy tonight that he dug up two more automobiles, 1907 vintage, to add to the splendor of his golden jubilee procession tomorrow.

The ruler himself will ride in his 26-year-old Rolls Royce, resplendent with a grand dome so that he can stand and receive the acclaim of his 14,500,000 subjects. Streamline fenders and gold and silver trappings were put on, but the Nizam, reputedly worth more than $2,000,000,000, set a $500 limit on the overhaul job.

Cause for his joy was one of the last acts of Edward of England before his abdication. A letter from Edward declared the Nizam's heir apparent should be given the title "His Highness, Prince of Berar," and thereby settled an old dispute over sovereignty of the territory.

Senate Neutrality Committee to Meet

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will meet today to begin framing permanent neutrality legislation to keep the United States out of war.

Chairman Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, said last night the committee would consider every proposal now before the Senate and here witnesses' views on amendments drawn to strengthen the existing law, which expires May 1. Secretary of State Hull is expected to be the first witness.

Bills and amendments to existing law have been introduced by Senators Pittman (Democrat), Nevada; Lewis (Democrat), Illinois; Thomas (Democrat), Utah, and by Clark (Democrat), Missouri, on behalf of Nye (Republican), North Dakota; Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and Bone (Democrat), Washington, all members of the Senate Munitions Committee.

President Urges Fitting Jefferson Memorial Tribute

President Roosevelt yesterday took sides for the first time in the controversy over the proposed memorial to Thomas Jefferson, whether it should be non-utilitarian or in the form of an auditorium or some type of practical building.

His attitude, expressed in response to questions at his press conference, is that the former scheme is preferable, that a specific monument should be erected.

The President did not retract his indorsement of the movement to provide the Capital with an adequate auditorium but simply voiced approval of the policy of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission in centering its attention on designs for a structure camparable in spirit and dignity with the Lincoln Memorial.

He indicated that the memorial should be given priority over the auditorium in making appropriations. Congress has authorized, but not yet appropriated, $3,000,000 for the former project. A bill setting up a commission to study the auditorium question and make recommendations to Congress has passed both House and Senate and is awaiting the President's signature.

Mussolini Will Observe Italian Fleet Maneuvers

Rome, Feb. 12 (AP).—Italian naval circles disclosed today that Italy's fleet will maneuver under the eyes of Premier Mussolini, off the Libyan coast, between March 10 and 22.

Il Duce will be in Tripoli at that time to inaugurate a 1,250-mile asphalt road along the Libyan coast, linking French North Africa with Egypt. The maneuvers, described as "elaborate," will concern the problem of keeping an open line of communications between Italy and Libya.

Hayashi Meets Japanese Cry To Cut Budget

Army, Navy, However, Get 49.2 Per Cent of All Funds.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Feb. 12.—Confronted by popular indignation over rising prices and the prospect of higher taxes, the new cabinet of Gen. Senjuro Hayashi today revised its 1937-38 budget downwa d, but still alloted the army and navy a higher proportion of the estimates than ever before in peace-time, 49.2 per cent of the total.

The new budget, drafted by Finance Minister Toyotaro Yuki, calls for total expenditures of 2,769,000,000 yen (about $790,000,000), a reduction of 269,000,00 yen ($76,759,000) from the budget of Eiichi Baba, finance minister in the Hirota government which resigned January 23.

Even the representatives of the army and navy concented to small reductions in the record sums allotted the defense services for their huge programs of arms replenishment and war hip construction.

The new estimates allot to the army 704,000,000 yen ($201,000,000) and the navy 658,000,000 ($188,000,000), each 23,000,000 yen ($6,563,000) less than in the earlier budget.

The new budget, covering the period from April 1, 1937, to March 31, 1938, must be laid before the Diet (parliament) when it reassembles Sunday after three weeks' suspension due to the recent political crisis.

(Even with the reductions the Hayashi cabinet's budget—if accepted by Parliament, as it probably will be—will be the largest in the history of the empire, the army and navy appropriations also the largest on record, war-time or peace-time, and the proportion going to the two services a new peace-time record.)

Finance Minister Yuki, evidently heeding the outcry of the public and big business against the higher tax schedules proposed by the Hirota government, revised those downward also. Yuki, however, proposed heavier burdens on the wealthy and on big corporations.

Estate of Couzens Here Is $461,000

James E. Couzens, former Senator from Michigan and one-time partner of Henry Ford, left property valued at $461,000 in Washington when he died October 22, it was shown in District Court yesterday when a petition was filed to enable Michigan administrators to take over local assets.

The Senator owned a home in Wesley Heights valued at $30,000; an office building at 1437 K street northwest, valued at $250,000; a residence at 2850 Woodlawn drive northwest, valued at $90,000, and a residence at 1013 Sixteenth street northwest, valued at $85,000. His property here consisted of a $6,000 bank account.

Principal heirs are his widow, Mrs. Margaret A. Cousens; a son, Frank, who is mayor of Detroit, and three daughters, Mrs. Madeline C. Yaw and Edith Valerie Couzens, both of Bloomfield, Mich., and Mrs. Margo Couzens Chewning, of this city and Birmingham, Mich.

The petition filed here did not disclose the extent of the Senator's holdings in other States.

Security Pact Stand Reaffirmed by Belgium

London, Feb. 12 (AP).—Baron Emil de Cartier de Marchienne, Belgian ambassador to Great Britain, today presented his government's reply to a British note seeking views of Locarno powers on a proposed new security pact for Western Europe.

The note repeated declarations of King Leopold last October that Belgium was determined to be independent but would welcome pledges of protection from other powers.

Noon Services Are to Be Held By Rev. Glenn

Will Conduct Epiphany's Lenten Services; Episcopal Programs.

The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, rector of Christ Church, Cambridge, Mass., will be a visiting Lenten preacher in the Capital next week.

He will address daily noon Lenten services in Epiphany Church, and will appear before the Wednesday night Lenten meeting in St. John's Episcopal Church. The noon-day services in Epiphany Church will be held from 12:05 p. m. to 12:30 o'clock each day from Monday to Friday, inclusive.

Mr. Glenn was formerly secretary for college work in the department of religious education of the National Council of the Episcopal Church. He is noted for his work with the students of Harvard University.

At the 11 a. m. services in the Church of the Epiphany tomorrow, Dr. Z. B. Phillips, rector, will preach. At 8 p. m. the Rev. Richard Cartmell, assistant to the rector, will inaugurate a series of informal talks on "The Value of the Creeds of Christendom."

St. John's Church, Lafayette Square. The Rev. Oliver J. Hart, D. D., pastor, will preach at morning prayer and sermon services at 9:30 a. m. and 11 a. m. tomorrow. The Rev. James F. Madison, curate, will speak at the 8 p. m. service.

St. Paul's, near Washington Circle. During Lent litany will be sung as the choir moves in procession through the church aisles. The litany is concluded under the Rood and is followed immediately by the service of Holy Eucharist.

As a special act of devotion during the Lenten season, St. Paul's is having solemn evensong and benediction with sermon at 8 p. m. each Sunday night. The Rev. Calvert E. Buck will officiate at this service.

St. Paul's, Rock Creek. James R. Kirkland, former assistant U. S. district attorney in Washington, will speak at the Bohanan Bible Class at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow. He will discuss "A Religious Lesson From the Spanish Revolution."

The Rev. F. J. Bohanan, rector, will preach at 11 a. m. services tomorrow and also at 8 p. m. evening prayer.

Services at Holy Comforter Chapel will include 11 a. m. morning prayer and sermon by the Rev. William L. Mayo, minister in charge.

St. Thomas. The Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector, will conduct services at 8 a. m., 9:30 a. m. and 11 a. m. and at 8 p. m.

All Saints'. The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, rector, will have "Sincerity" as the subject of his 11 a. m. sermon. Holy Communion will be celebrated at the 7:30 a. m. service. Chevy Chase Community Lenten services will be conducted in the church Thursday night.

Grace. Morning prayer and sermon services will be conducted at 11 a. m. by the rector, the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde. The Rev. Karl G. Newell, pastor of Ryland M. E. Church, will speak at Lenten services Wednesday night.

St. Lukes. The Rev. Josiah Elliott, rector, will inaugurate a Lenten sermon series tomorrow morning at 11 a. m. morning prayer service.

Emory Methodist Has Anniversary

Emory Methodist Church, at 6100 Georgia avenue, where President Lincoln stood as he observed gunfire in the repulse of Gen. Jubal Early's attack on the Capital, will observe its 105th anniversary tomorrow.

The church has occupied the same site throughout its history, although events in American history altered its buildings. The superstructure of the church was dismantled during Gen. Early's invasion during the Civil War and the bricks from the church building were used in erecting quarters for the garrison then established on the site.

The basement was left intact as a detention barracks for prisoners. After the Civil War a stone chapel was built and this served as a worship place until the fourth edifice to be used as a church was dedicated in 1924.

Unitarians to Hear Dr. A. A. Stockdale

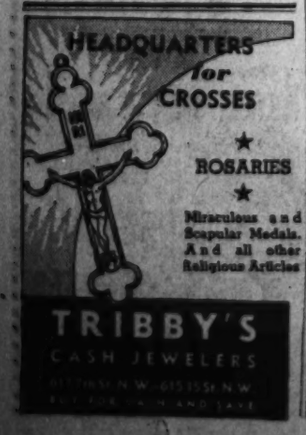
The Rev. Allen A. Stockdale, D. D., formerly minister of First Congregational Church, will occupy the pulpit of All Souls' Church, Unitarian, at 11 a. m. services tomorrow.

Speakers before the adult classes of the church school at 10 a. m. will be Dr. C. W. Hale, of the University of Maryland, and Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War.

Lewis C. Atwater will present a half-hour organ program of modern French music at 5 p. m.

Universalist National Memorial. "Our Common Father" is the theme on which the Rev. Frederic W. Perkins, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. tomorrow. This sermon begins a Lenten series on "The Lord's Prayer."

Paul Vogt will address the Adult Forum at 10:15 a. m.



Emory University Professor Will Deliver Sermon Series

Dr. W. A. Smart, Head of School's Biblical Theology Department, to Preach Twice Daily at Mount Vernon Place.

Dr. W. A. Smart, professor of Biblical theology at Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., will begin a series of preaching mission sermons in Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, tomorrow.

The visiting preacher will deliver a morning sermon at 11 a. m. services on "What Shall I Do with Jesus?" and will speak at the evening hour on "Worship."

Morning and evening meetings will be continued through next week. In morning services beginning at 10:30 a. m. Monday Dr. Smart will conduct a study of the minor prophets and Daniel. Evening services through the week will be at 8 p. m.

Dr. Smart is widely known as a platform lecturer. He gives addresses each year at several colleges including Sweetbrier, Randolph-Macon Woman's College. He left the pastorate of First Methodist Church in Charlottesville, Va., to take his present position at Emory University.

Under the direction of Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, other lectures on the general theme, "The Return to Religion."

Similar series have been conducted for the last eight years.

Dr. R. J. Clinchy Plans Lenten Sermon Topics

Congregational Minister to Conduct Services on Sunday Morning.

A comprehensive program of Lenten services was announced yesterday by Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, minister of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

Dr. Clinchy will preach a special series of Lenten sermons at the Sunday morning services upon the general theme, "Christian Affirmations," the first of which will be given tomorrow on the topic, "God Is More Than Creator."

The Thursday evening program will begin with a vesper hour of organ music and meditative prayers from 5:30 to 6 in the church auditorium. This will be followed by the Church Night supper at 6:15 at which there will be a series of addresses upon the theme, "Jesus in the Life of Today." The speakers are: February 18, the Rev. Worth M. Tippy, committee on the Church and Social Agencies, Washington; February 25, the Rev. Frederic W. Perkins, Universalist National Memorial Church; March 4, the Rev. Ralph D. Smith, Woodridge M. E. Church, Silver Spring; March 11, Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, the Washington Cathedral; March 18, the Rev. Walter M. Haushalter, the Christian Temple, Baltimore.

Each Tuesday evening Dr. Clinchy will lead a discussion in homes of the parishes in the city.

'Soul' Is Subject Of Lesson-Sermon

"Soul" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Psalms 62:1: "Truly my soul waiteth upon God: from him cometh my salvation."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name; worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness." (Psalms 29:2).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Soul, or Spirit, is God, unchangeable and eternal; and man coexists with and reflects Soul, God, for man is God's image."

A Woman's NEW YORK

New York, Feb. 12.

ALICE HUGHES.

WE MAY have thought, we mere women, that the art of beauty culture had gotten somewhere in the past decade, but I, for one, simply didn't know anything about such matters, and I've played guinea pig for the best of them.

Fifth avenue, in the Fifties, is now lined with Shrines of Beauty. No more beauty parlors, if you please, or even the tonier salons de beauté. These are downright shrines—complete with soft lights, sweet music, mural paintings, worshipping attendants and all the rest of it. For the two greatest rivals in their field, Arden and Rubinstein, are operating practically cheek by jowl, and each trying frantically to outglamor and outshine the other.

Rubinstein's shrine covers no less than five floors of an entire establishment. The first visit is to a doctor, in order to see that your blood pressure, while being made gorgeous, will not blow you to kingdom come as well. The other delights are too numerous to mention—save that I may add that there is a real beach, complete with sun and sand, and I suppose an attendant whooshing water in a pail to simulate surf.

Miss Arden's latest pride is her new exercise room—perdon me, "gymnasium moderne." It boasts a huge new Georgia O'Keefee painting, "The Miracle Flower," quite in the new O'Keefee mood, and is fitted with all the torture appliances of the day which make modern body culture such a thing of anguish.

But the battle of the beauticians is just now at its most thrilling. You should come over—but look out for flying lotions!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Rosamond Pinchot's life in the theater is a strange one. Many years ago, you remember, she played the nun in the "Miracle." The other night I saw her playing Bathsheeba in the new Reinhardt production, "The Eternal Road"—and Bathy is far from a nun, as you recall. And in between these varying roles big Rosamond did little or nothing in the acting line!

• • • •

Morris Ernst's new book on the Constitution is having a great success among the more liberal-minded souls—and it is also pleasing Mrs. Ernst very much. She has a busy life of her own, teaching etymology at our city and country school, and is accounted a leading authority. Then there are three Ernst children, one an 18-year-old daughter, who is at Bennington College . . .

• • • •

Our big comedy hit show, "You Can't Take It With You," caused quite a ruckus the other day when it announced that seats were on sale 18 weeks ahead, or well into the summer. But it takes more than that to daunt our citizens, several of whom have walked right up the wicket and bought some seats for well along in May. Well, that's a form of faith, all right. Who knows where in the cosmos we'll be in May? . . .

• • • •

Our local romance-fanciers opine that the love affair between Patricia Ziegfeld, Billie Burke's young daughter, and young Ben Ali Haggin, son of the late millionaire artist, has run its course. Most of the family friends say it was a matter of too darned much publicity—and that's possible. No kids like to live in the spotlight for long!

• • • •

One of the smartest Fifth avenue style sharks has just cabled me from Paris that the coronation is having an even greater effect on the new clothes collections than we suspected. She says that elaborate gold and silver brocades are being used on sheer fabrics. Rochas seems to be going in for polychrome stripes, while Vionnet is featuring silk and wool plaids. Oh dear—doesn't it seem remote from our own petty goings and comings, and that small collection of fairly ancient items hanging in our closets!

Improve Your Letters

YES HARRY is going to be disappointed in you when he reads your letter.

He thought you were the grandest girl he'd ever met that week he visited in your town.

Your dull, ungrammatical beginning will disillusion him:

"Nothing special has happened since you left. It sure is hard to find something to write about."

Not a breath of the merry chatter that first attracted Harry to you!

If you were talking to Harry you'd probably say:

"My, how I miss the fun of the holiday parties. It certainly is a let-down to have nothing but the movies for entertainment. I think I'll have to give a party myself next week to stir us out of our rut. I wish you were going to be here. You'd keep us in stitches, I know, with your impersonations of movie stars.

Why not put this gay chatter in your letter? It will remind Jack what a jolly girl you are. Of course, you'll close with "Sincerely yours," not "Devotedly yours" or "Affectionately yours," because a girl's letters to a man, unless he's her fiance, should be friendly, not sentimental.

Our 40-page booklet, HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS, gives sample letters of congratulations, sympathy—invitations, thank-you and bread-and-butter notes, business letters, love letters. All about letter etiquette, too.

Send 15c for our booklet, HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS, to The WASHINGTON POST Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Shiny Accessories for Spring Frocks

Accessories Grow in Import In Fashion Shows for Spring

Direct news of what Washington women will be wearing this spring is being gathered in New York stores by Miss Ethel Ehlen, The Post fashion editor. Besides accompanying Washington buyers on their shopping jaunts, Miss Ehlen is covering the fashion previews and openings.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—With the feminine trend in clothes pervading the fashion picture, accessories are going to be more important than they have been for many seasons. This is evidenced at the Accessory Show being held at the Hotel New Yorker, where Washington buyers are scurrying about selecting smart accents for spring suits and frocks.

Among the highlights of the show which will interest Washingtonians are the new handbags. These show a tendency toward large, commodious designs with top handles and shoulder straps, although the envelope type is still on the scene. Patent leather, pigskin, doeskin and suedes are foremost in the new bag materials and the smart colors are black navy, beige, gray, rust and bright tones of green, blue, red and yellow.

Gloves, whether they are chosen to match the bag, scarf, shoes or hat, are exceedingly important in the spring ensemble. Glazed leathers and dull suedes and doeskins, also combinations of the two forming the popular half-and-half glove, lead in the realm of materials. Beige, white neutral tones and deep pastel tints prevail, although black and other dark colors are in evidence to accent or contrast light-colored costumes.

The new stocking colors are vibrant but less harsh than last year, the latest idea being that the stockings blend with rather than accent the costume. Sandal feet to accompany cut-out, toeless sandals, new weaves to give the illusion of sheerness and modified pointed heels are among the new features.

Massive Jewelry.

With necklines lower, jewelry assumes a stellar role in the accessory drama, and there is a decided trend toward massive pieces. Beads in monotone and multi-color interpretations are everywhere. These are made of composition, real stones, metal and glass. Pearls are still considered smart, in plain or twisted strands, sometimes combined with colored strands of beads. Schiaparelli's tear-drop jewelry is as lovely as it is popular. It comes in one or two color themes, made in massive necklines and wide bracelets. Rhinestone clips now adorn both lapels of the tailored suit; swordfish, frogs and such of rhinestones, made into large pins, are suggested for the throat decoration for your blouse suit or daytime frock. In the realm of real jewelry, coral is outstanding, with turquoise next in line. For sports wear there is clever leather jewelry.

Handkerchiefs for spring are gay and lovely. They come in delicate flower prints called "country gardens" and brighter hues, following the Dalmatian influence. Sprightly plaids with flowered corners are popular, also Baroque prints and sports size kerchiefs in solid colors featuring the popular tone, red earth. Huge chiffon squares are being used as evening handkerchiefs and also for daytime, combining two squares tied in the back and worn on the head turban-fashion. Ascot scarfs of suede with hand-stitching are matched with gloves, the stitching being in contrasting color. Square scarfs are used in twos, tied together in back and front; either monotone or contrast. Flowers are appearing in the spring picture in new and interesting versions and it is predicted will be much in evidence on spring suits, coats and frocks. Leather flowers are cleverly designed in deep tones; small posies are made into clips to wear on either lapel; white calla lillies grace evening gowns, and violets in all shades are considered extremely important.

Belts will be an integral part of the spring and summer costume and may be either very wide or very narrow. Bright patent leather and dull suede share honors equally in materials and colors range from the palest pastels to bright tones and black. The bow-knit buckle of self-material is new and chic and stresses the feminine trend in clothes.

Fold in 2 egg whites beaten stiff and bake 25 to 30 minutes in greased casserole dish at 350 F. Serve with tomato sauce.

Child Chats

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

GIVING PRESENTS gracefully and satisfactorily is an art, and many people never learn it. The best time to teach the art is in childhood, for giving of any kind is a habit, and like most habits, best established when one is young.

In some households presents are always important and given only on occasions like Christmas and birthdays. In others they are current only from parents to children, or from rich to poor. Some people give presents as a duty. Others think only of themselves when they give.

Yet there is nothing that adds more to the charm and grace of life than the ability to share with others, whether out of one's wealth of worldly goods or of love and imagination. Gifts need not be rare or expensive in order to give pleasure, and they should never be made grudgingly or from a sense of duty.

The baby who offers his tiny box of candy to others should be encouraged in his generosity. Let him have the joy of appreciation. No need to take so much that there is nothing left for him, but neither should he see his gift refused.

The boy who wants to spend his first earnings for his mother, or perhaps for some special girl, should be allowed to have his way, even though he needs shoes or gloves more. Half the joy of earning money should lie in what it can do to give pleasure.

Children should not be so spoiled that they expect presents every time someone comes to the house, or whenever mother returns from a shopping tour. Presents lose half their joy when they become a regular thing.

But the cultivation of imagination which can think up the incidental and perfect gift and take pleasure in making it, gives an added grace to anyone.

Informal Menus Are Given For U. S. National Tea Week

THE COMING WEEK, February 14 to 20, is celebrated as National Tea Week, the birthday of the world's most widely consumed beverage.

This is an excellent excuse to have a tea party; perhaps in celebration of one of the important days of the month, such as approaching Saint Valentine's Day. Or why not start the habit of serving afternoon tea, informally, for any guests who might drop in to call, or better still, be English and serve tea to your family tomorrow afternoon and every Sunday thereafter.

Though many people consider tea a stimulate, scientists have found that it has no ill effects, even when as many as 20 cups are consumed in one day. Athletes are permitted to drink this beverage in unlimited quantities because it is virtually pure liquid without appreciable solids. Too, it is alkaline in reaction, and an aid to digestion.

While water makes a difference in the flavor of a pot of tea, most large tea firms vary their blends to match the water in the area where the tea is to be sold.

Though iced tea is a purely American invention, the idea is rapidly spreading to other countries. It's hard to believe but hot tea is more cooling than iced tea. A cup of hot tea helps the human body to get rid of 50 times as much heat as it adds.

Afternoon Tea Menu.

Nut Bread and Butter Sandwiches
Tea
Sugar Cream Lemon
Decorated Party Cakes
Chocolate Cookies With Candied Fruit
Grapefruit and Ginger Sherbet
Banana and Cottage Cheese Sandwiches.

Chop 4 stuffed olives and mix with 4 tablespoons cottage cheese, few grains salt and 1 teaspoon mayonnaise. Spread on buttered bread. Crush 1 banana and mix with few drops lemon juice and few grains salt and spread 1¼ tablespoons on buttered bread. Put together with a lettuce leaf between. Remove crusts and cut in triangles.

Chocolate Cookies With Candied Fruit.

Work one-quarter cup shortening until creamy, add gradually one-half cup sugar, 1 square chocolate, melted, and 1 egg and beat very thoroughly. Add 2 tablespoons milk, one-half teaspoon vanilla and 1½ cups flour sifted with 1¼ teaspoons baking powder and one-half teaspoon salt. Shape on greased tin sheet with cookie press or through large star tube, put in center a mixture of one-quarter cup walnuts chopped, 1 tablespoon candied cherries cut fine, 2 tablespoons candied grapefruit peel cut fine, few grains salt and honey to moisten. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 12 to 15 minutes.

Grapefruit, Ginger Sherbet (for 25).

Grate the rind of 3 oranges, add three-quarters pound preserved ginger chopped fine, 2½ cups sugar and 1½ quarts water. Boil 5 minutes, let stand until cool, add one-quarter cup lemon juice, 3 cups grapefruit juice, 1 cup orange juice and few grains salt and freeze. Serve in glasses with whipped cream, sweetened and flavored if desired.

Cracker Pastry Recipe.

Here is a recipe for chilled graham cracker pastry that can be prepared ahead of time and stored in the refrigerator until needed. If kept in a modern refrigerator, the mixture will not dry out or absorb odors from other foods. Combine 1 cup graham cracker crumbs, ¼ cup sugar and ¼ cup melted butter. Work together lightly until well blended. Press into pie plate, shaping firmly all around. Chill in the refrigerator until ready to use, then add favorite filling and serve.

Good Caviar Is Gray.

Good caviar should be gray, large grained and not salty like so much on the market today. Caviar should laways be served ice cold with lemon juice and freshly ground pepper as the usual seasoning. Chopped hard-boiled eggs and chopped onions are sometimes served with it but the real epicure discards the onions as it spoils the taste. Nicely browned crisp toast is served with it.

How to Get Cannisters.

To make an attractive set of kitchen cannisters, try this idea: Save cans of various sizes that have lids and paint the lids and cans in contrasting colors to harmonize with your kitchen. Cut out designs in shape of teapot, sugar bowl, etc., and paste on the cans. Then shellac over the design.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Bachelor Asks Meaning and Origin of St. Valentine's Day; Also What Gift to Give Girl Friend.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a bachelor living with two unmarried sisters, and we read your column in The Post each day, enjoying the discussions very much. We have had a discussion of our own, and I will very much appreciate your opinion concerning this. First of all, what is the significance of St. Valentine's Day? Secondly, under what conditions should a gentleman present a lady with a small token, as, for example, a heart-shaped box of candy?

* * * *

To illustrate: A young man has become acquainted with a young lady five years his junior, a pupil in one of his classes at a certain university. Over a period of eight months, they had approximately half a dozen dates with each other. For the past five months the young man has been in another city and has seen the young lady only twice, although they have corresponded regularly during that time.

* * * *

The young man is very fond of the young lady and would like to present her with some small token of regard on St. Valentine's Day. She is from a fine family and very exact in her manners, being 100 per cent a lady. For this reason the man fears if he forces the friendship he may spoil it altogether. On the other hand, if he disregards this day, he may lose her friendship. In this case, should he send her a heart-shaped box of candy, a plain box of candy, or nothing? Cordially yours, H. R.

* * * *

A Plausible Version.

DEAR H. R.: The origin and meaning of St. Valentine's Day seems to be shrouded in the mists of antiquity, to use an over-worked phrase. However, one plausible version is to the effect that Valentine was a priest in Rome during the reign of Emperor Claudius. Wars broke out and husbands were loath to leave their wives, as were lovers their sweethearts. Infuriated by the dearth of willing warriors, the emperor ordered that no more marriages be celebrated, but the priest could not find it in his heart to refuse the sacrament of marriage to young couples who came to the temple secretly to secure the blessing of the church upon their unions. Valentine became known as the friend of lovers in Rome.

The Emperor Claudius, learning of his disobedience, had him cast into a dungeon, where he languished and died, on February 14 of the year 270. He was buried in the church of St. Praxedes. It is told that during his incarceration he whiled the time away writing letters of good cheer to all his friends. Hence communications posted or gifts tendered in the name of St. Valentine may connote friendship as well as a more romantic emotion.

I think the most suitable gift the young man could send the young lady in the hypothetical situation outlined above would be a corsage of flowers. It might be violets, rosebuds, orchids, or her favorite flower, if the young man happens to know what that flower is. A heart-shaped box of candy is a bit too quaint and adolescent, and might cause the girl as well as her family and friends to laugh at the naivete of mind of the man who selects it. Just an ordinary box of candy is hardly special enough, if you know what I mean. Flowers are a traditional offering—quite as conventional as candy—and the girl doesn't live who wouldn't adore having a corsage to flaunt on St. Valentine's Day. M. H.

Value of Psychiatry.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: "How far that little candle throws his beams! So shines a good deed in a naughty world." You will be glad to know that your mention of the Washington Life Adjustment Center has been the means of aiding at least one woman and, I hope, others who have not written you nor seen your excellent column, which I read daily. The woman I refer to, an old Government employe, was rapidly becoming unemployable. But since the Government does not recognize nor make provision for psychic disorders unless the sufferer is legally insane, she could not be sent to a Government clinic.

* * * *

And yet this woman was sufficiently off balance to feel sure that her superiors and associates, and not herself, were to blame for all her troubles, which included a stomach ailment since diagnosed as psycho-genetic. My husband, as chief of her division, asked me what to do. I suggested the Life Adjustment Center, which I had seen recommended in your column. But the Civil Service Commission warned him he would be treading on dangerous ground in suggesting to Miss X that she needed psychiatric treatment.

* * * *

However, representatives of the Union of Government Employes, of which she is an old employe, came to discuss her case with my husband. They agreed she was in need of skilled assistance and promised to do their best to persuade her to go to the Center. They had never heard of it, but were glad to know of such an institution.

* * * *

Miss X went to the center. My husband has received the doctor's report, which enables him to be really helpful in co-operating to bring about each healthful readjustment as is possible for her . . . Now that the Union knows of the center, this knowledge may be the means of helping other Government clerks with personality difficulties, perhaps saving them from losing their hold on reality. Many thanks for your help in this important matter. Sincerely, MRS. H. G. B.

Help for All.

DEAR MRS. H. G. B.: I am glad to have this opportunity of calling attention to the very sincere and constructive work in personality rehabilitation being done by the Washington Life Adjustment Center, 1464 Columbia road northwest. Some time ago the Center added a full-time psychiatrist to its personnel, since when it has been able to do even more effective work than before, when it was dependent on the contributed services of busy specialists and practitioners who served on its evening clinic staff. The finest thing about the Center is that its services are available to all, even those who are without funds. Indeed, it is my understanding that it was primarily organized to aid the latter classification of psychically ailing individual. M. H.

It's all pork—properly seasoned and always fresh. When properly cooked it is one of the most delicious and satisfying sausages you've ever tasted.

Cook Sausage thoroughly!

Raw pork is extremely unhealthful and hard to digest. To be edible sausage should be fried at least 20 to 25 minutes until it is done clear through. For best results put about ¼ or ½ inch of water in the frying pan and boil, then pour off excess water and brown. Sausage should be fried slowly. Fast frying often browns or burns the outside leaving the center uncooked.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The Best Gift of All.

There are but few parents who are not much more concerned about their offspring than about themselves. Each day we witness sacrifices made by fathers and mothers in order that their sons and daughters may achieve stations in life which were denied them.

Children for the most part are extremely grateful and loyal in recognizing the loving car lavished upon them by their elders, but we are in a practical age, and as adults with teeth undergoing rapid decay, with hearts that may be damaged, with kidneys that function imperfectly, we may look back upon our juvenile ailments and unconsciously lessen our appreciation of the benefactions of doting parents.

It is a trite but true saying that the one who possesses good health owns capital assets representing a sizable sum. Unfortunately, good health cannot be purchased. Physicians can do much to stay the ravages of disease, but they cannot rebuild a diseased heart or its valves. Nature will not provide new kidneys if neglect has permitted the forces of destruction to creep upon these important organs.

Ground Laid in Infancy.

Why is the role of parents so vital? Because the groundwork of well being, of good constitutions, of the forces of resistance against disease, are laid in childhood. Many forward-looking physicians are inclined to agree that they would far rather be helpful on the preventive side than on that which deals only with cure. With the former the chances for success are far greater. The time may come when we will employ physicians to examine all members of the family at regular intervals, to the end that trouble will be detected when it can be remedied easily.

Many mothers have adopted the custom of taking their children to the physician at least twice yearly for a general inventory. In this way important physical factors relative to growth and development are evaluated and a program involving food, exercise play, study and sleep is laid down.

Within recent years better understanding has come as to the hiding places of bacteria, the conditions that are favorable to their growth, and the methods of their spread. A generation ago startling assaults upon health were made in the name of dental science. Today the well trained dentist is a powerful force in preserving health and preventing disease.

Every boy and girl has a right to expect that he will not be permitted to build a foundation for degenerative diseases; those which destroy the integrity of the heart muscle and the elasticity of the blood vessels. He has a right to demand that his parents visit the family dentist, or at least a dental clinic, twice each year, for every tooth lost unnecessarily means a drop in reserve. He must have faith that colds and minor infections, particularly of the throat, will be so managed that they will not leave the indelible stamp of disease upon the vital organs. And then he must have so much confidence in the intelligence of his parents as regards food as will insure sturdy bones, firm muscles and pure blood.

Claire Tilden Dress Pattern

TUCK a perky bow 'neath the refreshing Eton collar of your dashing shirtwaister and sally forth on early spring afternoon to reveal the chic of your new Claire Tilden frock! You'll find this exciting version of fashion's favorite is simple as A B C to make, too—and an inexpensive addition to your wardrobe, for it's ever so smart made up in an inexpensive cotton, linen or tie silk print! Brief sleeves have that wide-at-the-shoulder air that's the "newest thing out," while trim yokes and unpressed tucks distinguish the simple bodice. Note, too, the skirt's neat panel 'n' pleats. Detailed sewing guide accompanies this pattern.

Pattern 297 is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards 39-inch fabric and ⅞ yard 2-inch ribbon.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (preferably coins), for this pattern. Write clearly name, address and style number. Send orders to The Washington Post pattern department, 70 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Valentine Candy Helps Cupid's Aim

Cupid's aim will be much better on Saint Valentine's Day if you provide inspiration for the bashful male tongue with these magic candies. Arrange them as a heart shaped centerpiece or put them in heart shaped boxes as favors or gifts. Cut the fondant in heart-like pieces for a seasonable touch.

Valentine Candy Is New Way To Heart of Backward Male

Use of Sweetened Condensed Milk in Candy Recipes Makes Fondant in Five Minutes and Creamy Fudge in a Jiffy.

By Rebekah Blake.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY is the official occasion for Cupid to shoot his arrows, but every wise maiden knows a little timely coquetry can be a great inspiration to Cupid. One of the most dependable ways of honeying a bashful male tongue is to produce a tempting array of homemade sweets.

A Valentine party would not be complete without suitable refreshments and even if you aren't entertaining, heart-shaped candies, arranged festively and placed where all may sample them, will add a seasonable touch to the surroundings. Arrange the candies as a centerpiece in the shape of a heart or put them in heart-shaped paper boxes as favors.

Here are recipes for Valentine Magic that are bound to succeed because they are failure proof. They are made with sweetened condensed milk which produces perfect fondant in only five minutes and guarantees creamy, smooth fudge in a jiffy.

Cupid's Magic Hearts.

4 squares unsweetened chocolate
½ cup butter
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 pound confectioners' sugar
¾ cup sweetened condensed milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup nut meats, finely chopped

Melt chocolate and butter together. Beat egg slightly; add confectioners' sugar, sweetened condensed milk and vanilla and blend thoroughly. Add chocolate and butter, blending thoroughly. Fold in nut meats. Scrape mixture into buttered pan (8x8x2 inches). Chill in refrigerator or cool place for several hours. Cut in squares, heart shape with small cookie cutter.

Valentine Tokens.

1½ cups dried apricots ground
1 cup shredded coconut
½ cup sweetened condensed milk
Confectioners' sugar

Put apricots through a food chopper. Mix with coconut. Moisten with sweetened condensed milk. Drop by spoonfuls into confectioners' sugar. Shape into balls. Allow to stand until firm. Makes 24.

Magic Forget Me Nots.

½ cup cocoa
1½ cups confectioners' sugar
½ cup sweetened condensed milk
1 tablespoon vanilla
1¼ cups confectioners' sugar
¼ cup sweetened condensed milk

Sift together cocoa and 1½ cups confectioners' sugar. Moisten with ½ cup sweetened condensed milk and vanilla. Blend thoroughly. Pat out on board or waxed paper, which has been dusted with confectioners' sugar, into oblong layer ¼ inch thick. Blend remaining confectioners' sugar and sweetened condensed milk. Spread with spatula, on top of dark layer; roll as in making jelly roll, folding edges to conceal fondant. Allow to stand in cool place until firm. Cut into diagonal slices ½ inch thick. Wipe knife after each slice, to keep the colors clear.

The next time you have a stubborn cap to unscrew, don't wrestle with it. Just try using the nutcracker. You will find that it will grip the bottle cap and unscrew it easily.

You don't have to go around slipping on icy streets. To avoid this, stick some adhesive tape on the bottoms of your rubbers or galoshes.

S. C. Governor Has Wife Who Knows Chickens

Mrs. Johnston Gives Recipe for Frying Fowl. Correctly.

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 12 (AP).—The Governor of South Carolina enjoys fried chicken "fit for a king" because his wife insists on browning the meat quickly in deep fat and then turning it often while the grease simmers.

Mrs. Olin D. Johnston doesn't specify that the grease be from side bacon, as does Mrs. George C. Peery, Virginia's First Lady, or that the pieces be dipped in buttermilk before frying, as does Mrs. E. D. Rivers, wife of Georgia's new Governor.

But Gov. Johnston says he can testify from experience that his wife's recipe produces highly satisfactory results.

Her directions follow:

"Drop the pieces in steaming hot grease in a deep frying pan and brown quickly. Turn the fire, or flame, down low and let simmer, turning often until quite tender. Then remove the chicken and pour off all but the desired amount of grease.

"For gravy, thicken this grease with flour and add sweet milk until it is the desired thickness, adding salt and pepper to taste."

Gourmets who specialize in Southern delicacies point to the variations in fried chicken recipes as evidence of the fact that it isn't the particular method, but the result achieved, that qualifies a dish as "Southern cooking" in the best sense.

Mending Shoestrings.

If the little metal ends have come off the children's shoestrings just mend them in this manner: dip them into a bottle of glue, then twist and let them dry. The children will find them easy to handle and the purchase of many pairs of new shoestrings will be avoided.

In order to put candles into your candlestick holders so they will stand securely, put a small quantity of melted paraffin into the candlestick in the paraffin; it is then held taut and straight.

To tie a package more securely, dampen the cord. The cord will shrink and draw tight as it dries.

Canned Goods Are Improved By Seasoning

Proper Use of Salt and Pepper Eliminates Flat Taste.

THE CANNERS, who have made it possible for us to have every vegetable from asparagus to spinach on our tables regardless of the season deserve the gratitude of those of us who have to prepare three meals daily. Outside of the metropolitan centers it is difficult to get fresh vegetables from the Southern markets in the winter and a very limited diet would be forced upon many people if it were not for the great variety in canned goods.

While none of the vitamins and food values are lost in the canning process housewives are aware that canned vegetables are characterized by a lack of succulent flavors which are associated with fresh products. This flatness and insipidity can be overcome, however, by proper seasoning in the kitchen while they are being heated for the table.

Tasty Vegetable Plate.

A hearty, tasty vegetable plate can be created entirely from canned vegetables, plus a baked potato and an artful dash of spice, herb and sauce. A typical dish of this sort can contain such staples as corn, string beans, carrots and peas, spinach and potato in some form.

To the corn add salt, pepper, ⅛ teaspoon dry mustard and a generous lump of butter. Heat through and garnish with paprika.

If canned carrots as well as canned peas are used, drain the juice from the carrots and heat both vegetables in the juice of the peas, adding 1 tablespoon sugar, 1½ teaspoons butter, ⅛ teaspoon ground ginger. Heat thoroughly. Garnish with finely chopped parsley.

Canned string beans or wax beans may be given renewed flavor by preparing them in the following sauce:

Combine ¼ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, ½ teaspoon salt, and mix to a thin paste with about ¼ cup water. Heat ¼ cup vinegar and ⅛ cup water to the boiling point, then add it gradually to the cornstarch mixture, stirring constantly. Cook it slowly for 5 minutes, then remove from the fire. Add 3 teaspoons prepared mustard and 1 tablespoon butter, stir in thoroughly and add the canned beans. Mix all together, and cook for 5 minutes. Allow to stand away from fire for one hour before serving so that the beans will season thoroughly. Reheat before serving.

The canned spinach will be welcomed by the family if it is drained after heating, chopped fine, seasoned with salt, pepper and a dash of nutmeg. Garnish with hard boiled egg slices or make a nest of the spinach and place a poached egg in the center. If poached egg is served sprinkle liberally with celery salt.

Florida Foods Are Colorful And Tempting

Orange and Other Native Fruits Bases for Tasty Dishes.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

WHEN New Orleans and Louisiana point with pride to their celebrated "pecan pralines" Florida with a gay shrug of her shoulders replies: "O, yes, but have you tasted my coconut pralines?"

In this friendly battle between the epicures of these States of the deep South each side will find that adherents line up behind their fortifications.

Creole cooking has been famed for many generations in Louisiana and the Spanish influence also prevails in Florida dishes. The use of the native orange is another notable element in the cuisine of the Floridian. No meal need be tame or without special honors when oranges are near at hand. They lend themselves to many dishes as garnish as integral components and in addition to flavor they contribute color always grateful to the imagination and stimulating to the appetite of the diners.

Orange Fritters Popular.

Visitors from the North enjoy orange fritters which appear on so many tables in the State. They are prepared in simple fashion by separating the fruit into sections. After removing the seeds the sections are dipped in batter and fried. An Oliver Twist chant of "More, more" inevitably follows their appearance.

Often orange fritters are accompanied by another Florida delicacy, Ponce de Leon Eggs. To make this dish chop the whites of six hard-boiled eggs and mash the yolks. Then brown and dice half of an onion in one tablespoon of butter. Add one tablespoon of floor and blend well. Put in two cups of tomato juice, and ¼ cup chopped green peppers, and cook slowly until done. Add ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, ½ cup mushrooms, salt and pepper to taste and when it is done add a cup of white sauce, the egg yolks and the chopped egg whites.

The whole should be placed in a buttered casserole, sprinkled with cracker crumbs, dotted with butter and browned in the oven. Serve it hot.

Poincianna Cake.

Pleasure pilgrims to Palm Beach return home filled with favorable reports of Palm Beach Poincianna cake, one of the favorite dishes of the region.

It is simply made and would prove a welcome addition to almost any menu.

The ingredients for making it are as follows:

1 pound sugar
1 pound flour
1 pound butter
Juice and rind of 1 lemon
9 eggs
2 cups chopped blanched almonds
½ pound citron, chopped fine
½ pound raisins, chopped fine

Cream butter and sugar and add to well beaten yolks of eggs. Then add alternately the flour and the whites beaten stiff; dredge the fruits and nuts with flour and add to the batter. Bake in layer tins in a slow oven from 40 to 50 minutes.

A filling for this cake may be made as follows:

2 cups sugar
1 cup boiling water
Juice and grated rind of 2 lemons
1 tablespoon corn starch
2 cups grated cocoanut

Boil the first three ingredients and add the corn starch, which you have dissolved in a little cold water. Cook until it spins a thread and then beat until creamy; add cocoanut and spread between layers.

Lights Under Bed.

Connect a light to the underneath side of the bed instead of at the head. Then you can turn it on at any time during the night without either blinding yourself or awakening your roommate. You can forget all about window shades, too, and tramp around partially dressed, because the light shines only on the floor. It will save you from stubbing your toes against the furniture, too.

Celluloid Thumb Thimble.

If you have ever burned your thumb when removing the jackets from hot boiled potatoes or from other vegetables, here is a suggestion that you will welcome. Wear a celluloid thimble on your thumb the next time you have a peeling chore to do.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

RESOLVED by Alice: That, maidless or no, she will have breakfast in bed at least once a week—even if she has to hop up and get it herself!

We are convinced that there is nothing that makes a woman feel more feminine, more luxurious than breakfast in bed—especially if she is thoughtful enough to surround herself with the pretty-pretties that can make even dry toast and black coffee seem like an occasion.

A folding tray for bed is the first requirement and these come in lovely pastels and are surprisingly inexpensive. However, for variety's sake, a pure white one would be better, Alice decided. Then she she could vary her dishes to her heart's content without having astonishing results. A dark blue breakfast service on a white tray with a tiny vase of pick painted daises to nod good-morning, for instance. A tray with wicker pockets on either side for morning mail and paper is an added touch of luxury.

And then there was this business of propping herself up in bed so that she could really be comfortable and drink her coffee without danger of scalding her neck and staining her best peaches-and-cream bed jacket. Alice bought a regularly upholstered bed support, like the upper half of a really comfortable chaise lounge, which keeps a lady in just the right half-sitting up position that makes bed-lolling such a pleasure. These were available in a variety of colors, but for sheer comfort and coolness, a slip-cover of white percale, with mose fringe at the seams, was Alice's choice. This she made herself . . it can be tubbed often so that freshness is added to that morning meal. She keeps the slip-cover, when not in use, in her sacheted linen closet so that a gentle essence of verbena surges around her as she lazes. The washable slip-cover is also extremely practical for convalescent use. The same can be said of all the equipment for breakfasting in bed. Some time almost any member of the family, getting over a case of grippe, is going to bless her for acquiring such eye-filling accessories for her own lazy moments, as they're so borrowable.

Keeping Recipes Clean.

To keep your recipe cards from getting soiled, but still in plain view when in use, tack a pincher clothespin to the inside of your kitchen cabinet door in such a way as to permit the clothespin to pinch and hold any desired card. Then all you need do is to pinch the recipe card in place and it is ready for use.

Salmon Is Subject In Post Contest For Coming Week

National Salmon Week is February 12 to 20. What better time could there be to have a Salmon contest. Especially, as it is during Lent and salmon is such a convenient food for this season.

Making out Lenten menus, you may come across pet recipes for salmon box, cakes, loaf, salad or salmon sandwiches. Or you may select creamed salmon au gratin, cutlets, spinach and salmon souffle, or turbot. There are canapes and croquettes of salmon. Whatever the recipe may be, so long as it contains salmon, copy it neatly and enter it in The Post recipe contest. Send it to Rebekah Blake, The Post Food Editor, so it will reach her not later than Saturday noon.

The cash prizes for this contest are $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize, and $1 for each of the remaining three prizes.

Use Hot Water.

If hot dishes stick to oilcloth, don't try to pull them loose—you will probably spoil the cloth if you do. Here is a better way: just pour a small quantity of hot water around the dish and it will soon loosen, leaving the oilcloth unmarred.

Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Sze Hosts to Large Company; Latter, and Her Assistants, Dress in Their Native Costumes

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

There was an atmosphere of sunlight and flowers at the Chinese Embassy where the Ambassador and Mme. Sze received yesterday afternoon at one of their Friday "at homes."

Mme. Sze wore a Chinese robe of blue with a small leaf design woven into the material which looked silven as it caught the light. With it she wore a diamond pendant and matching diamond pendant earrings. She and the Ambassador stood in the drawing room where the gold satin coverings of the chairs and sofas and the gold draperies corresponded to the gold design in the blue rug. A great bouquet of salmon gladioli was on the table in the center of the room, and elsewhere were pink roses, white lilies and fuchias. In the adjoining salon were ancient teakwood cabinets, handsomely carved, and deep divans with pillows in red and blue and gold, carrying out the harmony of colors in the room. Beside the fireplace a high blue and white vase held a large spray of yellow forsythia. Other vases held daffodils and narcissi, tulips, white lilies and pink snapdragons and white lilies alone. In the window were growing plants in great jardinieres, which formed a background for the table where punch was served. On the walls were beautiful Chinese prints hundreds of years old.

Assisting at the punch table were Mme. Ing, wife of the Counselor of Embassy; Mme. Ho, wife of the First Secretary, and Mme. Hsiao, wife of Capt. Hsiao, who is attached to the office of the Military Attache. All wore their native Chinese robes.

Others in Native Costume.

In the dining room Mme. Yung Kwai, wife of the former Counselor of Embassy, and a group of American friends of the hostess alternated in pouring, and several Chinese ladies, picturesque in their becoming robes, assisted. Pouring were Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Mrs. Stuart J. Fuller, Mrs. Dion Williams, who was accompanied by Brig. Gen. Williams; Mrs. Raymond Mackay, Senora de Alfaro, wife of the former President of Panama, who was accompanied by Senor Alfaro; Mrs. Harry P. Hughes and Mrs. Maxwell Hamilton.

The petite and gracious Chinese ladies were Mme. Shieh, wife of the Attache, wearing a robe of jade green; Miss Lota Lois Ing, in a robe of blue with a flower design of rose color; Mme. J. Y. Yee, in a beige robe with a design in gold, and Mme. Y. S. Leong, wearing dark blue.

Among the many who called during the afternoon were Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland; Lady Lister Kaye, who remained for a few minutes to talk to Mme. Sze after most of the guests had left, as did Mrs. Mahlon Perkins, whose husband is American Consul in Barcelona and who lived in China when he held posts there; the Marchesa San Germano, in a gown of gunmetal lame trimmed with a red velvet bow and a wide, black hat with a band of flowers in the same shade; Dr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Dr. John Wilkinson, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol and the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, with their daughter, Senorita Laura Recinos, and the Minister of Paraguay and Senora de Busk Codas. Also there were Mrs. Richard Duncan and her son, Mr. Richard Duncan, jr., Mrs. Andrew May, Mrs. Louis Schaperi and her son, Mr. Mark Schapiro; Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Minister of Yugoslavia; Mrs. Peyton March, who was out for the first time after a week's illness; Mrs. J. T. H. Mitchell and her daughter, Miss Ann Mitchell, of Greenwich, Conn., and New York, who are spending a few days as guests at the Egyptian Legation; Mrs. Charles Linthicum and Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, wearing plum-colored velvet.

Congressional Group Present.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Orme were also among the guests as were Mrs. William B. Ridgeley, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, and several members of the Congressional group who had previously attended the reception honoring the wife and daughter of the Speaker of the House. Among these were Mrs. Paul R. Greever, Mrs. Harry Schwartz, wife of Senator Schwartz and their daughter, Miss Cuyler Schwartz, Mrs. W. L. Allen, Mrs. James H. Hughes and Mrs. Harry Hall, who were conversing together in the dining room.

Dr. Stanley Hornbeck was one of the members of the State Department present. Mr. Hamilton was also there with Mrs. Hamilton, who was pouring; Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Macdonnell, of the Canadian Legation were present as were the Attache of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Schlatter; Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster who came with Mrs. Ralph Church, Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of the Senator from Florida, accompanied by her guest, Mrs. Paul Sheaham, who, with Mr. Sheaham is here from Charlottee, N. C., for the week-end; the Misses Leila and Cary Peachy, and Mrs. Thomas O'Brien.

On the stairway, looking on at the party was little Miss Alice Sze, youngest daughter of the Ambassador and Mme. Sze, who is not yet old enough to take part in grown-up functions. She wore a blue frock figured in rose-colored flowers.

The Ambassador and his family will leave Washington sometime this spring, much to the regret of their many friends here, but the date of their departure is as yet uncertain.

Former Governor Here.

Former Gov. William Tudor Gardiner, of Maine, and Mrs. Gardiner are making a two-day visit in Washington at the Mayflower. Their young daughter, Margaret Gardiner, is in school in Virginia.

800 Attend Lincoln Ball At Raleigh

Ballet, Ballroom Dances Entertain G. O. P. Throng Here.

Many Representatives and Senators Present; Supper Served.

Distinguished Republicans came from Virginia and Maryland last night for the ball at the Raleigh Hotel to celebrate the anniversary of Lincoln's birthday. In addition many attended from the District of Columbia, including Republican Senators and Representatives. There were more than 800 present.

Portraits of Lincoln looked down upon the dancers. In keeping with the patriotic nature of the occasion, the floral decorations were red, white and blue flowers.

Miss Marion Venable, of Washington, formerly with the ballet of the Chicago Opera Company, entertained with several dances, and the dance team of Halliday and Clark, of New York, also contributed to the program. A buffet supper was served.

The Austins Attend.

Among the guests were Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, of Vermont; Representative and Mrs. Frank Crowther, the latter wearing a gown of Alice blue crepe with clips of brilliants; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mondell, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hull, Mrs. Hull in a gown of American Beauty velvet; and Representative and Mrs. Ralph Church, the latter in black net trimmed with black sequins.

Representative and Mrs. Bertrand Snell were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Sara Louise Snell, who wore a gown of parchment satin in a garnet shade. Mrs. Snell's black lace frock was made with a flared peplum and a slight train.

Other Guests.

Among other guests at the ball were Mme. Cantacuzene, Miss Mary Adams, Representative Leslie C. Arends, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Colladay, Mr. Albert E. Conradis, Representative and Mrs. Frank Crowther, Mr. Walter Dawson, Mrs. William N. Doak, Representative and Mrs. George A. Dondero, Commissioner and Mrs. Claude L. Draper, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mr. Louis A. Gravelle, Representative and Mrs. U. S. Guyer, Mr. and Mrs. Bishop P. Hill, Mrs. William Fitch Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund S. Kochersperger, Mrs. Charles M. THE MERRY WHIRL
by MARYLYN

Ann Mitchell, who with her mother, Mrs. Heart Mitchell, is visiting at the Egyptian Legation, is nothing but modern. She was one of the first to have a bar built into her New York home, and, that fad is slipping along into the quiet pages of ancient history, she has thought up something else for the carpenter and plumber to busy themselves about. This time it is a soda fountain, a very long and impressive one, with six gadgets, or whatever you call those things with the round-knobbed handles. Of course, not just anyone can mix up a soda and have it amount to something more than a fizz, so it was in the order of the day for a soda jerker to be found and subsequently hired.

Ann is tall and brunette, wears her curly hair in a long bob and has the most expressive eyes. Her Dalmatian outfit is by far one of the most attractive we have seen. Her pill-box hat, with its tracing of gold, has a long mesh veil that gracefully billows behind as its pretty wearer walks along. The frock, very prim and tailored, is embroidered in gold down the front and around the neck and sleeves. With this Ann wears a beautifully matched silver fox cape.

The George Oakley Tottens are shaking the chill of Washington from their bones and heading South this very day for Florida. There they will paint, plan and bask to their hearts' content, not returning until well into March.

Merritt Cootes, who has pepped up the younger set no end since his arrival here to visit his family before assuming his duties as vice consul in Havana, is to be in our midst a bit longer. First the sad news came that he was to depart February 13 (today), but apparently someone in the State Department is superstitious. Any way, Merritt now doesn't leave until June.

Maria Milne Whitehurst is proudly (and we don't blame her) boasting a new straw bonnet. It is black, shiny straw, fashioned on flat beret lines. The little "hold-on" band across the back is of several cords of bright colored silk, which cleverly pass under the hat and burst out of the top of the hat in a perky little bow.

Lily Campbell de Eglinton, pretty sister of Eleanor Campbell who is visiting her parents the Commercial Secretary of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell, is a very lovely little person with large sparkling eyes and a flare for exquisite clothes. Washington will have a chance really to meet her Wednesday afternoon when her mother entertains at tea in their apartment on Massachusetts avenue.

Mary McDowell, busy trousseau shopping these days, spends most of her waking hours prowling about the shops. Saw her the other day. Famous for her choice of unusual hats, she had on a material feather sticking straight black felt model which had a self-material feather stitching straight up in the front and held on by a wide band. Her black crepe frock was almost covered up by a mink coat.

Mme. Alfaro, wife of the Ecuadorian Ambassador, has a very interesting addition to her collection of jewelry. It is a West Point miniature. Usually the ring is designed with the class seal on one side and the "fried egg" or academy seal on the other. Mme. A's is of platinum with a large diamond nestled in onyx. On one side is the seal of the class of 1939, that of her sons, Jaime and Colon, jr., and on the other side that of 1913, when the ambassador was graduated from West Point.

Maj. Parker Wests Plan to Entertain For Dr. Sze, Wife

The Ambassador of China and Mme. Sze will be the guests in whose honor Maj. and Mrs. Parker West will be hosts at dinner on March 3.

Maj. and Mrs. West also will entertain at dinner February 26, when their guests of honor will be Judge and Mrs. Justin Miller. The Wests later will accompany their guests to the Friday evening dancing class.

Miss McKendrie Married Here

Rev. Abernathy Performs Ceremony; Couple to Live in S. C.

The Calvary Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding at 7:30 o'clock last evening of Miss Jessie McKendrie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. McKendrie, to Mr. Forest C. Brinacombe, of Washington. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William S. Abernathy, and was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents, 1420 Holly street.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace made with a train of the same material and a long tulle veil, which also formed a train. Her veil was held in place with a tiny cap edged with white ruching, and she carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Mabel McKendrie, who wore a gown and hat of Chantilly lace in an aqua shade. She carried a bouquet of talisman roses.

Mr. Karney A. Brasfield was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Harry Bretencerg, Mr. Corwin Lockwood, Mr. Claude Dickerson and Mr. James Pitts.

Stage Star And Mother Are Honored

Tallulah Bankhead and Mrs. Bankhead Guests at Club Tea.

Mrs. John Garner, Wives of Congress Group Are Present.

The regular Friday tea of the Congressional Club was made a function of unusual importance yesterday afternoon by the presence of Mrs. William B. Bankhead and Miss Tallulah Bankhead, wife and daughter of the Speaker of the House, as guests of honor, and Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Vice President, as one of those pouring.

Miss Bankhead and Mrs. Bankhead enjoyed the party as genuinely as did the members of the club who were there en masse to greet them. Miss Bankhead wore a simple black crepe frock with a strand of pearls at her throat and a small black hat on one side of her head. "How lovely she looks," remarked one guest to another. "Yes," was the reply, "she is appropriately named, for Tallulah is an Indian name meaning 'lovely.'"

Mrs. Bankhead wore black also, wit ha fox scarf, and a veil on her hat. Mrs. Daniel Reed, president of the club, and Mrs. Otis Bland, vice president, received with the guests of honor.

Alabama Group Assists.

The tea table where four members of the Congressional delegation from Alabama, as well as Mrs. Garner and Mrs. William Whittington, past president of the club, alternated at pouring, was decorated with red and white carnations and lighted by blue candles. The patriotic color scheme was planned in observance of Lincoln's birthday. Those from Alabama, the home State of the Speaker and Mrs. Bankhead, who assisted were Mrs. Luther Patrick, who wore a gown of violet velvet with a black hat; Mrs. Joe Starnes, who wore black with a silver and black vest; Mrs. John Sparkman, in black velvet with a gold and jade ornament at the neck, and Mrs. Pete Jarman, in a striking costume of black, the jacket embroidered in a band of miniature gold beads and the smart hat with gold flowers giving a dash of color in front.

All of the guests arrived quite promptly, for the guests of honor later hurried off for the tea at which they were entertained at the White House.

Among those at the Congressional Club were Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, in black; Mrs. Lawrence Imhof, wearing a black frock with an appliqued flower design and a pillbox hat with a crown of bright flowers; Mrs. Joseph Herbert, in black, with a shoulder cape of ermine; Mrs. Bertrand Snell, Mrs. Royal Woodruff, Mrs. Allard Gasque, Mrs. Charles West, Mrs. C. W. Turner, Mrs. John Taber, Mrs. Harry L. Englebright, Mrs. F. McKenzie Davison, Mrs. W. J. Driver, Mrs. Thomas J. O'Brien, Mrs. William H. Larrabee, Mrs. Ralph Church, Mrs. Numa F. Montet, Miss Ruth Reed, daughter of the president, wearing a costume of brown with a blue blouse; Mrs. Clarence E. Hancock, Mrs. Clyde Williams, Mrs. Robert F. Rich, Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden, Mrs. John E. Rankin, who was in gray from tip to toe; Mrs. Charles Colden, wearing a tailored suit of black with a white satin blouse, and Mrs. Horace Towner, a former president of the club.

Mrs. Brewster in Black.

Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster was also there, wearing a black velvet suit trimmed in fox, with a small black hat brightened with a red flower. She had risen early yesterday morning to see Representative Brewster off on a 5 o'clock plane for Maine, where he went to address a Lincoln Day dinner at Perry, a town in his district. Among others there were Mrs. Fred Bierman, Mrs. Finis Garrett, Mrs. Tilman Parks, Mrs. C. A. Fuller, Miss Reba Doughton, Mrs. Robert Earle, Mrs. Ben Cravens, Mrs. Jerry O'Connor, Mrs. Guy Gillette, Mrs. Dow Harter, and Mrs. Robert Hill.

Guests at Congressional Club Tea Yesterday Afternoon

Underwood & Underwood.

With their guests of honor at the Congressional Club yesterday are, in the usual order, Mrs. John Nance Garner, Mrs. Otis Bland, vice president of the club; the guests of honor, Miss Tallulah Bankhead and Mrs. William B. Bankhead, and Mrs. Daniel Reed, president of the club.

McReynolds will be the speakers at a meeting of the People's Mandate Committee Thursday, February 18, at 4 p. m. at the home of Miss Edith J. Goode, 1714 N street northwest. They were members of the flying delegation that went to Buenos Aires to present the signed mandates against war to the Inter-American Peace Conference.

Mrs. O'Day, who made the presentation speech, will tell about the ceremony at which some 200 Latin-American women assisted. Miss Vernon, director of the committee, will tell of the work of the delegates with the official conference, and Mrs. McReynolds will talk about the airplane trip and the social aspects of the trip. Plans will be made for work on securing ratification of the treaties adopted in Buenos Aires.

Miss Vernon, as director of the People's Mandate Committee, will be the speaker at the Barnard College Club luncheon today at the A. A. U. W. Clubhouse.

A banquet will be held in the bamboo room of the Willard Hotel Tuesday at 7:15 p. m. by the Pennsylvania State Society. The Secretary of War, Harry Woodring, will be the guest speaker. Senator James J. Davis, Senator Joseph F. Guffey, both of Pennsylvania, and the members of the Pennsylvania delegation in the House of Representatives will be the guests of honor. A musical program will be given during the dinner and, and after dinner there will be dancing.

The Osteopathic Woman's National Association Auxiliary will hold a luncheon Thursday at Collier's Inn. The speaker will be Mrs. Alice Colbert Sheldon, member of the District of Columbia Bar and director of School Attendance and Work Permits, who will speak on the child labor laws of the District of Columbia.

The wives of newly elected members of Congress will be the guests of honor at tea this afternoon at the Woman's National Democratic Club. Next Saturday there will be a bridge party and a luncheon. On Monday, Miss Ethel A. Lacey, curator of the Washington Division of the Puglic Library, will discuss the book treasures in her division.

Washington's birthday will be honored by former residents of Washington state and of Alaska now making their homes in the Capital at a dinner entertainment and dance Thursday evening at the Lee Hotel, Fifteenth and L streets. This affair is being sponsored by the Washington State and Alaska Society and is an annual event with the organization.

Honor guests will be Senators Homer T. Bone and Lewis B. Schwellenbach and Representatives Knute Hill, Monrad C. Wallgren, Martin F. Smith, Charles H. Leavy, John M. Coffee and Warren G. Magnuson, of Washington State, and Delegate Anthony J. Dimond, of Alaska. In the course of the evening, Representative Smith will be inducted into office as president of the society, Representative Hill as vice president for eastern Washington and Representative Wallgren as vice president for western Washington.

Pennsylvania State Unit to Hold Banquet on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Emmett R. Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. Peter F. Snyder, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Buell and Mr. and Mrs. D. Harold McGrath will act as a reception committee, while 1937 membership enrollments will be received by Earl S. Haselton, treasurer, assisted by Miss Helen Spaulding, Miss Josephine MacCleary, Miss Eleanor M. Stephenson and Robert Harrington. Reservations indicate an attendance at the affair of more than 250.

During the dinner, an entertainment program will be given, including piano solos by Louis Laughlin; violin solos by Kirkland Rhodes, with Miss Carrol Arnold as accompanist; vocal solos by Charles Whitten, with Mrs. Whitten as accompanist, and vocal solos by Miss Maxwell Galloway. Favorite college and civic songs of Washington and Alaska will be featured in a community sing, directed by Miss Mary F. Kerby.

Minister of Honduras and Wife Are Hosts to 200 at Reception

The Minister of Honduras and Senora de Lozano entertained at a large reception yesterday afternoon for about 200 guests. The party was in the nature of a housewarming, as the Minister and Senora de Lozano moved into the legation, which is in Woodland place, only three weeks ago.

The hostess wore a gown of beige lace made on princess lines with a necklace and earrings of amber. She was assisted during the afternoon by Miss Elena Carias, daughter of the President of Honduras, who is a student at Holy Cross Academy, and by Senora de Caceres, wife of the First Secretary of the legation.

Bright pictures, landscapes and still lifes in water color, hung on the walls of the room in which they received, and a Spanish shawl, white, embroidered in pink roses, was thrown over the piano and on it was a vase of matching pink carnations.

In the next room a long table was spread with large trays of sandwiches, platters of various kinds of salads and bowls of characteristic Spanish dishes; frijoles (beans) and arroz (rice) as well as a large ham at one end and a turkey at the other. The centerpiece was a low spreading bouquet of spring flowers, tulips, daffodils and lilies harmonizing in a variety of colors.

Beyond was the sun parlor, decorated with growing vines and flowers, where champagne was served.

Among the guests were the Minister of Costa Rica and Senora de Castro Beeche, with their attractive daughters, Senoritas Rosita and Maria; the Minister of Paraguay and Senora de Lusk Codas, who had come from the reception at the Chinese Embassy; Mrs. Louis Schapiro and her son, Mr. Mark Schapiro, who had also been there; Dr. John R. Pate and Dr. Roger S. McGrath, the Minister of Siam and Mme. Rajamaitri, the latter wearing a tailored costume, the coat of beige with a black skirt and black and white ascot scarf and her hat of black felt; the Naval Attache of the Peruvian Embassy and Senora de Althaus, who was wearing a costume of grown; Mrs. Joseph Watts and her daughters, the Misses Martha and Amy Watts; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mrs. Burke in a black frock with a design of black dots; the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro.

The Ambassador of Ecuador, Senor Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro also was there, coming alone as Senora de Alfaro left yesterday for a short visit in Florida. Also present were the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, with their daughter, Senorita Laura Recinos; Col. and Mrs. Morris Thatcher, the Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd, the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza, the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Barron, the Minister of Colombia and Senora de Lopez, the Counselor of the Egyptian Legation, Mr. Anis Azer, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director of the Pan American Union; Dr. and Mrs. Bolvar Lloyd, Mrs. Thomas Dawson, the Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Gualhalla, the First Secretary of the Ecuadorian Embassy and Senora de Mantilla-Ortega, Senorita Marta Trueco, daughter of the Ambassador to Chile, the former Venezuelan Minister and Senora de Arcaya, and Dr. and Mrs. N. H. Darton.

Date

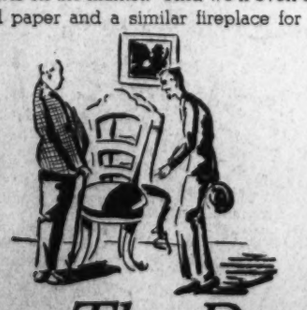
YOUR HUSBAND FOR THIS WHOLE AFTERNOON

You're both free this afternoon, aren't you? Then why not meet your spouse at 1 sharp. Shower him with attentions. Treat him to a good lunch. Get him into a "yes" mood. Then tow him here to see that boudoir chair you've been aching to own. More than likely he'll take his check book out with a flourish. It's a good time, too, to show him that 18th Century Room (described below) you want transported to your house. It's so much easier to convince him of its virtues when you have him on the scene!

Own

THAT MODERN 18TH CENTURY LIVING ROOM YOU'VE ADMIRED

Wouldn't you like to rub Aladdin's lamp and have that 18th Century Model Living-Room transported—exactly as is—to your own home? No fuss and dither involved—and you'd have the last word in interior decorating. Traditional pieces against a modern background. 18th century love seats with modern upholstery. The graceful lines of Chippendale chairs reflected in the highly polished linoleum floor. Chinese lamps coupled with an indirect torcherie. $1,214.59 will reproduce it for you—down to the rose bowls on the mantel. And we'll even order the wall paper and a similar fireplace for you.



The Proof

OF A STORE'S PUDDING IS IN THE CUSTOMERS WHO COME BACK

Two gentlemen of venerable years had their hearts set on a particular occasional chair. It was the only one in stock—and neither gentleman wanted to wait for a re-order. Said gentleman A: "I ought to have the chair because I've been dealing here for 47 years." "Tut-tut," replied Gentleman B, expanding his chest like a pouter pigeon, "I've been buying at this store for 55 years." Is it any wonder we're proud as peacocks of our policies and ideals—the two things that make our customers our friends?

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1937

Wings.

Dark-haired Mary Foley Benson wears silved wings in her coat lapel. She hasn't kept track of her flying hours, nor kept track of the number of insects' wings she has drawn. Statistics wouldn't engage a person who chose such interesting work as drawing insects and such pastimes as aviation and the collecting of data on seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth century collars and cuffs.

She draws the insects, a variety of other things, for the Agriculture Department—she flies from wherever a plane will take off and she compiles the collars and cuffs data at her home. She had rather talk about the collars and cuffs; much prefers it to talk of the Aero Club, of which she is the only woman trustee, or the Washington Air Derby Association, which made her a member of its house committee.

Like everyone with a hobby, she has no idea how or why she began it, but she knows exactly whither she's drifting with it. Toward a book, she says emphatically, a book that will have illustrations and text by her own pen and brush. Collar and cuff material, of course, literally fluff and billow around her—she works in the Smithsonian Institution.

A big window pours daylight over her desk and on her microscope that some insect or another is almost constantly squirming under. And the window frames a large horizon which airplanes often go gypsying across. Then it's wings through the window and under the searching lens and wings on the coat lapel. And collars and cuffs and a book in the making at home.

Researches Glamorous.

Heave anchor, m' boys, for a good sea's a-runnin' and off for reconnaissance of the wintering ground for the large shrimp. Out to deep water with a fast wind blowing, but not out beyond 100 miles because the U. S. F. S. Pelican—Diesel-powered and 78-foot—won't stand great distance strain. But they're out now with Dr. Lionel A. Walford controlling the hydrographic and biological research of the United States Bureau of Fisheries' shrimp investigation. The problem and aim:

During the winter months the larger shrimp disappear from the fishery, leaving only the small sizes. It is thought that the large shrimp may move offshore into deeper water where large supplies may be present that are not now subject to any fishery. If a spring fishery for the missing shrimp can be developed, the present annual yield of about 120,000,000 pounds for the South Atlantic and Gulf area would be increased materially.

Lee A. Strong, chief, Bureau Entomology and Plant Quarantine, won't find in his test tubes a liquid specific for the long and traditional list of farmer woes, but he thinks phenothiazine may rid the farmer's acres of some of its pests. Phenothiazine, says Mr. Strong, is the most promising of the new insecticides. A compound of carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen and sulphur—easily prepared by combining diphenylamine, a common aniline derivative and sulphur—phenothiazine has executed the larvae of mosquitoes and has killed the coddling moth. It would, then, seem capable of killing about everything except the mortgage on the farmer's place. But this would transgress other governmental bureaus.

Ships: Past and Present.

"Sleek-hulled clipper ships, piled high with sail and driven hard, met the challenge of steam at sea victoriously but very briefly at the middle of the last century. Winds do not blow at the will of even the cleverest designers or most daring sailors and the regularity of steamers with their self contained power was not to be denied," says Frank A. Taylor in advance comment on "Romance of Ships," the Smithsonian Institution's broadcast for tomorrow. Taylor is the curator of engineering.

Zoning Body Denies Rule Change Plea

Hillcrest Apartments Are Turned Down by Board.

It may be "noisier than Broadway" in the vicinity of Eighteenth street and Columbia road northwest—according to contentions of Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), New York—but the District Zoning Commission apparently does not believe this makes it necessary to increase the community's number of commercial establishments.

At a lengthy meeting yesterday, the Commission denied application of Charles A. Douglas, local attorney, to change zoning regulations permitting construction of stores on the first floor of a proposed apartment house at 1930 Columbia road.

A house on the property, owned by Douglas, is now occupied by Representative Bloom. At recent public hearings on the application, Bloom said the section was "noisier than Broadway" and he was going to move.

He urged the commission to approve Douglas' proposal to erect an apartment and install stores. A sound-proof apartment could be built, he said, and the only adequate return Douglas could receive from his property would be through commercial use.

Residents of the community, however, rose in protest. They said the neighborhood now had ample store facilities and any additional commercial enterprises would be a burden. The Commission's refusal, it is believed, was based on these protests.

Application to erect apartments on a number of tracts in the Hillcrest (Southeast) section also was denied by the commission. Action on a number of controversial applications, discussed at recent hearings, was deferred until the commission's next meeting on Monday.

Among these was the proposed construction of a "park and shop" center and apartment house at Connecticut avenue and Legation street northwest.

Other applications, approved and refused, yesterday are as follows:

Approved—Application of the Hechinger Co. to use lots in the rear of 614-16 M street northwest for a ginger ale distributing depot.

Refused—Application of Charles W. Fairfax to use lots in the rear of 2123-25 S street northwest for a public service garage.

Application of Esther M. Cady and William E. Winder to use a lot in the rear of 2510-12 K street northwest for an automobile repair shop.

Application of William D. Phillips and James S. Hadley to use lots in the rear of 1341 H street northeast for an automobile repair shop.

Glamor of Vienna Shown in Movies By Erich Mann

Emphasizing the value of motion pictures as historical records, Erich Mann spoke last night before the National Geographic Society in Constitution Hall on "Vienna the Glamorous."

Illustrating his talk with scenes tracing Viennese history in outline, Mann showed the three historic men commonly connected with the downfall of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, Franz Josef, Emperor from 1848 to 1916, was shown riding in the streets of Vienna and inspecting the military cadets in 1910; Karl, his successor, was seen reviewing Austrian troops on the Russian front in 1918, and Archduke Francis Ferdinand, whose assassination at Sarajevo precipitated the World War, also was shown.

The modern Vienna, including pictures of the Duke of Windsor, ex-King Alfonso of Spain, the waltz being played and danced in night clubs, and modernistic houses for workingmen's families, was shown with sound.

Refrigerator Salesmen Shown Trade Movies

More than 400 Frigidaire salesmen of the local district, meeting at the Hotel Mayflower yesterday, saw sound motion pictures showing manufacturing processes. The meeting was attended by a group of executives from the Dayton, Ohio, quarters of the company.

The convention program dealt principally with new household refrigeration products. Two carloads of equipment were brought here for demonstration purposes.

Noted Novelist Discusses Mexico

MISS ADRIANA SPADONI.

Old Success Rules Displaced By New Maxims, Says Novelist

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Copy book maxims—such as "Every good boy does fine" and "Justice shines by its own light"—no longer can be considered keynotes of success. In the complexity of modern American Life, they are as outmoded as the threadbare theory that all energetic youngsters still have a chance, like Horatio Alger's fabulous heroes, to begin as messenger boys and work their way to the top of a great corporation.

That, at least, is the way Adriana Spadoni, novelist and commentator on the contemporary scene, looks at it. She said as much yesterday as she sat at her desk over at WPA headquarters and told why she writes books—why anyone should write books, for that matter—and how she goes about gathering material to clothe a skeleton-idea "that simply has to be put on paper."

A small woman with dark eyes and a shock of short, graying hair, Miss Spadoni is one of those rare individuals who rarely open their mouths without saying something that bears weight. In the midst of the beehive of activity pervading the Federal Writer's Project she was quiet, and self-contained, and apparently unaware for the time being that telephones were tingling constantly and persons were ceaselessly shuttling back and forth in front of her desk depositing manuscripts, papers, books—all addressed to Mrs. John Turner, State editor of the FWP, who is none other than Miss Spadoni herself.

For the purpose of an interview, the editor had yielded to the author. An the author was, by her own admission, expounding one of her pet theories, which serves as sort of a framework for her latest novel, "Not All Rivers," published recently.

Discussing the book, she said the characters in it, as in her other novels, are for the most part professional persons—doctors, lawyers, teachers and artists—middle-class men and women, representing that vast group of Americans who are faced with the difficulty of appearing prosperous in the lean years when their incomes are probably less than if they were hod carriers or brick layers.

"In recent years, the professional class has suffered silently but more surely than any of its contemporaries," she said.

"The depression shoved them into straits where in many cases keeping up appearances became virtually impossible. For a time, they held doggedly to their old beliefs in the moth-worn maxims that have sustained and inspired the middle-class man for generations. Then, fighting despairingly the battle of bare survival, these doctors, lawyers, artists and scientists opened their eyes and began to look around, studying those who were in the same boat. They discovered, for the first time that men and women who work with their heads and collect fees are confronted with the same struggle for existence as those who work with their hands for day wages. Each group depends on the united strength of both. In other words, the doctor and the ditch-digger must help each other to swim to shore, or both will drown in a capitalistic maelstrom."

The time has definitely passed when the professional man can retire into his ivory tower and sit back blandly, expecting justice to be meted out according to the tradition of patience and fair play, Miss Spadoni believes. "The doctor, lawyer, merchant or small business chief who blindly believes 'justice shines by its own light' has learned nothing at all from the depression," she continued. "The middle-class man must wake up to the fact that all workers are caught in the same storm, and that all must stand together in order to survive at all in a country where money still represents the greatest strength."

Miss Spadoni's conviction in this respect caused her to write "Not All Rivers," which portrays a group of professional persons, "muddle Liberals," as she terms them, who face greed, injustice and despair with no idea about how to protect themselves. "I believe these characters are fairly typical of many middle-class people in the United States today," she said; then added prophetically, "and I believe these people, like my characters, will eventually awaken to the necessity of standing shoulder to shoulder with the colored-shirted worker in the struggle for survival."

The battle for mere existence as it manifests itself in the lives of many different types of people has been portrayed in Miss Spadoni's other books, beginning with "The Swing of the Pendulum," which was based on the author's observations while she did sociological research in San Francisco, Chicago and New York. Born in California, the off-spring of an Italian father and an English mother, Miss Spadoni grew up with her eyes opened to problems of people living in an alien land.

Her sympathy with difficulties facing Italian immigrants increased with the years and was largely responsible for the fact that as a student at the University of California she became particularly interested in sociology and later conducted extensive research in three cities.

Her desire to know more about working circumstances in factories, shops and offices prompted her at various times to obtain jobs in them in order to make a first-hand study of conditions. Much material gathered in this way later was used in her books—"but I can truthfully say," she explained, "that I have never deliberately sought any surrounding in order to write about suit of a conviction that through it.

WPA Drops 130 on Staff In 2 Weeks

Decrease Is Mostly in White Collar Jobs, Cass Points Out.

Approximately 130 District WPA workers — supervisors, foremen, clerks, timekeepers, etc.—have been dropped from local project pay rolls since February 1, it was learned last night.

And within the next 10 days, an additional 25 are scheduled for dismissal, according to reports.

The curtailment order, however, affects only non-relief employes in supervisory or clerical positions, local WPA authorities hastened to point out. Workers certified from public relief rolls—mostly labor—will retain their jobs.

A drastic decrease in Federal WPA fund allotments to the District was given by Otto J. Cass, deputy administrator, as reason for the wholesale poy roll cut.

Indefinite Furloughs.

He added that the dismissals are not permanent, but merely "indefinite furloughs." The furloughed workers will be given prior consideration if and when the local WPA staff is increased, Cass said.

Until the first of this month, the average Federal grant to District WPA was $425,000 a month. Cass said he was recently notified that this amount would be cut to $409,000—a monthly pay roll decrease of approximately $15,000.

And at the same time, he announced that 105 WPA workers, certified from public relief rolls, have been dropped since October. An investigation, he said, showed these workers to be no longer qualified for relief positions.

Outside positions or incomes, Cass explained, gave the dismissed workers better opportunities.

$120 Average Salary.

Average salaries of the 130 "furloughed" supervisory and clerical positions, Cass asserted, was $120 a month.

After 25 additional furloughs, he said, it is unlikely that any further cuts will be made. Commissioner George E. Allen, District WPA administrator, is now in Chicago attending a meeting of administrators from all sections of the country.

Future of the PWA program—the District included—depends on the outcome of this conference, Cass declared.

At present, the District has 13,286 persons working on WPA projects—6,458 on local projects, 1,900 classified under the National Youth Administration, 3,036 on Federal projects and 1,892 at the Resettlement project at Berwyn, Md.

450 Supervisors Remain.

With the recent furloughs, a staff of 450 supervisors remains to direct project activities, Cass said.

Each furloughed worker received the following letter signed by Cass:

"Due to an enforced curtailment of our personnel because of lack of funds available for supervisory and clerical personnel, it will be necessary that you be put on a status of indefinite furlough. This action is taken without prejudice.

"If at any future time it is possible to increase our staff those on furlough will be given every consideration."

Miner Fully Recovered From Ordeal in Shaft

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 12.—Robert J. Johnson, 36, rescued nine days ago from an abandoned coal mine near Flemington, where he was imprisoned nine days, will leave the hospital here tomorrow, according to his physicians, fully restored to health.

Johnson was rapidly regaining the 50 pounds he lost while he was the object of frantic rescue efforts at the water-logged mine.

Plan Sent to Roosevelt Seeks Street and Park Improvements, Playgrounds and Recreation Centers.

An 11-point program for the gradual improvement of the District's streets and parks and for the elimination of traffic congestion and slum conditions here was recommended to the President by the National Resources Committee yesterday.

Similar long-term programs, based on surveys of natural resources, were recommended for Maryland and Virginia, with projects to the two States' resources included.

In the District the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, working with the committee, has recommended a thoroughfare plan for the District, with standard street and sidewalk width; a complete plan of city parks, playgrounds and neighborhood recreation centers; legislation and appropriations for parkland acquisition; plans for furother railroad and terminal facilities, and for improvement of existing street car lines; school and municipal center programs; a planned street-layout through 150 changes; legislation to protect Government projects from injury through harmful real estate developments; revisions of legislation for property-acquisition by condemnation; study of park administrative organization; study of traffic and parking problems; slum conditions study.

Maryland Plans.

In Maryland, the committee recommended: Sweeping changes in legislation for the conservation of oyster and crab areas; study for redistribution of the State's taxing facilities by redistributing the taxable resources of the State; a definite referendum policy on local bond issues; a 10-year highway construction program; a survey of recreational facilities throughout the State and conservation studies.

In Virginia the committee recommended: Studies of the inter-relation of rural schools and primary and secondary State highways; studies of the consolidation of schools; study of wage rates; study of seafood industries in the State; study of Hampton Roads pollution, and a recommendation for a State legislative advisory council to cooperate with the Governor.

In a message to the American Planning and Civic Association which held a dinner at the Hotel Willard last night in honor of the National Resources Committee President Roosevelt expressed the hope that through a continuing National Resources Board "co-operative planning" can be widely developed among all State governments

Speakers at the dinner included Dr. Baldwin M. Woods, of Berkeley, Calif.; Charles W. Eliot 2d, executive officer of the National Resources Committee, and Dr. Charles E. Merriam, a member of the President's Committee on Administration Management and also of the national resource group.

Earlier in the day Horace M. Albright, of New York City, was elected president of the American Planning and Civic Association at the annual business meeting of its board of directors and advisory council. He succeeds Frederic A. Delano, of Washington, who has served as president of the association for the past 12 years.

Albright, who has been vice president of the association for the past year, was associated with the National Park Service fro mthe time of its creation in 1916 until 1933, when he resigned to enter private business. He served successively as director, acting director and, from 1929 to 1933, as director.

Worked In Capital.

A member of many conservation societies, Albright worked for four years on the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. He is now chairman of the finance committee for Colonial Williamsburg, Inc.

For his public parks work, Albright, in 1933, was awarded the Pugaley gold medal by the American Scenic and Preservation Society. He is co-author of the book "Ah Ranger!"

Delano will continue with the association as chairman of its board of directors. He is also chariman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, vice chairman of the National Resources Committee, chairman of the Central Housing Committee and a regent of the Smithsonian Institution.

Colored Boy Victim Here Of Motorist

Elderly Man Seriously Injured When Hit by Auto.

The death of a 9-year-old colored boy, who was struck by an automobile yesterday afternoon, last night brought the 1937 traffic toll in the District to 20—four ahead of the record of 16 for this time last year.

Richard Francis, of 3007 Sherman avenue northwest, died in Freedman's Hospital three hours after he was hit by a taxi in front of his home. Physicians said a fractured skull caused death.

Nose Is Broken.

Samuel Bready, 86, of 310 Emerson street northwest, suffered a possible fracture of his skull and a broken nose yesterday when he was struck by an automobile driven, police said, by Francis L. Gaskell, 31, of the 1900 block Newton street northeast.

He was taken to Garfield Hospital, where physicians said his condition was serious. Gaskell was arrested by police, who charged him with operating an automobile while intoxicated.

Harvey Jackson, 37, of 200 D street northwest, suffered concussion of the brain and cuts and bruises when he was struck by an automobile in the 500 block of Third street northwest yesterday.

Held as Reckless Driver.

Police arrested Joseph H. Smith, 47, of the 400 block of Fourth street northwest, and charged him with reckless driving.

Cuts and bruises were suffered yesterday by Private Paul H. Dell, a member of the Fourteenth Bombing Squadron, of Bolling Field, when his motorcycle collided with an automobile on the Eleventh Street Bridge.

Louise B. McKensie, 3, of 519 Seventh street southeast, was cut and bruised late yesterday when she was struck by an automobile near her home. She was taken to Providence Hospital.

Well, I'll Tell You . . . . . By Bob Burns

I declare my time has been taken up so much today that I'm beginning to get worried for fear I won't get this article written at all. It seems like every time I pick up my pencil, some salesman comes to the front door tryin' to sell me some of them modern gadgets for savin' time and makin' life easier. I think one reason why Dickens and them fellas wrote such wonderful books is because they had so much more time to write them in. They didn't have so many time-saving gadgets in them days.

I think it's a lot better to have to work a little bit for your comfort than to have everything so darn easy, anyhow. I've noticed that it's rich people who are so bored with life. I had an old aunt and uncle down home, Aunt Biddy and Uncle Hod, who had worked hard all their lives and had saved some money and they came out here to California to live. Well Sir, one of them real estate salesmen took them out here at the edge of town and showed them one of these modern homes. He showed them a button you pressed when you want heat and another one when you want light. He showed them an automatic icebox and an automatic cook stove. In fact everything was done by pressin' a button. My aunt says "That's handy, all right, but we're gonna get mighty bored with nothin' to do." The salesman says "Well, you're only a stone's throw from the car line.' And Uncle Hod says "Well, that'll give us somethin' to do—in the evenings, Mama and I can sit on the front porch and throw stones at the cars."

A Police Play Stars O'Brien At the Earle

Lela Moore Tops Stage Bill in Unique Dual-Dance, Among Other Acts.

"THE GREAT O'MALLEY." Warner Brothers' picturization of a story by Gerald B. Beaumont, adapted to the screen by Milton Krims and Tom Reed, starring Pat O'Brien, with Humphrey Bogart, Ann Sheridan, Frieda Inescourt, Sybil Jason, Donald Crisp, Henry O'Neill, Hobart Cavanaugh, Mary Gordon, Frank Sheridan and Frank Reicher. Directed by William Dieterle. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

If you would like to gloat over a steaming tureen of Irish stew, "The Great O'Malley" is just your dish. It's full of shamrocks, scrapping and harp cops, Pat O'Brien being a whole troop of cops in himself. If you don't like the Irish the Earle Theater is no place for you this week. But this excludes only an infinitesimal part of the population.

Floating around in the Earle's Irish stew this week you will find a large portion of caviar. This is Mr. Humphrey Bogart (remember his gangster in "Petrified Forest), who is soaring into the stratosphere, professionally speaking. He plays a criminal who is made so only because Pat O'Brien is too tough about handing out traffic tickets on trifling occasion. This sounds a bit thin, but those of us who have received traffic tickets from the late and formidable Officer Sinclair may not find it unconvincing.

Contains Many Ingredients.

All the sure-fire audience appealers have been stirred into the story. There is the sweet little crippled child (played by Sybil Jason), who makes friends with the tough cop who has jailed her father. There is the jolly old Irish mother who coddles her policeman son and the kindly padre who gives him good advice. Lastly, there is the spectacle of the hard-berled egg turning into a very soft-boiled one, meaning that Mr. O'Brien from a stern enforcer of every minor regulation in the police manual turns into the jolly Irish copper that Nature meant him to be—and all because of a little crippled girl. It's all very nice, even if elemental.

The production is slicker than the story and is helped along tremendously by a cast that includes Donold Crisp as a police captain, Frieda Inescort and Ann Sheridan.

Bogart Goes to Top.

What will make the picture significant to anyone is the performance of Humphrey Bogart, now established as one of the finest actors on the screen or off. Simplicity, force and skill are blended marvelously in the Bogart portrayals. He cuts to the heart of a characterization with the art of a great surgeon. He reads even banal lines in a way that makes you believe in them. Even if you do not particularly care for police melodrama, or are not one of the horde of Pat O'Brien's fans, you will find "The Great O'Malley" very much worth while on the single score of Bogart portrayal.

Little Sybil Jason is handicapped by some lines that make Pollyanna seem a pessimist. But the child is effective and appealing given the chance she has in the hospital scenes.

A Popeye comedy about window washing pleased the audience and there is a newsreel notable for its flashes of winter sport in Crystal Valley, the new Alpine Paradise of the West.

On the Stage.

Lela Moore offers a polished and amazing dance novelty that easily tops the stage show. You've probably seen Miss Moore's picture in the papers in a half-and-half costume of dinner suit and evening dress. That doesn't indicate a fraction of her act. She really makes herself seem like two people—two people very much in love who do the startling but natural things associated with that state. There is an overworked word—artiste. Miss Moore rates it.

Cilly Feindt and her wonderful horses will delight you. It's true they are built more like Rosinantes than derby winners. But they can do all the varieties of ballroom dancing in the most endearing fashion. And they'll give you your money's worth, which is more than you can say for the one you picked in the fifth at Santa Anita.

The Balibanow Revue and the Radio Ramblers tie for honors. The Balibanows are accordionists and dancers, all smart people, especially William, who can do practically as much with the accordion as Phil Baker.

Columbia.

"CHAMPAGNE WALTZ." Paramount picturization of a story by Billy Wilder and H. S. Kraft, with screen play by Don Hartman and Frank Butler, starring Gladys Swarthout and Fred MacMurray, supported by Jack Oakie, Velos and Yolanda, Vivienne Osborne, Frank Forest, Herman Bing, Fritz Leiber, Benny Baker, James Burke, Maude Eburne, Ernest Cossart, Michael Visaroff and Maurice Cass. Directed by A. Edward Sutherland. Reviewed (return engagement) by Richard Q. Jones.

Manufactured as Paramount's supreme tribute to Adolph Zukor, in commemoration of the producer's 25 years with the motion picture business and Paramount, "Champagne Waltz" achieves musical entertainment, entertainingly contrived and presented, with no appreciable effort to develop unbelievable and gigantic production numbers or to offer anything but what the casual observer might reasonably believe actually to have happened.

With the story revolving around the traditional "war" between jazz and the classics, involving the descendants of Johann Strauss and American band leader, here is a forthright presentation made still more entertaining by the presence of Gladys Swarthout, Fred MacMurray and, for comedy effects, Jack Oakie.

Three songs embellish the course of the narrative: "Paradise in Waltz Time," "On a Merry-Go-Round" and "Can I Be in Love?" The finale—a jazz-classic arrangement of "Blue Danube" waltz, for both types of orchestras, separately and together—with Miss Swarthout singing—is a delightful conception.

The usual house supplementaries, including an issue of News of the Day, round out an entertaining program.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

'Lloyds of London,' on Palace Screen, Paints Broad Canvas of Stirring Events

Stellar Cast Is Seen in a Semi-Historical Romantic Drama.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"LLOYDS OF LONDON." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Curtis Kenyon, adapted to the screen by Ernest Pascal and Walter Ferris, featuring Freddie Bartholomew, Madeline Carroll, Sir Guy Standing, Tyrone Power and C. Aubrey Smith, with Douglas Scott, Virginia Field, Forrester Harvey, Montagu Love, J. M. Kerrigan, Gavin Muir, John Burton, Lumsden Hare, Una O'Connor, George Saunders, Murray Kinnell, Robert Gries, Billy Bevan, E. E. Clive, Georges Renavent, Arthur Hohl, Reginald Barlow, Holmes Herbert and scores more in support. Directed by Henry King. Previewed Tuesday, February 2.

BELL

Comparable in breadth of drama and physical proportions with such imposing productions as, say, "The House of Rothschild," "David Copperfield" and "Cardinal Richelieu," this expansive film play presents two distinct facets of dramatic interest. It traces the development and growth of one of the world's greatest insurance establishments and at the same time presents a romantic fiction in the background of which are several of the world's greatest figures in history.

The story opens with a boyhood pledge of eternal friendship between Jonathan Blake and Horatio Nelson. These juvenile parts are played with consummate skill by Freddie Bartholomew and Douglas Scott, a youngster who crowds Master Bartholomew pretty closely for honors in diction and deportment. These two are separated by force of circumstances and Jonathan walks all the way to London to warn Lloyds that a plot which he has overheard discussed aboard a mystery ship in the harbor of his native town will swindle them out of huge sums of money.

Gold bullion is to be transferred from one boat to another and the emptied boat scuttled to collect the insurance and permit the plotters to have both it and the gold. Master Blake is taken into the employment of the firm for this service and grows up as one of its most efficient members, eventually forming his own syndicate to handle policies on all manner of risks.

Rescues a Romance.

In the adult periods of the play the roles of Jonathan Blake and Horatio Nelson are played by Tyrone Power and John Burton. It is in these later ramifications of plot that the romantic interest springs up in the person of Lady Elizabeth Stacy, whom Blake has rescued from an ominous situation in France and smuggled safely back to England. Their impetuous and unquenchable love occasions a considerable succession of complications, all of them instituted by Lord Everett Stacy, the villain of the piece, whose actuating motive in life is the acquisition of money by whatever means possible—even to blackmailing his own wife.

In addition to this marital tangle there is in the background of the story the threat of Napoleon and the question of whether or not Lord Nelson and his fleet can protect England against him. This problem precipitates a crisis in the House of Lloyd that furnishes much of the suspense of the drama and a great deal of its climacteric effect.

These are but sketchy outlines of the major elements that comprise this far-flung and extremely well acted and produced story of an institution that is little known, save by name, in this country.

Cast Excels.

As already implied, Freddie Bartholomew and Douglas Scott do especially well with the juvenile roles. No less may be said of Madeleine Carroll, as Lady Elizabeth; Tyrone Power, as the adult Blake; Sir Guy Standing, as Julius Angerstein, one of the mainstays of Lloyds; C. Aubrey Smith, as Old "Q," or Virginia Field, as Polly, the barmaid with whom Old "Q" strikes up a bit of octogenarian romance on his own account. All of these players lend "Lloyds of London" an authenticity, a strong dramatic fiber and a variety of mood and tempo that stamp it as one of the major productions of the season.

There are, of course, in a drama of these dimensions an unnumbered host of supporting players. The names of the principals among these will be found in the small-type paragraph preceding these remarks. All contribute with unfaltering zeal and a high degree of artistry to the rounded excellence of this skillfully contrived story of times and events with which we of today are not too familiar.

Supplementaries.

A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sportreel bearing the name of "Hurling" and a new Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy, done in Walt Disney's best manner, "Country Cousin," provide contrasting notes on a program that is variegated and well balanced in its appeal to both the emotions and the risibilities.

The pictured news events of the week supply the final auxiliary of a feature that is so sound in basic material, so diversified in emotional appeal and so dramatically moving in its creation of suspense and climax as to rank among the foremost screen productions of the current season. It is perhaps significant that Darryl Zanuck, who produced "Lloyds of London" also was the man who produced "The House of Rothschild." They belong in precisely the same category.

RKO-Keith's

"MEN ARE NOT GODS." Alexander Korda's production for London Films and released in America through United Artists of a story by Walter Reisch, starring Miriam Hopkins, with Gertrude Lawrence, Sebastian Shaw, A. E. Matthews, Rex Harrison, Laura Smithson, Winifred Willard, James Harcourt, Noel Howlett and Sybil Grove. Directed by Walter Reisch. Reviewed Friday evening by Sally Stroud.

If you missed Walter Huston's "Othello" when it was here, you still have a chance to catch some choice scenes from that play. In fact, in this latest and quite typically good Korda production, the leading man is an actor who plays Othello, and proves, insofar as he himself is concerned, that "men are not gods," even as Shakespeare insisted so long ago.

The high-pitch of the acting is reached in the murder scene, when the Moor puts out the light and then puts out the light . . . Desdemona's light. There is, however, an interruption from the gallery by a young woman who was even then attending the performance for around the thirtieth time. And why should she be a-screaming and a-raving right in the midst of a fine bit of actoring?

She felt she had a right to holler, for she knew that Othello really meant all his death-portending lines. And she knew why the handsome actor wished to choke his lovely and gentle wife. For, in the course of the run of their play, she had met them, champagned and drunk tea with them, and incidentally, fallen in love with the man. In some fine streaks of talking, she has sworn to renounce him, for a little stranger was coming to gladden their home. And anyway, she is a nice young newspaper woman with a young man named Tommy for an escort and doesn't have to break up happy homes to have fun.

Are Newspaper People.

Tommy does obituaries and Ann, the girl-in-love (Miriam Hopkins) is secretary to the drama editor on the London Daily Post. Switching the wording of an adverse review which her boss had given the title actor in Othello's first night, she thereby gains the friendship of his wife (Gertrude Lawrence), and the interest of Othello himself (Sebastian Shaw.)

And so on, gillipy-gallupy, to the crashing crescendo of the smash-finale. After all, some few things should be left for you to discover. The typical Korda touches are there in profusion. Especially good are a maid, a blackmailing female artist, Tommy the obituary-specialist, and Mr. Frederick Skeets, the drama editor who likes to clip with big shears.

Miriam Hopkins plays with a swift spontaneity which is infectious and effective. Sebastian Shaw is more handsome in his Othello makeup, but possesses a wooing voice which will even things up for the girls in the gallery. Gertrude Lawrence is sometimes good and sometimes only fair in a straight dramatic role. Seems better to see her eyes spitting fire or her tongue wisecracks, than in this sacrificial part.

Numerous Subsidiaries.

The mechanical superiority of Hollywood in picture-making is evidenced in the comparative poorness of several feet of sound-track in this film. Which bit of patriotic fervor might have been brought on by the redundancy of God Save the King's being played loudly, and for no apparent reason, to begin and end the picture.

"Fun Begins at Home" is a dippy comedy about two folk who have a butler who helps pay the rent. Included are bits by Virginia Vereil and the Charioteers which are listenable-to.

Are Rivals in Love on Met. Screen

lain roles every time. You'd think the police would have nabbed him after their first glance. As Mr. Griswold he is sufficiently brutal, sadistic, thorough and sinister.

Dean Jagger and Florence Rice (daughter of Grantland) are two pleasant young people who don't get killed. Sara Haden, Dorothy Peterson, Frank Reicher and Nat Pendleton are among the victims, suspects and police. Eddie Lowe, crisp and suave, hasn't anything to do and does it with his customary charm.

On the Stage.

On the stage, dusky Stepin Fetchit—genius of a sort—demonstrates the art of doing nothing. Unfortunately, he doesn't seem to have been wired for sound, or maybe he didn't intend to have his audience understand his mumblings. A little bit of it is funny, a lot was boring. However, he proves he can lift his heels and he has aswell exit gag.

Arthur LaFleur opens the festivities in an amazing demonstration of strong teeth, clear head and whirling abilities which left us very dizzy and him perfectly steady. Wally Ward and partner follow in an amusing little act of nonsense and noises—Mr. Ward being a good dog, Jew's harp, etc., etc., etc. Clyde McCoy and his Sugar Blues Orchestra provide smooth music, swing rhythms, Joan Cavell, with an excellent blues voice, and Wayne Gregg, who goes to town with the orchestra in "I'm an Old Cow Hand."

Subsidiaries include a very funny Terry Toon, "Big Game Hunt," a travelogue to some of our Western National Parks, a Pat Rooney jr.—Herman Timber jr. comedy and the newsreel.

Metropolitan

"DEVIL'S PLAYGROUND." Columbia picturization of a story by Norman Springer, with screen play by Liam O'Flaherty, Jerome Chodorov and Dalton Trumbo, starring Richard Dix, Dolores Del Rio and Chester Morris, supported by George McKay, Pierre Watkins, Ward Bond, Don Rowan, Stanley Andrews, Francis McDonald and John Gallaudet. Directed by Erle C. Kenton. Previewed Tuesday midnight by W. A. Whitney.

Whatever may be thought to be the dramatic possibilities of "Devil's Playground"—a triple starring vehicle on which the great Liam O'Flaherty was one of the screenplay authors—let not one's imagination become too active, for herein is little to interest the cinema-goer who seeks something more substantial than is offered by trite, much retold narrative, performed in just an ordinary manner.

In fact, it seems a shame that the known talents of those associated with the fabrication of this picture should be so little manifest. Here is the usual yarn about a home-loving sailor who does marry and settle down only to have his pal come in and fall for the spouse—unwillingly, of course. And then the pal gets into trouble, and our hero makes the grand gesture.

Girl Adds Novelty.

Although no particular effort has been made to disguise the yarn, the part of the girl adds a bit of novelty to the story, for she was not the proper one for our hero to have married anyway, and the picture closes with her, apparently having been given the air.

Richard Dix does well by the diver-hero, but Chester Morris seems unenthused by the task of being the unsuspecting home-wrecker. Dolores Del Rio, as the girl in question, cannot be said to augment her well-earned reputation in this interpretation of the dance-hall gal turned duplicitous wife. The supporting cast is satisfactory.

The naval aspects of the picture are interesting, and the sea action is good, but when the film goes romantic then is when it ceases to exhibit any appreciable entertainment value.

Auxiliary Bill.

Topping the list of supplementary subjects is the return engagement of "Popeye the Sailor Meets Sinbad the Sailor," that two-real technicolor subject first seen last fortnight at the Earle Theater. Although it does not double the usual Popeye value (the picture is 17 minutes against Popeye's usual seven), it is still a worthy contribution to cartoonal distinction.

Other short subjects include "Swanee Cruise," with the Louisiana Kings (the late Senator Huey Long's favorite band) and the Robinson Twins presenting a bass-heavy cycle of "Southern" songs and fast stepping; an issue of the "Vitaphone Pictorial Revue," showing a variety of interesting topics and the combined releases of the Paramount and Universal newsreels.

Capitol

"NDER COVER OF NIGHT." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of an original story by Bertram Millhauser, featuring Edmund Lowe, supported by Florence Rice, Nat Pendleton, Henry Daniell, Sara Haden, Dean Jagger, Dorothy Peterson and Frank Reicher. Directed by George B. Seitz. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

It may be novel to know who the murderer is and to watch him commit his crimes but it isn't particularly nice.

We felt that we simply must get up out of our nice comfortable Capitol chair, hurry out and call a cop, what with four murders going on—under cover of just one night—and the murderer getting ready for more. With the picture police spending their time in a Turkish bath, something should have been done.

Since there are no secrets about this opus, we'll report that Mr. Marvin Griswold wants to be head of the physics department of his college and since there are a number of people in his way, he efficiently and expeditiously, but not very cleverly, removes them, one, two, three, four—just like that.

Is A Thrill Picture.

There is no humor. There is some horror for those as likes it; a few thrills for recognizing clues long before Detective Edmund Lowe does, and considerable melodrama when Mr. Griswold gets around to hiding a prospective victim in a chest, trying to smother her a la Desdemona, and sending out for suitcases to put her in, in case he is successful in the smothering.

The beginning of the story is vastly promising and the tangle caused by intended victims visiting other victims adds some zest, but wholesale killing spoils the thing.

Henry Daniell has a nose and a look-down-it that gets him vil-

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Bonanza.

When East doubled, in today's hand, he didn't really expect a bonanza. His was largely a speculative double, but it was not very risky. He could be pretty sure of two things: that South could not redouble, in view of North's weak bidding, and that the club suit could not be run. If his partner could stop the diamonds (not at all unlikely from the bidding) South might very easily take a bad beating. The fact that South was not a good player encouraged him in this view.

Whatever East's expectation, he could not have been disappointed; for what happened to poor South was pitiful. North's redouble was more logical than cautious. He expected his partner to have a club fit, but the double should have warned him that trouble was afoot.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ 8 4 3 ♡ Q 10 4 ◇ 7 ♣ A Q J 9 5 3
♠ Q 10 7 5 ♡ 8 7 6 ◇ Q 10 9 3 ♣ 8 4	North West East South	♠ K 6 2 ♡ K J 9 2 ◇ 6 4 ♣ K 10 7 2
	♠ A J 9 ♡ A 5 3 ◇ A K J 8 5 2 ♣ 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Dble.
Pass	Pass	Redble.	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the eight of hearts. His own diamond and spade holdings convinced him that the double had been based largely on clubs and hearts. Since declarer would probably try to develop the clubs, the heart lead was most likely to gain "time" for the defense.

South played the ten of hearts from the dummy, and West's Jack forced out the Ace. South should have tried to minimize the loss by playing a low heart and later attacking the diamonds, but instead won and took the club finesse.

East won with the King of clubs and led a low spade. South ducked and lost to West's ten. A second heart lead permitted East to run the suit, West discarding his last club on the fourth heart. East next led a low diamond and South's Jack lost to West's Queen. A spade return cleared the suit and South disconsolately cashed his top diamonds and gave up the rest.

Declarer could have made at least one trick more in the play, but even that would not have done him much good. His major error was in letting the strength of his hand blind him to the misfit. East's double should have caused him to run out to four diamonds, a contract at which he was not likely to be "crucified." As it was, the hand resulted in a score of 1800 for East and West!

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, February 12.

DAVE SELZNICK: Herman Mankiewicz and Leland Hayward finally got that serum off to Myron Selznick, who is a pneumonia victim in Hollywood. There are only 195,000 units of that serum in New York. All of it was sent in a specially chartered Douglas transport, at 5 a. m. yesterday. It cost $4,200—payable in advance. At that hour, "Baron" Jack Kriendler raised the money for them. . . . M.-G.-M.: A Broadway actor, who went to Hollywood for a bit role in "After the Thin Man," suddenly went crazy in Hollywood yesterday. Ben Blue stopped him from jumping through his hotel window. . . . Richard Whitney: Goodman Ace tells friends that everything he touches turns to Goldman-Sachs!

HAILA STODDARD: Your fiance, Sidney Kingsley, was directing a road company of "Dead End," and discovered that a charming job applicant was flirting with him. "Never mind that, keep your mind on your work," he told her. Then he added, "and that goes for me, too!" . . . Dept. of Commerce: A transport pilot who figured in a crack-up recently had been warned of dangerous flying conditions. The rumor is that he took his ship up nevertheless—because he wanted to get back to keep a date with his girl. . . . Fire Com. McElligott: Carla Wharton went to the Paramount the other night. Three times the ushers told her to move from the place where she was standing. "Madam, they told her, "if you stand there—you're a fire hazard!"

HARRY RICHMAN: Roger Wolfe Kahn just flew in from Florida to get his new Lockheed plane, the first twin-motor job ever built for a civilian flyer. It had a 14-passenger capacity, but was cut down to 8 by Kahn, in order to make room for a buffet and desk. . . . ASCAP: Robbins Music Co., which recently absorbed Feist and Olman, is taking over the Miller Music Co.—the firm which was subsidized by the late William H. Woodin. . . . Ziegfeld Girls Club: Vera Milton, one of your members, who for years has been known as Broadway's dumbest chorine, decided to change her make-up last week and become a new Vera Milton. She dyed her hair from blonde to red, and hunted for a job. Well, the new Vera Milton is getting a job—in "Behind Red Lights." She'll be one of the street-walkers in the play!

The band reads: "To my Valentine. With the fond hope that you will like it—but not too much."* . . . Will Hays: Marlene Dietrich, dressed flamboyantly, was mobbed by autograph hunters outside of "21" the other night. Her last picture, "Garden of Allah," flopped. Ten minutes later a young lady, dressed very simply, departed from the same place, unmolested. She's the critics' prize-winner and academy award nominee —Luise Rainer.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, Feb. 12.—Idol-chatter: Wonder if Mrs. Pat O'Brien has trouble with him on St. Patrick's Day? Members of the colony's little-known "Cape Horners" Club include Lee Tracy, Warren William and others who have sailed around it. Peas from the same pod: Song-and-dance newcomer Ella Logan and Simone Simon. Eleanore Whitney would not let cops arrest the man who kissed her as she stepped from a plane in Cleveland, which should encourage other men with ideas. Never a Fred Astaire picture that he does not dance on a stairway.

JOAN BENNETT.

Sonja Heinie must be from the south of Norway because she has a special pocket in her skating costume for her rabbit's foot. Nitshell description of Eleanor Powell: Delegtable. You may thank a studio cafe waitress for suggesting revival of favorite old songs on Bing Crosby's airings. Transpose letters in the word "lips" and you get "lisp," which is the way Kay gets "Fwancis" out of "Francis." Critic's comment I never expected to read: "Victor McLaglen plays his usual pretty boy role."

Worshipers at the Temple, Shirley, get their money's worth. Reverse teeth in an old saw: Buck Jones is a big city boy who made good in small towns (his pictures do tremendous business in villages). That nude statue of Mae West in her living room has nowhere near the umphh of the live original. Bum hunch I bet on a nag named Wrack because it was ridden by Jockey Lowe, and Eddie Lowe is lucky—but rain followed Wrack! Babe Hardy is such a consistent poker winner, his cronies call their games "Hardy benefits."

You might recognize the face of this little story on-screen, but his name will mean little to you. I use it simply to add a clipping to his scrap book. And I tell the tale because it illustrates why thousands of extras struggle for years, fed on hope alone.

Back in 1928, Samuel S. Hinds was a prosperous attorney in his middle forties, apparently assured of a nice life income. Came the crash (surely you remember the crash!) and he was wiped out. Nothing to lose, he registered with Central Casting Bureau—extra work meant food. His first job was atmosphere, but over the years fortune has smiled, and today he is on contract at $500 a week, and playing rather important roles.

Ironically, he often portrays attorneys, and I sometimes wonder how he feels when he "pleads a case" before a "judge" from the actor ranks? He earned more money in his previous profession, but he is happier now. That, he says, counts heaviest. More important, he lighthouses the way for other extras who see in him proof that one may rise from the fies to the fore.

Joan Bennett has struck upon the most sensible, comfortable method of dealing out autographs. When a premiere or preview mob descends upon her, she remains seated in her car while the chauffeur passes books, cards and papers, one at a time until all have been signed. That done, Joan alights peacefully and enters the theater without loss of gloves, bag, buttons, or poise. How different from Ginger Rogers, who came through her last lobby meelee looking as if she had just fought two wild cats and a wind machine.

Scandal Seen In 'Build-up' Operations

Huttick Says He Was 5th Fighter Sent Down to Lose to Shotputter.

Olympic Athlete Has a Clean Bill; Inquiry Is Under Way.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, Feb. 12.—Self-identified Arthur Huttick, boxer, and Herb Brodie, manager of Louisiana's giant athlete, Jack Torrance, were held incommunicado tonight for investigation of an amazing story of "fixed" fighting by a New York "built-up" syndicate.

Huttick, billed as "Jack Willis," disappeared before a fight with Torrance at Baton Rouge and when arrested later, "confessed" that he was the fifth man sent into the State under a fake name to "take a dive" for Torrance, who is being trained as a heavyweight contender.

The Louisiana Boxing Commission today had Huttick and Brodie arrested and kept in a secret place pending the commission's special meeting here at 11 a. m. Saturday. Chairman Irwin Poche said none would be allowed to see the men and refused to say where they were held.

Torrance Gets Clean Bill.

Poche said Huttick was about 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighed 185 pounds.

"I'll have plenty to tell you tomorrow," Poche quoted Huttick as saying.

Huttick's story, if true, promised a national boxing scandal. Torrance was given a clean bill as the victim of the affair, but held a doubtful position in boxing, nevertheless. He himself, bitterly disillusioned, considered himself "washed up."

Huttick said he was a former New York University athlete. Boxing records show that his last fight was in 1934. New York advices said he had planned to join the New York police force.

Five Told to Take a Dive.

Huttick, who told his story of syndicate "build-up" to Deputy Boxing Commissioner Brother Peter, principal of Catholic High School, said his conscience wouldn't let him appear in a faked fight. He exhibited a typewritten, unsigned instruction sheet, showing train connections for the round trip from New York and with instructions to "take a dive" in the first round.

Huttick said the so-called Johnny Saxon, Owen Flynn, Jerry Miller and Billy Owens who had preceded him as opponents of young Torrance all were sent from New York with instructions to take the count. Boxing records show none of them as they were identified here. "Saxon" really was knocked out accidentally as he fell, Huttick said.

Signed With Jacobs.

Before the "Jack Willis"-Torrance fight in Baton Rouge Wednesday night was called off, Brodie heatedly denied there was "any monkey business." Brodie said he personally held the contract with Torrance and denied he was a "front" for anyone else.

Torrance reputedly was under a 10-year contract at an annual guarantee of $2,500 to Mike Jacobs, of New York. A local promoter, Abe Katz, dealt with Jacobs prior to "Owen Flynn's" arrival to fight the former king of the shot putters here. Katz reportedly displayed a telegram signed "Mike Jacobs" concerning the bout, but later disclaimed knowledge as to whether Jacobs had anything to do with Torrance's contract.

Eagles Five Beats Va. Medicos, 28-27

Richmond, Va., Feb. 12.—A ball from Substitute Hal Toner's fingers slipped through the hoop as the whistle blew to give Paul Smith's rejuvenated American University Eagles their second straight victory, a 28 to 27 win over Virginia Medical College, here last night.

The Eagles took an early lead but trailed at the halftime, 15-12. Midway in the second period Capt. Sid Zink tied the score at 22-all, as he took a pass under the basket from Bartlett and made good on a foul attempt.

Toner scored to tie the game again with a minute to play, and Jarrett converted on a foul attempt with eleven seconds to play. Toner took the ball up the court and scored from mid-floor as the whistle blew. Foul shots kept the Medicos in the running, for they made but two field shots in the second period.

Meet in Boston Tonight May Set 4 Marks

Mile, 2-Mile, Pole Vault and High Jump Marks Likely to Topple.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Feb. 12.—A hand-picked army of track and field stars, including several Olympians and foreign champions, will continue the attack on the indoor world records tomorrow night in the forty-eighth Boston A. A. games at the Boston Garden.

At least four marks appear to be in danger, provided the garden's new 11-lap track lives up to expectations.

Glenn Cunningham, America's premier miler, has promised to go after his 4:08.4 indoor mark when he lines up with Gene Venzke, Don Lash and George Clark, the Canadian champion, in the blue-ribbon Hunter mile, and at least three of the Williams' two-miles field have hopes of erasing the 8:58.4 record Paavo Nurmi put in the books 12 years ago.

Lash, as he has been doing for the last two meets, will double up in the mile and two miles. The latter event will serve as the American debut of Hungary's Milklos Miklos Szabo.

Carr and John Storck, vice-president of the league, were re-elected for five-year terms.

Washington's acquisition of the Boston franchise, which was removed by George P. Marshall due to lack of support in the Hub city, was officially approved as the owners enthusiastically contemplated performances in the Nation's Capital. A consensus forecast rapid growth of the pro grid sport in the circuit's southern-most city.

Georgetown Prep Five Seeks to Upset Loyola

Georgetown Prep faces the foremost high school basketball team of Baltimore today at 3:30 p. m. at Garrett Park when it tackles Loyola Prep. The visitors are leading the Interscholastic "A" League in the neighborhood metropolis.

Although Loyola rates the choice to win, the rapidly improving Little Hoyas have been groomed for the occasion and are seeking an upset. Coach Ed Hargaden is starting his high-scoring forward. Capt. Bob O'Shaughnessy and Billy Byrd at forward; Walter Kelly, center and Tom Nurre and Ed Cummings, guards.

St. John's Uses 3 Teams To Drub Silver Spring

St. John's Cadets, about three regiments all told, marched out to Silver Spring yesterday and led by Gen. Reges, swamped the hosts, 38 to 15. All told 15 players saw action, Reges accounting for 5 more points than the host team's total.

The Johnnies led, 15 to 6, at half time, with Alvin Fincham scoring all the losers' points.

Grid League Berth Given Cleveland

Rams 10th Teams in Loop With Washington's Redskin Pros.

Transfer of Franchise From Boston to D. C. Is Approved.

By the United Press.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—The moneyed Cleveland Rams became the tenth team in the National Professional Football League today by an overwhelming vote of the nine original club owners.

Joe F. Carr, president of the league, announced the Rams would quit the American League to balance the national circuit with five teams in the East and five in the West.

"Cleveland was the ideal choice for rounding our league into ten clubs," Carr said. "We decided the size of the city, its football facilities and location made it a natural for the Western division."

Three other cities—Buffalo, Minneapolis and Boston—bid for the open position. Their applications reportedly were considered lightly by representatives of the other clubs, who had their eye on Cleveland from the start.

Club Welcomed.

President Homer Marshman represented the Rams in the negotiations. A group of prominent Cleveland business men were present to support his bid with pledges of unlimited backing.

"Cleveland is a natural rival of Chicago and Detroit," Marshman said. "We hope to make it an even tougher battle in the strong Western golf of the league."

In 1936, the pro league operated with only four clubs in the Western division—Detroit Lions, Green Bay Packers, Chicago Bears and the Chicago Cardinals. In the Eastern half were the New York Giants, Boston Redskins, Philadelphia Eagles, Brooklyn and Pittsburgh Pirates.

"Addition of the tenth club permits us finally to make up an 11-game schedule for every team," Carr said. "Every team can be in action every scheduled date under the new set-up."

Details of the new schedule were expected tomorrow. Car said tentative plans called for each club to play home and home games with every other club in its division. Three intersectional games must be scheduled.

Eastern Matmen Win School Title

With its two football stars, Bob Stang and Kirk Millar, each winning a championship, Eastern High lifted Central's inter-high wrestling championship last night when it piled up 45 points in the final night's matches at Roosevelt High. Leland High beat out Central for second place, scoring 24 points to 21 for Central.

Eastern won five individual championships; Central, three; Leland, 2, and Gordon Junior High, one. Stang decisioned Tom Marlow, of Tech, in the 155-pound class final and Millar won the 165-pound crown by throwing Charlie Garner, of Leland, in 54 seconds.

Other Eastern champions were Tom Ford in the 101-pound class; Benny Sotzsky in the 109-pound division, and Norman Abelman in the unlimited class, who threw his team-mate, Bob Kirck in 45 seconds in the final. The matches were conducted by the Roosevelt Community Center and District A. A. U.

FINAL RESULTS.

117-pound class—Tom Hofino (Gordon) threw Robert Chittenden (Powell) in 1:35. No third place.

126-pound class—Bob Cremins (Leland) threw Roy Gotses (Eastern) in 2:35. Lewis (Tech) was third.

Wilson Bows, 51-31, To Shepherd College

Running up a 21-10 lead on its host in the first half, Shepherd College last night routed Wilson Teachers on the latters' court, winning by a 51-31 score.

Wilson never had a chance with Bud Hanna, elongated Shepherd forward, shoving the ball through the hoop from all angles. Twelve field goals and three fouls represented the sum total of his efforts. Not much aid was forthcoming from his teammates, but the keen-eyed lad didn't need much.

Beard Annexes Ice-Skate Feature

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Feb. 12 (U.P.). Richard Beard, Minneapolis, won the men's senior mile race before 2,000 spectators here today in the feature event of the North American speed skating championships. He nosed out Leo Freisinger, Chicago Olympic skater, by three yards. Beard's time was 3:03.8. The world's record is 2:38.2.

Among the skaters defeated by Beard were Marvin Senson, crowned 1937 National champion last week, and Eddie Schroeder, of Chicago.

In the women's senior three-quarter mile event, Maddy Horn, Beaverdam, Wis., scored an easy victory. Dorothy Franey, Minneapolis, was second and Eleanor Thiel, Chicago, third. The time was 2:29.8.

Columbus U. Beats King Boxers

Two Knockouts Mark 5-3 Victory; Pair of Decisions Booed.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Columbus University's battling Barristers battered King College's representatives into submission last night at Turner's Arena, winning by a score of 5-3.

An audience of approximately 1,000 fans were treated to the most entertaining college match fought here this winter as every bout was a good one. There were two knockouts, one for each team.

Lanky Johnny Willis, Columbus featherweight, defeated Lou Summers in the best bout on the card. It was one of those wind-milling affairs, both men standing toe-to-toe and whaling away like a couple of Armenian rug-beaters. Two knockdowns by Willis swung the judges' ballots in his favor, but Summers, the first man to go the distance with him, was in there at the finish, swinging away.

Wilkinson Outboxed.

In another good exhibition Bobby Rawson, Columbus junior welterweight, outboxed Bill Wilkinson, best of the three feuding Wilkinson brothers, but was held to a draw. Rawson, on The Post scoresheet, had a decided edge on Bill, but the judges couldn't see it that way.

Buddy Lazear, the Barristers' blazing senior welterweight, almost put Eddie Sweet away after punishing him brutally through all three rounds, but it was called a draw because of several low blows tossed by the Columbus lad. Lazear took a couple of wicked rights to the head in the first round, but weathered them nicely, and retaliated with a blistering two-fisted attack.

Summaries.

125 pounds—Jimmy Willis (Columbus) defeated Louis Summers (Kings).
145 pounds—Bobby Rawson (Columbus) drew with Bill Wilkinson (Kings).
165 pounds—Dave Schlaifer (Columbus) knocked out Frank Barruto (Kings), in 2 minutes 35 seconds, first round.

By virtue of his new office, his former post as executive director of the tracks was abolished.

Col. Daniel E. O'Sullivan was reappointed resident manager of Churchill Downs and Russell Sweeney, resident manager of Latonia.

Officials reported all seats had been sold for the Kentucky Derby here May 8.

5 Dogs Out of 3,144 Picked To Vie for Westminster Title

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 12.—From a record entry of 3,144 dogs which started competition three days ago, 5 were picked today to battle it out for the coveted "best in show" trophy at tonight's final session of the Westminster show in Madison Square Garden.

The quintet was composed of a cocker spaniel, representing the gun dogs; a boxer, delegate from the working group; a snow-white greyhound, carrying the banner of the hounds for the second straight year; a chow chow, sent to the finals by the nonsporting division, and a tiny Pekingese from the toy dogs.

A representative of the highly regarded terrier division was to be selected at the opening of tonight's program. It was the terriers that last year sent the Sealyham, St. Margaret Magnificent of Clairedale, to the highest honors, only to have him fall before one of his own breed yesterday.

The cocker spaniel, Peter Dunne Garvan's Torohill Smoky, of Roslyn, N. Y., was favored among the five. With some 8,000 dog lovers packed around the large ring and in surrounding seats, the coal black son of Torohill Trader, exhibited a beautiful coat and fine stride as he turned back the consistent pilot of Crombie, an English setter owned by Dr. A. A. Mitten's Happy Valley Kennels, of Philadelphia. In 1935-36 Torohill Trader was best of the cockers, but did not compete this year.

Third went to Herewithem, Moscow's Ghost, a pointer owned by R. F. Maloney, of Pittsburgh, and fourth to Sally Ross' Irish setter, Knightscroft Paddy Boyne, of Madison, N. J.

The real surprise of the day was the triumph of the boxer dorian V. Marienhoff of Mazelaine, from John Wagner's Milwaukee kennels. A lightly regarded breed in the Nation's biggest canine show, the boxer scored over Ideal Weather, the old English sheep dog which Leonard Collins, of Toronto, sent down to take best of breed. Even such a veteran performer as Black Lucason, pride of Florence B. Ilch's collie string of Red Bank, N. J., could do no better than third.

White Rose of Boveway, the greyhound shown by Harry T. Peters, of Islip, N. Y., was the only repeater. The clean-cut hound which looked as if he would be more at home chasing a Western

Bowie to Halt Horse Fixing With Lights

Sponging Epidemic of Last Season Brings Electrification.

Entire Plant to Be Wired to Deter Prowlers, Robbery, Fire Risk.

The Southern Maryland Agricultural Association is taking steps, General Manager Joseph B. Boyle announced yesterday, to electrify its entire racing plant at Bowie.

A great hue and cry for electrification of all racing plants followed the epidemic of sponging last fall at Bowie.

Boyle said today that a survey is being made of the entire plant in order to determine the cost of electrification. This project would provide lighting throughout the grounds and barns.

Boyle favors lighting under the shed roofs rather than in the stalls, but lights will eventually be installed in all track rooms and rooms in which stable hands live during race meetings.

Eliminates Fire Hazard.

Proper lighting certainly would be a deterrent to night prowlers bent on mistreating horses, robbing trackrooms and doing damage. It also would eliminate a fire hazard that has existed for years.

The absence of electric light at Bowie, for example, makes necessary the use of kerosene and gas lanterns for illumination and of kerosene stoves for heat in living quarters.

Boyle said that the electrification of the Bowie plant will be completed as quickly as possible.

"It might not be practicable to undertake the entire job at one time," he said, "but we have decided to get started on it and then push on until it is completed."

Boyle also announced that a 6-foot wire fence with 2-foot arms carrying three strands of barbed wire will be placed around the entire racing strip before the Maryland season opens there on April 1.

Prison Terms in Prospect.

It will keep out of the infield and stands the objectionable persons who have been doing pretty much as they please because of easy access through the backstretch.

For several years handbooks have been operating in the backstretch. They handle bets of 25 cents, a half-dollar and a dollar and are patronized by track hangers-on and others who are denied entrance at the gates.

These books, known in racing and among the betting fraternity as "louse books," did a business last fall that was surprisingly thriving.

In addition to the lights and fences, would-be spongers may be faced with a prison sentence if they are apprehended. A bill making tampering with horses a felony in the State, is in the process of passage by the Maryland Legislature.

Jordan Balks at Pay, Bees Offer to Swap Him

Boston, Feb. 12 (AP).—Bob Quinn, president of the Boston Bees, announced today that Baxter Jordan, the Boston National club's first baseman, could make his own terms with any other club in the league, "if he can induce any club to give us a half decent infielder for him."

Jordan returned his unsigned contract, saying he was dissatisfied with its terms. He would receive the same salary he received last year.

Quinn said: "We've tried all winter to trade him.

"He has been getting a top salary for four years and has had but one good year in that time. He'll not get a dollar increase."

Braddock's Charity Program Postponed

New York, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—The Hippodrome announced today that Monday night's scheduled charity boxing show featuring Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock, has been postponed until late March to assure larger proceeds for the charity.

Faces Test at Shoreham Tonight

Stars to Swim At Shoreham Tonight

A backstroke struggle between Washington's beauteous June Booth and Philadelphia's equally beautiful Dorothy Forbes appears all set to steal the show tonight when the A. A. U. holds its annual huge winter swimming meet in the Shoreham pool.

With announcement by the A. A. U. last night that Bobby Jordan, of Washington, will probably be unable to compete against Peter Fick, the national 100-yard champion, the race involving the 16-year-old Miss Booth and Miss Forbes, Olympic team alternate, sweeps into the forefront. Jordan swam in Pittsburgh last night with the Massanutten Military Academy team and his coach expected to book a high school in the Smoky City for today.

Although the Philadelphia girl is rather heavily favored to defeat Miss Booth, the latter is fully expected to make a keen race of it. No less an authority than Eleanor Holm, queen of all women backstrokers, recently commended June on her talent when she raced in a recent exhibition swim sponsored by The Post.

Other threats besides Miss Booth whom the 18-year-old Miss Forbes must face are Margaret Russell, of Baltimore, South Atlantic champion; Ann Aronson, indoor champion of the District, and Dot Lubin and Dot Campbell, both of Philadelphia.

The presence of Fick gives Washington sports fans an opportunity to see the only man to break Johnny Weismuller's 100-yard record. The Staunton Military Academy husky will have no set-up race despite the probable absence of Jordan. Otto Schaffhauser, of Philadelphia; Charlie Ives, another Philadelphia entrant; Frank Cummings, of Baltimore are only a few of the other speedsters entered in the "100." Schaffhauser looms an especial threat on the basis of his time for the distance.

A brilliant field of 12 is entered in the national junior 150-yard backstroke championship, in which Erpie Boggs and Paul Wilson, of Washington; Dan Weiner, of Baltimore, and Dan Hogan and Wilmer Booth, of Philadelphia, shape up as the chief contenders.

Fick will make a second appearance, swimming in the 200-yard free-style grind in which Boggs will be Washington's chief hope with Cummings, of Baltimore, another serious threat. In the 100-yard girls' free-style, the Misses Forbes and Lubin, of Philadelphia, loom the favorites with Anne Bono as Washington's chief hope.

Men's high diving and 50-yard sprints for boys and girls complete the program.

AlexMcColl, Former Nat, To Pilot Jacksonville

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 12 (AP).—Bob Fisher, general manager of the Jacksonville Baseball Club of the South Atlantic League, said today Alex B. McColl has been signed as playing manager of the team.

McColl, whose home is in Geneva, Ohio, is a pitcher with years of experience in the Southern Association, the American Association and with the Cleveland Indians and the Washington Senators.

Cooper Shoots 68 to Top at Houston

By the United Press.

Houston, Tex., Feb. 12.—"Lighthorse Harry" Cooper, Chicago professional, solved putting problems on the heavy greens at River Oaks Country Club here today and shot an eagle and two birdies while scoring a 68 in the first round of the Houston open golf tournament.

Cooper slipped under par by three strokes and paced 97 other professionals and amateur golfers in the first day's play. He was two strokes in front of Byron Nelson, of Ridgewood, N. J., and four ahead of Denny Shute, of Boston, Mass., national champion.

The Chicagoan went to the turn in 36, par for the nine holes. He took more pains with his putting and found his irons working well enough to give him three fine holes. He scored a 32 on the par 35 back nine.

Nelson Out in 37.

Nelson, who established himself as a favorite with the gallery in early practice rounds, covered the first nine holes in 37 while he required a 33 on the back stretch.

Denny Shute was one over par on the out nine, but covered the trip back to the clubhouse in par for a 72 total. His score for the 18 holes was one above par.

The favorites were bunched behind the three leaders. Seven professionals had 73's—Jack Burke, of Houston, Tex., pro champion; Orville White, of St. Louis; Abe Espinosa, of Shreveport, La.; Harold McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass.; Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee-on-the-Delaware.

Ben Loving, of Richmond, Va., had a 77. Horton Smith had a 78, as did Leo Walper, of Washington, D. C., who shot 35 and 43.

Dates Are Set for 9 Va. Hunt Meets

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 12.—Dates for nine 1937 hunt meets of local interest were among those approved by the hunts committee of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association yesterday.

The Middleburg Hunt Association has been granted the dates of April 14 and November 13. The Virginia Gold Cup will be held in Warrenton May 1. The Maryland Hunt Cup is scheduled to be held in Glyndon, Md., April 24 and the Grand National point-to-point in Hereford, Md., April 17.

The Carolina Cup will be held in Camden, S. C., March 27; the Deep Run Hunt Club has been authorized for Richmond on April 3 and Montpelier Hunt for Montpelier Station, Va., has been approved for November 20. The meet of the Rolling Rock Hunt Racing Association will be held in Ligonier, Pa., October 6 and October 9.

All-University Listed at Md. Tonight

Boxers Face Rutgers, Cage Team to Engage V. M. I. in Features.

All-Inclusive Athletic Program Is Slated to Begin at 7:30.

The University of Maryland will have its annual fling at the show business tonight, staging its annual "All-University Night" program, a lengthy and colorful spectacle featuring every phase of recreational activity on the campus.

Two of the most important sports will be featured, basketball and boxing. Coach Burt Shipley's courtmen open the program at 7:30 o'clock in a game with V. M. I., and Maj. Heine Miller's mittenmen will close it a few hours later in a match with Rutgers. In between the other boys and gals will sing, dance, shoot bows and arrows and entertain the customers in divers ways.

Maryland, striving to win a berth in the annnual Southern Conference tournament, is a top-heavy favorite over the Cadets but it will be no walkaway. Under Pooley Hubert's capable direction V. M. I. has made rapid strides on the court and has developed from a slow, erratic club into a fast-breaking, clever passing outfit. Andy Treziak, the gridman who was responsible for his team's upset of Maryland in football, is the team's outstanding star.

Nedomatsky To Fight.

Reports that Ivan Nedomatsky would not be available tonight appeared to be somewhat exaggerated yesterday afternoon as the "Terrible Terp" indulged in a light workout at the end of which he was pronounced fit and ready for action. Ivan had been out a few days with an attack of influenza, but apparently he can take it in more ways than one.

Bob Walton definitely is out, however, and will be replaced by Lancelot Jacques, who is returning to the ring after a long absence because of illness. The remainder of the line-up will be the same as flattened Virginia last week, literally speaking.

Rutgers is not the "Dear Old Rutgers" of the familiar football motto when it comes to boxing, for the boys are fresh from a 7-1 win over M. I. T., in which they amassed five knockouts. Every man who climbs into the ring for the visitors carries enough dynamite to put his opponent to sleep, and with Maryland well supplied with the same blasting powder it should be a good, close meet.

Falls Church A.C. Claims RecordWith 133-38Win

The Falls Church A. C. believes it set some sort of scoring record in its basketball game at Falls Church last night with Belle Haven Cleaners of Alexandria, second-place team in the Senior League. The final score was 133-38, with Falls Church scoring 58 points in the last quarter.

The game was of standard 40-minute length. This is the fourth time this week that Falls Church has scored over 80 points, and is the second time the team has beat 100 points.

Falls Church's next opponent is Sterling Restaurant, Sunday at the Heurich gym as a preliminary game to the Brewers' game with the Brooklyn Americans. Falls Church is seeking games. Call Falls Church 434 between 5 and 7 o'clock.

Roosevelt Five Noses Out Central in 24-22 Overtime Thriller

Wilson Bows To Eastern, 42 to 21

INTERHIGH STANDINGS.

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Eastern	6	2	.750
Western	5	2	.714
Roosevelt	5	2	.714
Tech	3	3	.500
Central	2	5	.286
Wilson	0	7	.000

By John R. Vosburgh.

A little substitute named Paul Rusher, of Roosevelt High, played only one minute of last night's game against Central at Tech High, but he made it a very costly minute for Central by sinking the winning basket with 26 seconds to play to give the Rough Riders a 24-22 extra-period victory before 2,000 fans.

Roosevelt thus slipped into a virtual three-way tie for first place, for Eastern's victory in the other game of the evening was at the expense of Wilson and elevated the champs but half a game ahead of Roosevelt and Western, all three having lost two. Eastern turned back the most stubborn Wilson team of the series, 42-21, and had to keep its first-stringers in action for more than three-quarters of the contest.

The Roosevelt-Central melodrama, performed to the accompaniment of frantic Roosevelt cheering, found the teams tied at 22-22 at the finish of the regular playing time. Central had had an 8-0 lead at the end of the first period and Roosevelt had led, 21-18, with four minutes to play.

Central Fouls Hurt.

It was a long shot by Frank Bailey which had widened the count from 19-18, but Central retaliated with 4 points with two minutes and eight seconds to play, and Central led, 22-21.

Ralph Matera became the first Central hard luck boy of the evening by fouling Irving Wicklein and then Capt. Joe Comer, of Roosevelt. Wicklein missed the tying shot but Comer made his and it was 22-22 with a minute to play. With half a minute to play, Fox, the other hard luck figure, missed a set-up under the basket and the game ended with the score still played.

In the three-minute overtime period, fate refused again to smile on the burly Fox. After Bailey had saved a basket by intercepting a pass made to Capt. Billy Vermillion as he raced down the floor without a Roosevelt player in the neighborhood, Fox was fouled by Comer. It was Comer's fourth foul and he left the game.

Rusher Sinks Winning One.

Only a minute remained, Fox had two free shots to toss and missed both. Rusher had replaced Comer and quickly Roosevelt traveled down the floor, passing neatly and smoothly. The diminutive Rusher, termed by his coach, Herman Littman, "a mighty good floorman" was exactly that. He jockeyed himself away from a Central defender after taking a pass, feinted fast, and standing less than 15 feet from the basket, banked the winning shot through the mesh.

Wilson, unshaken in facing the interhigh champs, brought out its Sunday best in basketball with Bob Haycock stealing individual honors with 11 points. Wilson's 21 points were the most it has achieved in the series.

Mrs. William Macfarland, of Camden, N. J., sent her chow chow Far Sand Thundergust, to the front among the nonsporting dogs. He outpointed a large field with second going to Tweedle Dum, a dalmation from Mrs. Paul Moore's Morristown, N. J., kennels.

Sharpshooters in A. A. U. Tourney

Ready to bid for the title won last year by the George Washington freshmen, this Works Progress Administration team is already considered an outstanding contender in the unlimited class of the A. A. U. tournament opening March 1 under the auspices of The Post. Few teams can boast a more impressive line-up than Bernie Lieb, Ollie Tipton and Ollie Mayfield (sitting left to right) and Reds Scheible and Bobby Lucas, standing.

WPA to Engage Baltimore Five In Benefit

Contest at Heurich Gym Tonight Should Be One of Season's Best.

The top-flight amateur basketball game of the season here thus far is scheduled tonight at the Heurich gymnasium when District WPA, unlimited champions of the city, meet the Bloomingdale A. C., champions of Baltimore, in the feature tilt of a three-game bill for the benefit of the flood sufferers.

Strengthened by the addition of Lavelle (Dopey) Dean, Eastern's All-High forward, and late of the Georgetown Freshmen, Commissioner George Allen's team will place an All-Star cast on the floor. Such names as Bernie Lieb, of C. U.; Bill Noonan, G. W.; Sammy Hook and Reds Scheible, Eastern; Bill Mayfield, U. of Mississippi; Cliff Keyser and Ollie Tipton, of Central, and Bobby Lucas, of Roosevelt, bedeck the WPA lineup.

In the other two games, the Heurich Flashes meet the Central Y. M. C. A. in a game involving two of the fastest 115-pound class teams in the city. This game will start at 7 p. m.

At 8 p. m. the Gonzaga High junior varsity tangles with the Washington Boys Club in another hot lightweight encounter. The high school is coached by Orrel Mitchell and the Boys Club by Charlie Reynolds.

In meeting the Bloomingdale basketers, the WPA outfit faces a team which has won 26 of its 27 games this season. Former college and high school stars comprise their lineup nad include Baker, Catafio, Buckless and Tawney, of Baltimore City College; Heil Waitsman and Sergi, of Calvert Hall; Hax, Allschull and Uriock, of Baltimore Polytechnic, and Lafferty and Grossman, of Mt. St. Joseph's.

Davis Elkins Five Beats Southeastern, 36-22

Davis-Elkins' touring tossers got an even break for their two-day sojourn in Washington by knocking off Southeastern University last night, 36-22, in a fast game on the Y. M. C. A. court.

Shore's Hurt Not Serious.

A telephone message from the Rev. John Kehoe, S. J., faculty moderator of athletics at Georgetown, last night revealed that Carroll Shore's injury may not be as serious as first feared. Shore suffered a leg injury early in the Yale game Thursday night, and the bone was thought broken. A more thorough examination revealed that he merely had aggravated a previous ankle injury. He is with the team at Syracuse, but hardly will play against the Orange.

Hoya Riflemen Win.

Georgetown's varsity rifle men defeated the Postal Pistol Club team yesterday, 1,287 to 1,238, on their home range. The freshmen divided a double-header, winning over Eastern High School, 868 to 850, after bowing to Tech, 924-824.

Mad Scramble Seen for Post Cage Title

All Defending Champions Slated for Tough Fight Entries Close Feb. 24.

A strong current of basketball gossip, stirred up by the coming A. A. U. tournament, already has projected dozens of teams into the city championship picture although the tourney does not open until March 1. Chairman Winfree Johnson, of the A. A. U. basketball committee announced last night that entry blanks will be available tonight.

The blanks may be secured at The Washington Post, which again is conducting the tournament, or at the Boys Club of Washington, Police Boys Clubs, Northeast Boys Club, Merrick Boys Club, Heurich Gymnasium and Community Center points.

Officials are emphatic in pointing out that only 12 days remain in which to register both teams and players. All registration must be made by February 24 at the Washington Boys Club.

Real Scramble Seen.

Meanwhile, followers of the sport as well as players have begun speculation on the probable outcome of the tournament. All indications point toward the maddest scramble for the championship that the event has yet seen.

George Washington University's Freshmen, although expected to defend their unlimited championship, will find an even tougher field this year than the Buff and Blue yearlings of last year discovered. The Works Progress Administration, champions of the Police Boys Club tournament; Bureau of Investigation and Jewish Community ruie high in the unlimited class, all of them on a par with the freshmen.

And in the 145-pound class, the Bovello Plumbers, 1936 champions, face the uninviting task of overturning such an aggregation as the Senate Beer five, winner of the 1937 Police Boys Club event, or the D. C. Paper five, another strong outfit.

Boys Club Five Favored.

Of all the defending champions, only the Washington Boys Club in the 130-pound class appears a fair bet to hold its title. In the 115-pound class the Y. M. C. A. five is merely one of a swarm of strong teams capable of matching the 1937 A. A. U. champions, Washington Boys Club.

The 100-pound class champions, Georgetown Boys Club, scarcely face a bitter fight to win this year, having already been dislodged from their Police Boys Club tournament championship.

Colleges, high schools and prep schools appeared markedly interested in the invitation of the A. A. U. yesterday for such teams to participate in the tournament. The entrance of a number is expected.

Western High Downs Petersburg Five, 34-24

After a slow start, Western High's basketball team hit its scoring stride yesterday to win, 34-24, from Petersburg, Va., High on the Western court. The visitors took a 12 to 11 lead in the first half.

With the start of the third period, however, George Devitt, high scoring center, and Capt. Gerald Burns began finding the net consistently and the Georgetowners raced into a 23 to 18 lead in the third period.

It was Western's eleventh victory of the season out of fourteen starts. DeWitt's 12 points led the scoring, with Nelson, lively Petersburg forward, piling up 11. Eastern, Gonzaga and Roosevelt are the only schools boasting victories over Western this season.

Roesch Faces Kanner at Turner's

Punch aplenty was added to an already potent boxing card yesterday when Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn signed Max Roesch, heavyweight protege of Harry Raskin, to box Murray Kanner, Matt Twomey's amateur sensation making his professional bow, in special six-round semifinal support of Lou Gevinson and Johnny Pena Monday night.

Though defeated by Hard Rock Harden on close decision last week, Roesch exhibited qualities that argue well for his future.

Roesch supplants Tommy Vetra, Baltimore veteran, due to an attack of influenza suffered by the latter.

Impetus was added to Gevinson's bout with Pena yesterday when it was announced that Lou, in the event of victory, will be coupled with tough Jose Santos here. In the event he survives both of these shots, Lou will be in line for an open-air shot with Freddy Miller.

Pena comes to Washington credited with great showing against four world champions and at one time boasted a claim to the featherweight title himself. Johnny less than a year ago won a nontitle decision from Freddy Miller, also has defeated Fidel LaBarba (former flyweight and featherweight champion), Tommy Paul (former featherweight champion) and boxed two draws with lightning-fast Midget Wolgast (flyweight champion).

McDonogh Swim Team Bests Wilson, 52 to 23

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 12.—Annexing seven of the eight events, McDonogh School's swimming team easily defeated the Woodrow Wilson natators from Washington today, 52 to 23.

Keeler saved the visitors from being washed out completely by winning the fancy diving.

Fort Belvoir Winner.

By virture of a 39 to 35 win in the rubber game of a first place tie play-off last night on the Bolling Field court, the Fort Belvoir Engineers' basketball team will represent the Washington area in the Third Corps area championship clash with the Fort Monroe team, Southern half representative, next week.

Field of 50 to Compete Today In 3d Annual Megaw Sweeps

Close to 50 of the South's foremost pinmen will compete today in the third annual rolling of the Red Megaw Sweepstakes at the Georgetown Recreation Alleys, in the feature classic of the local duckpin card.

In honoring Megaw, the stars will pay tribute to a popular veteran who for the last decade has been one of the city's foremost stars, and who has played a huge part in the fast growth of the local duckpin game.

The classic will be rolled over a ten-game stretch, with the field being divided into two shifts. The first block is scheduled to get under way at 2:30 and the final block will start immediately thereafter.

Jack Talbert, Lucky Strike pinman of the District League, won the event last year with a total pinfall of 1,227. Astor Clarke, the city's national champion, won the inaugural the preceding year with a record score of 1,327.

Fifteen stars, representing the leading pin establishments of Baltimore, are due to furnish some keen opopsition for local entries.

Bill Krauss, youngest member of the Krauss family whose name has been prominent in local duckpin circles since the advent of the duckpin game in Washington, upheld his family tradition by taking the lead in the race for high individual average in the District League with an average of 124-23, one pin in front of Joe Harrison. Krauss smashed his way to the top of the heap at the Arcadia alleys, with a 403 set.

Heley Beyer, of the Coast Ins, shot a sterling 132 game to feature the individual efforts in the Ladies Independent League at Arcadia, aiding her team in annexing high game and set laurels with 534 and 1,544, respectively. Marjorie Smith, of Kanns, gained high individual set honors with 355.

Gallaudet Five Drubs Elizabethtown, 45-25

Gallaudet's vastly improved courtmen romped over Elizabethtown College last night at Kendall Green, winning by a score of 45-25. "Racy" Drake, Joe Burnett and Al Hoffmeister led the attack. Gallaudet was never headed although its lead was seriously threatened at times.

In a preliminary game the Gallaudet Jayvees defeated the D. C. Silents, 25-20.

"Boy! Am I all fagged out! . . . This has been one hard day"

But tomorrow morning he'll be as fresh as a daisy

HE'S plenty tired tonight. After dinner he'll relax in an easy chair and—if the radio music is soft enough—will probably fall asleep there. Certainly this evening is no time to try to sell him something. He's not in the mood for thinking about business, including the business of buying a car, renting a house, hiring a clerk or anything else you are advertising.

But tomorrow morning—why, you wouldn't know him! Alert, eager for the day's activity, ready to snap a decision at any problem brought up. NOW your ad gets immediate, interested attention. He feels like action now—while last night just any kind of mental effort was too much bother.

Prove it for yourself, by yourself. Don't you prefer to plan your day's activity in the morning—to save your evenings for relaxation? The rest of the world feels the same way—that's why the morning Post can get you more interest, more action, more results for whatever you have to advertise.

Observant Wins Hialeah Feature Race in Mud

Conte Takes 2d Money In Race

Stout Sends Gelding to Front at Start of Distance Test.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 12.—Gov. Fred P. Cone and some 10,000 other hardy souls were on hand for the Miami Jockey Club's annual charity program, which was staged under miserable weather conditions here today. Rain fell almost all afternoon and the racing strip was deep in heavy mud and water. The sixth race, called the "Governor's Purse," saw Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' 6-year-old gelding, Observant, an easy winner by three lengths. A. T. Partridge's Conte headed Star Bud for second money.

Dropping down in claiming competition after a string of reverses in better company, lasting since his winning race of last May at Belmont Park, Observant showed that he still has enough class to beat such a field, especially over a bad track. He paid his backers $13.10 for two and completed the mile and a furlong in 1:53.

Gov. and Mrs. Cone and the chief executive's party traveled from Tallahassee to be guests of President J. E. Widener and enjoy a card from which the entire proceeds and employes' salaries were to be turned over to a fund which will be distributed in worthy channels.

Hermie Roy was installed favorite in the headliner. The veteran was badly outpaced throughout the running and finished fourth in the field of six $3,500 top and $3,000 bottom platers. Jimmy Stout sent Observant into the lead in a good start and the son of On Watch, displaying something like the speed that once made him a handicap star, never was menaced. Conte and Star Bud always had the place issue between them. The photo decision showed the former entitled to the runner-up position on the wire.

Taking kindly to the heavy going, Tall Princess, a $17.80 for two proposition, eked out a hard-earned victory over 13 other maiden 2-year-olds in the three furlong opener on today's eight race charity program. Three horses finished heads apart. Genevra M., a "field" horse, was second and Barbara S. third. Tall Princess kept to a straight path and, catching Genevra M. near the finish line, scored under J. Paradise's hard urging. Highzo and Stormy Sea, both heavily backed, never could menace the leaders. The time was :35 1-5.

El Bandido, which was pulled up last time out when his rider, Charlie Kurtsinger, was struck in the eye by a clod of dirt, came back in the role of favorite and easily won the six furlong second contest. The Greenock gelding, well handled by Apprentice Barba, followed Dancing Mack's early pace closely, took charge of matters in the stretch and drew off to win by two lengths from the game closing Alanad. The latter headed Dancing Mack for the place. El Bandido returned $6.80.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's York was supposed to be a standout in the third event, for maiden 4-year-olds and upward. The colt broke last, was badly outrun early and finally made up enough ground to finish second, six lengths back. Green Melon, paying $7.20, romped into an unbeatable lead. At one time he was fully 10 lengths clear of the field. Lester Balaski had the R. S. Clark representative under double wraps and won as he pleased. York, backed down to 55 cents to a dollar, beat Red Spark by a length for secondary honors.

Under the seasoned Joe Renick, the gelding Zoic sprinted past Marinella after the first quarter mile. He opened up plenty of daylight and never faltered, reaching the finish line with three lengths to spare. His backers collected $8.70 for $2.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TALL PRINCESS, $17.80, $9.80, $5.80; GENEVRA M. (field), $14.50, $8.60; BARBARA S., $8.50.

TALL PRINCESS, showing a decided liking for the heavy going, ran straight down the center of the track and got up in closing stride. GENEVRA M., away alertly, came very fast on extreme outside and held on gamely. BARBARA S. liked the footing and ran good race. STORMY SEA, in the middle of the track, had no excuse. WATCHCASE ran a good race. HIGHZO dropped out of it early.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, nonwinners of two races since November 15. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:32. Off at 2:35½. Winner, Medway Stable's dk. b. g. (5), by Greenock—Anna Sweep. Trained by G. Alexandra. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:14.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
EL BANDIDO	(Barba)	112	9	3	2½	2[1]½	1½	1[1]	$2.40
ALANAD	(Jaekle)	106	8	6	4[3]	3[1]	2[1]	2[h]	3.75
DANCING MACK	(Porter)	113	4	2	1[1]	1[h]	2[1]½	3[h]	17.15
DURWRACK	(Cooper)	106	3	4	5[4]	5[4]	5[5]	4[2]	4.35

SISTER FAN	(South)	105	2	9	8[8]	9	9	9	24.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EL BANDIDO, $6.80, $4.20, $3.40; ALANAD, $4.90, $3.60; DANCING MACK, $6.10.

EL BANDIDO, away fast, was rated along behind pace to stretch, where he was taken a bit wide, assumed lead and won nicely in hand. ALANAD was kept out in the middle of the track in early part and closed gamely. DANCING MACK had plenty of speed, but weakened suddenly. DURWRACK came with a rush in closing furlong and would have been second in a few more strides. DIXIE PRINCESS did not like the going.

$2.00 DAILY DOBULE, FIRST AND SECOND RACES, PAID $66.90.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800. For maiden 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:04½. Winner, R. S. Clark's b. c. (4), by Whichone—Rambling II. Trained by W. J. Hirsch. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:20 1-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
GREEN MELON	(Balaski)	115	2	2	1[1]	1[1]	1[1]	1[1]*	1[h]	$2.60
YORK	(Wagner)	115	6	6	5[1]½	4½	3½	4[2]	2[1]	.55
RED SPARK	(Bierman)	110	4	5	6	6	5[1]	3½	3[2]	27.10
CANARD	(Stout)	115	1	1	2[2]	2[2]	2[2]	2½	4[2]	16.45
CLOVERPORT	(South)	115	3	4	4[1]	5[2]	6	5[2]	5[2]	13.05
WITCH WINGS	(J. Renick)	110	5	3	3[2]	3[2]	4[2]	6	6	22.15

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREEN MELON, $7.20, $2.50, $2.50; YORK, $2.30, $2.30; RED SPARK, $4.00.

GREEN MELON, showing surprising mud form, quickly ran into long lead and never was let down, winning in a romp. YORK broke slow and badly outrun from the start, was taken wide, but beat a lot of tired horses. RED SPARK slipped through on inside entering stretch, got into a contending position, then tired. CANARD had plenty of speed. WITCH WINGS stopped badly after showing some speed.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, nonwinners of two races since November 15. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:31. Off at 3:34. Winner, R. H. Heighe's br. g. (4), by Prince of Wales—Zenobia II. Trained by J. A. Boniface. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:13 3-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight

KENNER	(South)	104	7	5	8[2]	10[2]	10[2]	10[4]	137.10
LADY THIRTEEN	(Roberts)	106	3	8	11	11	11	11	86.85

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZOIC, $6.70, $5.00, $3.40; MARINELLA, $6.50, $4.20; TOUCHE, $4.70.

ZOIC, much the best, raced MARINELLA into defeat in the first half mile, then drew away, but was doing his best to win. MARINELLA dropped back entering stretch, but came again at end. TOUCHE was crowded out of it just after the start, worked her way up and finished with a rush. B. EIGHTY tired badly after showing early speed.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, nonwinners of two races since November 15. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 4:00. Off at 4:05½. Winner, Orienta Stable's ch. f. (3), by High Time—Mabel C. Trained by C. H. Knebelkamp. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:13 3-5.

CANDAR	(Barba)	98	4	5	6[1]½	7[2]	8	8	16.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH MABEL, $8.60, $4.90, $3.70; FAIR TIME, $3.90, $3.30; MILLIMETER, $4.70.

HIGH MABEL, displaying remarkable improvement over her recent effort, ran into lead soon after the start, opened wide gap and held on well. FAIR TIME moved up very fast around turn and closed gamely. MILLIMETER well up all the way. EPITAPH was on the outside and tired badly at end. TONI came from far back and was a fast-going fifth.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Governor's Purse. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:31½. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' blk. g. (6), by Watch—Sunny Sal. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:53.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
OBSERVANT	(Stout)	110	3	1	1[1]	1[1]	1[1]	1[1]	$5.55

PLAY CHANCE	(Wholey)	114	2	2	5[3]	6	6	5[3]	18.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OBSERVANT, $13.10, $7.40, $4.40; CONTE, $6.40, $3.70; STAR BUD, $3.80.

OBSERVANT, going in greatly improved form, assumed command just after the start, set fast pace in the going, was taken out to the middle of the track in stretch and easily held race safe. CONTE was hustled along from the start and made a game effort. STAR BUD attempted to follow the pace, but tired suddenly in last furlong. HERMIE ROY ran a poor race, failing to show any speed and never a factor. WISE WILL had no mishap. PLAY CHANCE lacked speed.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Abraham Lincoln. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:02. Off at 5:04. Winner, Miss A. Doris' b. or gr. g. (5), by Haste—Stephanie. Trained by H. L. Campbell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13 3-5.

†Miss A. Doris entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREAT HASTE (entry), $5.30, $2.90, $2.40; EARL PORTER, $4.00, $3.20; JUDGE LEER, $3.80.

GREAT HASTE was taken up very fast around turn, came to the inside of EARL PORTER and carried the latter out and then drew away, winning nicely in hand. EARL PORTER was running strong until he was carried out. JUDGE LEER, unable to get into his stride in early running, came with a rush in stretch and would have been second in a few more strides. RIDGE MOR finished fast. INSCONA stopped to a walk.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, nonwinners in 1937. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:32. Off at 5:34. Winner, Cosgrave Stable's ch. g. (4), by Mad Hatter—Tip Top. Trained by A. E. Alexandra. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:54 4-5.

TIME OUT — By Chet Smith

Hey, Captain, could I interest you in some bath salts?

At the Post . . .

Dear Al, Selections at Hialeah.

Nat Ray, the old-time steeplechase rider, has acquired three racers from Fred Kraft which he will convert into jumpers. Ray, himself a great steeplechase rider 20 years ago, will ship the new acquisitions—Solar Time, Saturn and Capitol Hill—to his farm in Canada, where they will be broken and schooled over the jumps and then sent to New York. Patrons of cross-country racing will recall Ray's feats astride Thomas Hitchcock's Good and Plenty which won 13 races under him and was beaten once. In this particular instance Ray was astride Walter Cleary, the horse that caused Good and Plenty's defeat. Hialeah horsemen desiring stall room on the New York tracks for the 1937 season may file their applications with Al Burlen. A new system of allotting stables is placed in effect this year by the Jockey Club to avoid duplications at the various tracks. There is a rumor that the Australian gate will not be used at the spring meeting at Tropical Park. Horsemen who intend to race in the West this year have always been opposed to the gate for the simple reason that it means two methods of schooling and starting young horses. Horsemen have no real objection to the gate if it is used at all tracks, but to school juveniles to break from it here when they may never see it again causes all sort of trouble. BILL.

First race—Wise Bun surprised with a victory last out and likes the off going. Needs only to run back to that race to score here. Scotch Queen is a mud runner. She has been disappointing of late, but must be considered. Ucanmakit is a possible surprise at the weights.

Second race—Berry Patch may upset the field in this event. Gets in with featherweight and promises to do a lot of running. Gallic and Sockdologer will be ready to battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Third race—Stubbs gets my call over the Denemark entry of Grand Duke and Chief Cherokee. The first named seems capable of carrying the top weight to a win. Solent Shot is a threat in the mud.

Fourth race—Scarce may be a surprise winner of this event. Last out this one was in all kinds of trouble before finishing second. Yes Siree will draw much backing, but is not a bargain from the rail position in a large field. The Denemark entry of Radio Charm and Busse Trumpet is dangerous.

Fifth race—Bernard F. will like the off track and may take the measure of the well-liked Log. Grey Shot gets in action with very light weight and may have to be dealt with.

Sixth race—Saintlite ran as if he could stay on top all night in that last outing. Prefers mud and may stick it out for the necessary 2 miles. Sandwrack is dangerous even with Catrone up. Good Visibility for the show.

Best bet—Watch Him.

Wilder Chosen To Lead State Theater Group

Norfolk Man Elected at Midwinter Session of Virginia Owners.

By the Associated Press.

Other officers elected by the organization yesterday were Charles A. Somma, Richmond, vice president; Harold Wood, Richmond, secretary, and Sam Bendheim, jr., Richmond, treasurer.

Col. Robert T. Barton, jr., counsel for the organization, urged the theater owners to seek "county laws to impose fees on circuses and carnivals."

Warns Against Delay.

Col. Barton said a recent act of the General Assembly empowered the local boards of supervisors to pass such laws regulating circuses and carnivals. He warned against delay.

Morton G. Thalhimer, retiring president, praised the exhibitors for avoiding "unfair, cut-rate competition, premiums, give-aways, bank nights, lotteries and double-feature programs."

Thalhimer estimated the motion-picture industry in the State represented an investment of about $20,000,000 and employing about 2,500 persons.

Directors Elected.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club presents Willa Semple, pianist; Charles Trowbridge Tittmann, basso (Lucy Brickenstein, accompanist), and Lela Burt, violinist (Edith Marshall, acompanist), in Barker Hall.

A poll of yesterday's auditors at the weekly concert of the Friday Morning Music Club would probably have shown agreement that the program reached its apex of interest in Mr. Tittmann's sonorous singing of the five ballades by Johann Karl Gottlieb Loewe. He not only invested them with a pomp of tone comporting with their dignity, but invigorated them as well with dramatic fervor. Miss Brickenstein's collaboration at the piano had just the right touch of romanticism.

Outmoded as Loewe's ballades are in style, their general neglect is unjustified. They are perfect examples of a vogue, and as such deserves preservation. Their homely lyricism and their poetic sincerity represent the taste of a generation that delighted in narrative song, in the tales of faery, in the distress of heroines and the sorrows of Werther. Though museum pieces, they have an archaic charm that keeps them fresh.

Conforming to the club policy, which has sought something unhackneyed for every program this season, Miss Semple revived the noble C minor fantasia of Mozart, the most imaginative and expansive of his works for solo piano. In comparison with the torrential pianism of the ninteenth century, it sounds like the murmur of a brook, but its very simplicity disguises the depth of its pellucid meaning.

In her group of pieces for violin, Lela Burt brought forward two that had the sheen of comparative novelty: Albert Stoessel's transcription of "Amoranza" by Granados and Johan Halvorsen's plaintive "Chant de Vaslemoy."

Joint recital by Minna Niemann, pianist, and Helen Howison, soprano (George Wilson, accompanist), in the Sulgrave Club Friday afternoon.

For her share of this enjoyable program, Miss Niemann contributed numbers both new and old. To offset the familiarity of the selections from Bach, Chopin, Brahms and Liszt, she offered the scintillant variations by Paderevski, the seldom-heard gavotte and musette by Eugen d'Albert, Walter Niemann's "Venetian Gardens" shimmering with Debussyan reflections, and the atmospheric "Il Neige" by Henrique Oswald.

Fluent as was her technical facility, one had the impression that she was not doing herself justice on this occasion. There were weak passages in the Chopin fantasia and the Liszt etude, and a haste that was not always conducive to clarity. In the two Brahms numbers, however, and in the pieces by Niemann and Oswald, her tone-coloring was well controlled and her descriptive evocations held charm.

Miss Howison was a little tentative in her first group, withholding her voice as though testing its quality. This was not amiss in the reading of songs which called for delicacy and tenuous phrasing. In the bell song from "Lakme" the vocal line soared freely in argentine fioriture, and showed a flexible mobility.

Her voice is clear and fresh, and she uses it with justness of attack and an admirable surety of intonation. She has a nice sense of style, and a lyric persuasiveness in dulcet shadings. Her last group, in which Thomas Morley led the way, was particularly charming in the sensitivity of the readings.

Man Swindled, Slain, Wife in Texas Charges

Dallas, Tex., Feb. 12 (AP).—Mrs. James McDowell told police today she thought her 65-year-old husband, missing three weeks, had been slain by four men who, she said, swindled him out of between $10,000 and $25,000 in an alleged deal to sell oil to the Italian government during the Ethiopian conflict.

She said the men might have killed McDowell, a cotton buyer, to avoid prosecution on a swindling charge.

Animal Rescue Units Get Part Of Big Estate

2 D.C. Groups Bequeathed Share in $100,000 of L. C. Probert.

The Central Union Mission Farm and the Animal Rescue League, of Washington, are among agencies to receive aid from the estate of L. C. Probert, vice president of the Chesapeake & Ohio and other railroads, it was revealed yesterday with the filing of the will in Orphans' Court at Rockville, Md.

The estate of the railroad man, who died in Los Angeles February 12, is valued at between $100,000 and $125,000, of which $60,000 was in life insurance and the remainder in real estate and personal property, included his 200-acre estate, Homeland Farms, near Olney, Md.

Cash Bequests Made.

The will bequeaths $5,000 each to Harriet Butler, of Lakewood, N. Y., and Anna Evans Reik, of Washington; and $1,000 each to George Roland Langlois, Walter S. Jackson, Glenn W. Benson, Ethel Stocks, Genna Stocks and Lillie Stocks—the last four employes at Homeland Farms. Francis Miller, of the Sandy Spring Bank, was named executor.

The will, which directed that his estate be sold within a year, assigned all farm implements, including machinery, wagons, tools and harness to the Central Union Mission farm in Howard County (Md.) "as a bequest from my deceased wife and me."

The residue was left in trust to be divided in four equal funds, the Adelaide R. Probert church fund, the Adelaide R. Probert humanity fund, the Adelaide R. Probert fund for the Washington Animal Rescue League, and the Adelaide R. Probert fund for the Maryland-Virginia Animal Rescue League.

Church Gets Part.

Sums from the church fund will go to the rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Olney, for upkeep of the Adelaide R. Probert Memorial Organ, of the rectory, to supplement the salary of the rector "to such an extent as is necessary to permit him to live as befitting his calling and station," etc.

From the humanity fund sums are to be paid from time to time to defray costs of medical care and attention for the comfort of persons who are unable to obtain such care otherwise.

The two animal rescue funds will furnish money to relieve specific cases of suffering among animals and to defray cost of operation of the leagues.

Watch out for funny signs, send them to Ray Barnes, in care of this newspaper, and share your laughs.

House to Invite Citizens' Views On D.C. Budget

Opinions of Prominent Business, Professional Men to Be Asked.

Prominent business and professional men of Washington will be invited to appear before the House subcommittee on District appropriations next Tuesday, Chairman Collins announced last night at the conclusion of another day's hearing of department heads.

Collins explained that he wants the opinions of leading business and professional men who have no personal axes to grind.

The Tuesday conference will be strictly "off the record," even the official stenographer being barred so that the discussion will not appear in the printed hearings.

Bank Heads Invited.

Among those who will be invited are Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank; Dr. Sterling Grimm, former president of the District Medical Society, and William Montgomery, president of the Acacia Life Insurance Co.

The list is not yet complete, however, and several other prominent persons are to be included, Collins said.

It is expected that the discussion will go into the broad questions of District fiscal policies, taxes, and related subjects rather than be confined to details of the pending District budget.

"Open House" Scheduled.

The annual "open house" for spokesmen of civic and trade organizations is scheduled for next Thursday. The usual invitation will be extended to all citizens associations.

Hearings will be resumed this morning with Capt. H. C. Whitehurst director of highways, as the principal witness. While requested street items will be the principal matter before the sub-committee, Whitehurst probably will be called upon to explain his recent long-range street building program.

School estimates will be considered on Monday and the library budget on Wednesday.

Night Riders Difficult To Trace, Says Solicitor

Wilmington, N. C., Feb. 12 (AP).—Solicitor John J. Burney said today serious obstacles stood in the way of running down members of a masked band of nightriders blamed for several floggings in this part of North Carolina and across the line in South Carolina in recent months.

Only one of the reported lash victims, the solicitor asserted, professed himself able to identify any of his assailants. Will Inman, who said he was flogged by a group that afterward joined in a prayer service over his prostrate form, was quoted by Burney as being "willing to swear" he could name one of the men in the group, but only by recognition of his voice in a whispered conversation.

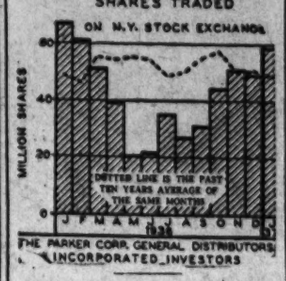
Stock Trading Shows Speculative Demand



Boston, Mass., Feb. 12.—Although fewer shares were traded on the New York Stock Exchange in January than in January, 1936, the total was the largest for any month since February, 1936, reaching a daily average of 2,347,000 shares. February activity is running even higher than this. The low-priced shares are now in greater demand, thus indicating a more speculative participation in the market.

Cotton Is Steady In Narrow Range

New Orleans, Feb. 12 (AP).—Prices held in a narrow range in late trading on the New Orleans Cotton Market today, with old crop months 1 to 2 points lower.

Freight Traffic Continues Gain Over Year Ago

Total of 675,026 Cars Is 8.6 Per Cent Above 1936 Record.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended February 6 totaled 675,026 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 53,340 cars or 8.6 per cent above the corresponding week in 1936 and an increase of 83,699 cars or 14.2 per cent above the corresponding week in 1935. Loading of revenue freight for the week of February 6 was an increase of 15,236 cars or 2.3 per cent above the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading for the week ended February 6, totaled 265,817 cars, a decrease of 2,120 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 59,702 cars above the corresponding week in 1936, and 55,427 cars above the corresponding week in 1935.

Coal loading amounted to 157,420 cars, an increase of 14,658 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 30,874 cars below the corresponding week in 1936. It was, however, an increase of 6,699 cars above the same week in 1935.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 28,914 cars, a decrease of 1,291 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 390 cars above the corresponding week in 1936, and 3,697 cars above the same week in 1935. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended February 6, totaled 18,020 cars, a decrease of 1,601 cars above the preceding week but an increase of 1,279 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Livestock loading amounted to 10,765 cars, a decrease of 1,754 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 335 cars above the same week in 1936. This was, however, a decrease of 1,606 cars below the same week in 1935. In the Western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week ended February 6, totaled 7,894 cars, a decrease of 1,533 cars below the preceding week but an increase of 425 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Ore loading amounted to 9,372 cars, a decrease of 1,093 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 3,996 cars above the corresponding week in 1936 and 6,227 cars above the corresponding week in 1935.

All districts reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight, compared with the corresponding week in 1936 except the Pocahontas which reported a decrease. All districts, however, reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1935.

Security Offerings Increase in Week

New York, Feb. 12 (AP).—Comparatively steady demand for securities paved the way for a sharp increase in new issues in the week ended February 11, investment circles said today.

Offerings of utility securities swelled heavily, mainly owing to a flotation of $75,000,000 Northern States Power Co. 3½ per cent mortgage bonds and 275,000 shares of stock.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 12.—A good recovery took place in the stock market today with steels, irons and oil shares in good demand. Gilt-edged securities were weak during the early trading but a gradual recovery took place later. Profit-taking caused prices to move irregularly near the close. United States steel finished about 3½ points higher at $1.12½, and General Motors was quoted at $72¼.

Paris—Recovery in Wall Street following the settlement of the General Motors strike was reflected in the bourse today. Quotations recorded a general advance following mixed movements during the previous part of the week. Rentes firmed after early weakness and chemical shares moved higher. The closing tone was steady.

Liverpool—Wheat futures closed unchanged to ¼d higher, the market reacting on discouraging Argentine cables and poor local demand. Germany was reported as having made heavy overnight purchases. Cotton futures finished 1 to 4 points higher, light Bombay selling being offset by trade callins at the close.

Chicago Livestock.

Reich to Control Bank and Railways

Berlin, Feb. 12 (AP).—The Third Reich formally promulgated today a law to carry out Adolf Hitler's January 30 announcement that Germany would assume full federal jurisdiction over the Reichsbank and German Railways. The Reichsbank directorate will be responsible directly to Hitler and will be independent of all ministries. It will continue its co-operation with the Bank of International Settlements, but on a voluntary basis—not, as hitherto, a compulsory one. The federal railways will be under the ministry of transportation. All railroad property was declared state property.

A. F. G. E. Unit Refuses Plea of Ousted Lodges

The five American Federation of Government Employes lodges which were dropped from the national organization by the Detroit convention last year, were denied a petition for reinstatement yesterday by the national executive council of the A. F. G. E. The council ruled also that the District of Columbia department of the organization was "clearly within its rights" in declining a seat to Lucien Koch, a delegate from Labor Lodge, No. 12.

The decisions were made in executive session by the council, here for two and possibly three-day meeting. Regarding Koch, once associated with Commonwealth College, Mena, Ark., the council said simply and without later amplification: "It is the decision of the executive council, after careful deliberation, that the District of Columbia department was clearly within its rights when it determined who shall be seated as a delegate of that body." In declining Koch a seat by majority vote, the District department did not consider charges against him.

List of Ousted Lodges.

The five lodges ousted by the Detroit convention were: Social Security Board Union, Farm Credit Administration Employes Union, Securities and Exchange Commission Union, Railroad Retirement Board Lodge and Public Assistance Division Lodge.

The five lodges' committee for reaffiliation issued the following statement last night:

"The arbitrary action of the executive council in rejecting our application is difficult to understand and impossible to justify. We were denied a hearing by the executive council last September when our certificates were revoked, and here again our application for reaffiliation has been rejected without an opportunity to present our case. Neither then nor now were specific charges preferred against our lodges. In taking this action, the executive council has violated the democratic principles of the American labor movement and the aims and purposes of trade unionism.

Green to Intercede.

"Last week William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, upon the basis of oral and written statements of our case, promised our committee that he would personally urge the members of the council to grant charters to our lodges. We hope that the wiser counsel of President Green will prevail and the plea of our lodges for unity of Government employes in the face of common problems will lead the executive council to reverse its decision.

"The committee for reaffiliation will appear at the Hamilton Hotel tomorrow to insist upon a hearing before the council. Unless yesterday's decision is reversed, an immediate appeal will be filed with the American Federation of Labor."

Yesterday morning the council, whose members came from far apart places of the country, voiced support of Representative Ramspeck's bill to extend the merit system to all Government agencies. The council, headed by Col. Charles I. Stengle, president, A. F. G. E., appeared before the House Civil Service Committee.

Santa Fe, N. Mex., Feb. 12 (AP).—The New Mexico House approved, 40 to 0, today a resolution urging Congress to enact legislation conforming with President Roosevelt's judiciary reform proposals.

Way Sought to Preserve Flag That TrippedBooth

By the Associated Press.

An Illinois Representative asked a House committee yesterday to find means of preserving the flag in which J. Wikes Booth caught his spur when he leaped from a theater box after shooting Abraham Lincoln.

Representative Church introduced a resolution asking the House Library Committee to seek a method of saving the flag, now stored in the Treasury Department.

8 Washington Naval Officers Get Promotion

Omar Conger, A. H. Mayo Will Be Elevated to Captains.

President Roosevelt yesterday recommended advancements for 18 naval officers in the Supply Corps, including Commanders Arthur H. Mayo and Omar D. Conger, both of Washington, who will be promoted to captains.

The recommendations were made by a Supply Corps selection board which convened February 2 under the presidency of Capt. Trevor W. Leutze. They were signed yesterday by Secretary Swanson and the President.

Among the 16 lieutenant commanders recommended for advancement to commanders are six officers from Washington: David P. Polatty, stationed at the Navy Department with the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts; Carlton R. Eagle, on duty with Procurement Division of the Treasury; Wilson S. Hullfish, born here and now on duty at the Navy Department; Percy C. Corning, born in Washington and now stationed at Charleston, S. C.; Frank C. Durham, at the Army Industrial College, here; Ray C. Sanders, on duty at the Navy Department.

Commander Conger was born in Washington and appointed to the Supply Corps by President Theodore Roosevelt. Preceding the World War he was Officer in Charge of the Navy Pay Officers School here, and went with the First Naval Aeronautical Detachment to France during the war. He is now on duty as Supply Officer of the Naval Air Station, San Diego, Calif.

Commander Arthur H. Mayo, stationed with the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts in the Navy Department, was appointed to the Supply Corps by President Taft. During the World War he was supply officer of the battleship Nebraska, and was specially commended by Secretary of State for his work during the second Pan-American financial conference in 1920. His official home is in New Orleans.

Other lieutenant commanders selected for advancement to commanders include: Charles H. Harter, U. S. S. Yorktown; Robert O'Hagan, U. S. S. New Mexico; Charles C. Timmons, U. S. S. Wright; Robert L. Mabon, Philadelphia; William C. Wallade, U. S. S. Colorado; Thomas A. Durham, U. S S.. Dobbin; William A. Best, Puget Sound, Wash.; Walter A. Buck, Pearl Harbor, T. H.; Thomas E. Hipp, Philadelphia; James D. Boyle, U. S. S. Saratoga.

Bankruptcy Notices

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia, holding a Bankruptcy Court. In the matter of John O. Hite, 17 Massachusetts avenue northwest, Washington, D. C., bankrupt. In Bankruptcy No. 3453. To the creditors of the above-named bankrupt, John O. Hite, of the City of Washington, District of Columbia: Notice is hereby given that on the 9th day of February, 1937, the said John O. Hite was duly adjudicated bankrupt, and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at my office in the Investment Building, Fifteenth and K streets northwest, Washington, D. C., on the 24TH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1937, at 10 o'clock a. m., at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims (claims shall not be proved against the bankrupt estate subsequent to six months after the adjudication as stated above), appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting. FRED J. EDEN, Referee in Bankruptcy.

France Rushes New Defenses Against Reich

Maginot Line Is Extended Along Belgian Frontier and in Juras.

By the United Press.

Paris, Feb. 12.—The government, taking no chances on Germany respecting Belgian or Swiss neutrality, is rushing to completion what it hopes will be an impregnable defense line along the eastern and northern borders, from the Alps to the sea.

The famous Maginot line of steel and concrete, of powerful defense batteries and veritable armed underground villages concealed by the peaceful fields and woods of Alsace-Lorraine, is no longer considered adequate.

Gangs of specialized workmen already have started extension of the line south from Belfort to cover the so-called Belfort gap and every possible road against invasion through the low Jura Mountains. In the north the government is rapidly covering every inch of the Franco-Belgian frontier from Luxembourg to Dunkirk, although Belgium already has fortified her borders by what would be France's first line defenses in the north in case of invasion.

Extends Along Rhine.

The original Maginot line, which now not only is completed, but is backed up solidly by secondary defenses, extends along the Rhine just above the Swiss frontier, a few miles east of Belfort to Lauterbourg with Strasbourg and Mutzig the principal strongholds.

It includes every conceivable kind of defense. Parts of the countryside are dotted with pillboxes. Underground railways run between some of the larger ones and they have every piece of equipment known to modern war science.

From the juncture of the Rhine and Lauter rivers at Lauterbourg, the line turns west along the German frontier below the Saar district. There is a 30-mile gap across the Moselle Valley, between Bitche and Boulay, which is not protected by mechanical defenses.

Can Be Flooded.

The region is full of small lakes and it probably is as strong as the fortified regions because the government has worked out a system whereby it can be flooded on short notice.

Other forts extend beyond Thionville, behind Luxembourg. That section includes the fortified centers of Metz, Thionville, Verdun, Toul and Nancy, forming one large triangular fortress, protecting the rich Briey iron basin.

The present system extends as far as Givet, where it joins the Belgian fortifications northwest to the Atlantic. The task now is to extend France's own line west along the frontier to Dunkirk, passing through Maubeuge and Valenciennes.

HOLC Clarifies Foreclosure Data

Published reports that the Home Owners Loan Corporation plans to foreclose on 160,000 homes on which it has made loans carry "a misleading implication," the corporation said in a statement last night.

It pointed out the corporation is required to submit a budget for the next fiscal year and that the figure 160,000 submitted to the House Appropriations Committee was arrived at "as its careful estimate of what future probabilities is based on its experience in the past, the statement said, adding that "authorization does not necessarily mean final foreclosure," as satisfactory adjustments often are made. In addition, the HOLC said, almost half of the 160,000 possible foreclosures, or around 70,000, already have been authorized so the number of probable new foreclosure authorizations would be between 80,000 or 90,000, rather than 160,000.

"Even this 160,000 foreclosure figure loses its significance," the HOLC said, "beside the total of more than 1,000,000 loans made by the corporation."

'Mae West' of China Wins Fight for Love

Shanghai (Saturday), Feb. 13 (U.P.).—An advertisement in the newspapers today informed Miss White Jade Frost—"the Mae West of China" who has been missing since February 6—that if she would come home all would be forgiven and she could marry the man she loves.

Her foster mother placed the advertisement. It was believed the star left home after a quarrel over her marriage plans. Two years ago she was asked to leave Nanking because of the alleged immorality of her plays.

Gov. Murphy of N. H. Hits G.O.P. Leadership

Boston, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—The Republican Party "has too long represented the favored classes," declared Gov. Francis P. Murphy (Republican), New Hampshire, tonight, urging in a Lincoln Day address that "we must do something for the people or forget the party."

The stocky manufacturer and executive told about 500 members of the Middlesex Republican Club that he had "nothing but criticism for the leadership of the Republican Party."

Mrs. Simpson's 'Aunt Bessie' Returns; Silent on Romance

Copyright by the Associated Press.

Silent on the affairs of her niece, Mrs. D. Buchan Merryman, aunt of Mrs. Wallis Simpson, the Duke of Windsor's fiancee, is shown as she left the S. S. Conte de Savoia at New York, en route to her Washington home.

Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, Confidant of Woman Who Rocked British Empire, Is Back at Her R Street Home.

Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman—Wallis Simpson's famous "Aunt Bessie"—returned from Europe to her home in Washington yesterday, but not one word would she say about the romance that rocked the British Empire.

Nobody had a better close-up of the thrilling drama in which King Edward VIII gave up his throne for the love of Mrs. Simpson. In fact, it might be said that Mrs. Merryman headed the supporting cast. She acted as chaperone for her glamorous niece throughout the tumultous period that began shortly after the Simpson divorce trial reached a climax when Mrs. Simpson fled to France and Edward abdicated.

But of none of this would she talk yesterday as she came back to her apartment at 1911 R street northwest.

Acted as Chaprone.

Mrs. Merryman, for whom Mrs. Simpson, called "Bessie" in her pigtail days, was named always has been the latter's favorite aunt. In 1933, she accompanied Mrs. Simpson to Europe and acted as her chaperone.

Last October, following the divorce hearing at Epswich, Mrs. Simpson called Mrs. Merryman, asking that she join her. By this time, The Washington Post had reported flatly that King Edward was determined to marry Mrs. Simpson "at any cost," the first newspaper in the world to make such an announcement.

At first it was reported that Mrs. Simpton and Mrs. Merryman would go to Bermuda, there to await the final divorce decree.

Height of Dispute.

By this time King Edward and Prime Minister Baldwin were at the height of their tug-of-war over whether the monarch was to marry Mrs. Simpson. Occasionally Mrs. Merryman accompanied Mrs. Simpson to Fort Belvedere, the King's country estate in Surrey. There occurred the momentous conversations that preceded the abdication.

After Mrs. Simpson left for France, Mrs. Merryman stayed on at Cumberland Terrace, guarded by five officers from Scotland Yard.

A gray-haired woman of pleasant mien, Mrs. Merryman arrived in New York Thursday on the Italian liner Conte di Savoia. She had two trunks and some hand baggage.

Whether she will attend the wedding of the Duke of Windsor and her niece, she would not say. In fact, she wouldn't say anything.

Mrs. H. N. Harris Funeral Rites Held

Funeral services for Mrs. Harriet Newmyer Harris, mother of Mrs. Sigmund Romberg, wife of the noted American composer, were held yesterday at Gawler's undertaking establishment, 1756 Pennsylvania avenue, with Dr. Abram Simon, of Washington Hebrew Congregation, officiating. Burial was in Washington Hebrew Congregation Cemetery.

Mrs. Harris, who was 81 years old, died Wednesday while visiting in Deal, N. J. Born in Lockhaven, Pa., she had lived most of her life in Washington. She was the widow of Reuben Harris, founder of R. Harris & Co. jewelry firm.

Surviving, besides Mrs. Romberg, who lives in New York City, are three other daughters, Mrs. Philip King, of Washington; Mrs. Edmund Rhodes, of New York City, and Mrs. Maurice Bandler, of Deal, N. J. She also leaves two grandsons.

Broad Revision Of Farm Tenant Bill Predicted

Redrafting Seen to Include Larger Number of Needy Agriculturists.

By Russell Smith.

Revision of the Jones-Bankhead farm tenant bill to embrace a greater proportion of economically submerged farmers was predicted by members of the House Agriculture Committee yesterday as a sequel to currency given the report of the President's Commission on Farm Tenancy.

The commission finished its work Thursday preparatory to submission of the report to the President, who said yesterday he will draft a message over the week-end to accompany the report when it is forwarded to Congress, probably within the next few days.

The House committee will hear Secretary Wallace, Tuesday, probably call members of the President's commission and then draft a bill which, the members of the committee strongly indicated last night will conform much more closely to the commission's proposals than does the pending measure.

Under the proposals of the commission, as they were outlined in a New York Times dispatch accepted by officials here as authoritative, a Farm Security Administration would be established which would absorb the Resettlement Administration. The new agency would be empowered to embark upon a land-purchase and tenant-aid program reaching far into the future.

The commission also proposed establishment of a Farm Security Corporation to act as the business and legal instrument of the Administration, a "windfall tax" so high as to make resale of land prohibitive within three years after its purchase, a system of State legislation to dovetail with the Federal plans, retirement of 95,000,000 to 100,000,000 acres of submarginal land and a system of long-term leases to those tenants who prove incapacity to become owners.

Leases to tenants unfitted for ownership would be achieved through the Federal corporation.

Airline Pilots Search For Cattle Rustlers

Cheyenne, Wyo., Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Transcontinental airline pilots scouted Wyoming plains for cattle thieves today, latest in the modern range war against rustlers.

Under an agreement between the Wyoming Stock Growers Association and an airline, crews of speedy transport planes racing daily above the Wyoming cattle country will report by short wave radio to Cheyenne headquarters all movements of cattle.

Any movement not authorized or involving suspicious actions by the movers will be investigated.

Scientist Testifies In Trooper's Trial

Somerset, Pa., Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti piled testimony of scientific crime detection today on top of five physicians' statements to buttress his claim Frank C. Monaghan was "beaten to death."

Dr. C. W. Muehlberger, toxicologist of Northwestern University's crime detection laboratory, testified hairs had been pulled "by the roots" from the head and chest of the 64-year-old hotel operator.

The State contends Monaghan died during a "third degree" questioning in the Fayette County bertillon room about the stabbing of a county detective last September 11. State Trooper Stacey Gunderman, 25, went on trial Monday as the first of seven Uniontown peace officers charged with the "dark ages" slaying of Monaghan.

C. of C. Disfavor Hinted.

Wichita, Kans., Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Harper Sibley, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, told the Wichita chamber today that while the national body has taken no action on President Roosevelt's judicial reform proposals it previously had "opposed every attempt toward depriving the United States Supreme Court of its functions."

Scout Troops Given Plaques For Displays

Window Exhibit Contest Winners Announced by Judges.

Winners in competitive displays of the various phases of scoutcraft, held in connection with a celebration of the twenty-seventh anniversary of the founding of the Boy Scouts of America, were announced yesterday.

The displays, which were mounted in the windows of local business offices, were divided into two classes, and plaques were presented to the troop which presented the best display. The winner of the general exhibit was Troop 5, led by Scoutmaster John H. Bayless, 3411 Wisconsin avenue northwest. The troop's exhibit of scouting activity was on display at the University Hardware Store, 3302 Wisconsin avenue northwest. Honorable mention in the same class went to a display of Troop 666 at the Knife and Fork Sandwich Shop, 4855 Massachussetts avenue northwest. Horace L. Guiney, 4304 Thirty-seventh street northwest, is leader of Troop 666.

The Scout Commissioner's Award for the best display of camping went to Troop 15, which placed artificial campfires of all types in the window of the real estate office of Cyrus Keiser, jr. Robert Leban of 1628 Twenty-first street northwest, is leader of this troop. Honorable mention was won by Troop 123 of Falls Church, Va., for its display in the window of Brown's Hardware Co., at Lee highway and Broad street. Frank A. Carpenter is scoutmaster of this troop.

Judges of the contest were Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Superintendent of Police; Harvey A. Gordon, National Camp Engineer, Boy Scouts of America, and Capt. Will J. Weber, Division Commander of the Washington Boy Scouts. Fifteen displays were entered, while other troops had window displays which were not entered because of assistance by professional window decorators.

Dr. Thompkins Extols Lincoln and Douglass

Dr. William J. Thompkins, recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia, was guest speaker last night at a Lincoln-Douglass celebration held at Frelinghuysen University. He extolled the great emancipator, and outlined the methods by which the close association of Frederick Douglass with him produced the setting for emancipation of slaves in America.

A one-act playlet, "The Depths From Which," was presented by Haley G. Douglass. Other speakers were Elizabeth Wilson, Wiley J. Miller, Dr. Daniel E. Wiseman and the Rev. Samuel A. Brown. Dr. Anna J. Cooper presided.

Tigers Claw Trainer.

Paris, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—A horrified audience at the Cirque d'Hiver (winter circus) today saw three tigers claw Trainer Woytech Trubka while he was putting seven of the animals through their act. Trubka, a Czechoslovakian, fought off the beasts, finished the act and went to hospital to have nine wounds treated.

WPA Is Expanded For Flood Relief

Chicago, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Broad expansion of WPA work to repair flood damage in nine States was ordered by Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins in a conference with State administrators here today.

"We are taking the lid off," Hopkins announced. He said WPA pay rolls would be increased by 50,000 workers this month, with most of them assigned to flood-rehabilitation projects.

The Works Progress Administration now has 150,000 men at work in the Ohio and Mississippi Valley flood zones, he said.

"It looks now like the cleanup work will take longer than we expected," Hopkins said in a press conference which followed his meeting with the administrators.
